

TWO-THIRDS OF TEACHERS ARE NOW PAID PROMPTLY

Important Data Contained in Report Prepared for Governor Brown by Secretary Hardy Ulm.

BORROW TWO MILLION OUTSIDE MONEY YEARLY

Counties Must Make Loans at Big Interest Charges to Settle School Bills When Due.

Of the 13,000 teachers in the public schools of the state, two-thirds, or about 8,000 are paid promptly, but at big expense to their counties in interest on loans.

$2,000,000 Borrowed Annually. Mr. Ulm finds that the outside capital needed in financing the public schools during the year 1912 reached the alarming sum of two million dollars.

In order that he might obtain more exact data on the subject of the payment of teachers than had hitherto been available, Governor Brown, some months ago, requested Mr. Ulm to make an investigation of the subject and to prepare a report thereon.

The County Systems. "Out of 139 county systems reporting, the superintendents of seventy-nine state that their teachers were paid promptly, that is within ten to thirty days after the close of each school month.

hopeful sign shown by statements of other counties that they have such balances on their accounts.

"I find, as nearly as I can estimate from the figures before me, that for the state as a whole, the money used in making prompt payments was derived from the following sources: From the state, 35 per cent; from temporary loans, 61.75 per cent; other sources, 3.25 per cent.

Local Taxes in Twenty-three Counties. "But only twenty-three counties report affirmatively that local taxes were levied—so, no doubt, some have confused the operations of special school districts with those of the county as a whole.

Summary as to County Systems. "Number of teachers in counties which report no prompt payments, 1,842; number of teachers in counties which report prompt payments, 1,947; number of teachers in counties which report full prompt payments, 5,183; total number of teachers reported on, 9,972; number of teachers reported as paid wholly or partly in script, or who discounted claims, 3,786; total of sums borrowed by county boards reporting, $1,451,049.55; average of rates of interest paid by boards, 7.29 per cent; total of sums paid out in interest by boards, $84,935.97.

Loans Run From Three to Twelve Months. "Average delay in counties making no prompt payments (approximated) three months and four days. Average delay in counties making prompt payments were made by counties which did not pay promptly throughout year, one-half of term or about three months.

Special School Districts and Systems. "From the reports it may be safely estimated that in more than 90 per cent of such districts teachers were paid promptly either by means of accumulated balances, local taxes or loans. Even in those counties where the teachers at large had to wait for

HITCHCOCK FAKED TO SHOW SURPLUS IN POSTAL SERVICE

Official Report to Burluson Charges His Predecessor With Having Demoralized the Mail Service.

HITCHCOCK "ECONOMY" PROVEN A GREAT SHAM

Improper System of Book-keeping Maintained in Order to Enable the "Surplus" to Be Shown.

Washington, May 31.—(Special)—Frank Hitchcock, former postmaster general, was today charged in an official report submitted to Postmaster General Burluson with having misrepresented conditions in the postal service, as to the existence of a surplus with having disrupted the service made misleading reports as to the department's financial condition with held promotions and allowed vacancies to go unfilled in order to bolster up his pretensions to economy.

An improper system of bookkeeping was maintained to enable the surplus showing to be made.

The much-boasted surplus of the Hitchcock administration was accomplished by "cheat" means while the United States mails were demoralized and business men everywhere subjected to an onerous and loss.

Such are the allegations made in the report of an official investigation covering the workings of the department for the last four years, conducted by the four assistant postmaster generals Daniel C. Roper, Joseph Stewart, A. M. Dockery and James I. Binkley, and the chief clerk of the department Merritt O. Vance.

Hitchcock Caused Defective Service.

The points of the last administration resulted in defective service and just criticism on the part of the public, according to the committee's report. The all-absorbing idea seemed to be to show that the department was self-supporting, regardless of how much the service might suffer.

One of the foremost claims of Mr. Hitchcock was that the deficiency of approximately $17,500,000 in 1909 had been entirely eliminated and that a surplus of more than $200,000 was attained during the fiscal year of 1911.

The report of the sniveling made at the direction of Mr. Burluson says that at no time has there been a legitimate surplus in postal revenues since 1883, and that the postoffice department was under a deficit of more than $750,000 in that connection the report says.

It is pointed out by the committee that the published financial reports of the department show the revenues and the cost of the service on a disimpar, and therefore incomparable, basis. Revenues of the postal service are almost entirely collected in cash and consequently relate properly to the fiscal year for which the report is made. But the committee finds it has been the practice to compare these only with payments actually made during the fiscal year, regardless of obligations incurred in that year but not to be paid until succeeding years.

Passed It on to Democrats.

Just before President Wilson took office the report says Mr. Hitchcock filled long-standing vacancies, postponed promotions, and assumed commitments to fixed charges for long terms in such a way as to saddle the new administration with the greatly increased expense during months, if not years, to come. COTTON SEED CRUSHERS GO TO ATLANTIC BEACH

Association Will Hold Annual Convention There Monday and Tuesday.

Members of the Cotton Seed Crushers' association of Georgia, who have gathered in Atlanta from the northern section of this state, left last night on a special train over the Central of Georgia railway for Atlantic Beach, Florida, where on Monday and Tuesday, the ninth annual convention of this association will be held. Extra cars will be picked up at Macon, containing the south Georgia members of the association. The rules committee met in Atlanta on Tuesday at the call of the chairman B. L. Bond of Royston, Ga., and formulated the report on the rules under which the association will work during the season of 1913-14.

Secretary P. D. McCaskey, of Atlanta, has announced the program for the two days' sessions which will be held in the Atlantic Beach hotel, formerly the Hotel Continental. Following the invocation an address of welcome to the association will be made by H. M. Stanford manager Atlantic Beach hotel, Atlantic Beach, Florida, to which a response will be made by Vice President B. L. Bond, of Royston, Ga.

Dr. Robert F. W. McKee, of Atlanta, who will preside, will deliver his annual address and will be followed by Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of the State College of Agriculture, at Athens, Ga.

At the afternoon session, Thomas C. Law, the Atlanta chemist, will read a paper on "The Quality of Crude Oil," and will be followed by H. C. Brown of Augusta with an address on "Proper Grading of Cotton Seed for Manufacturing Purposes."

P. B. Cromer, of Atlanta, will deliver an address on Tuesday morning and will be followed by Joel Hunter, C. P. A. of Atlanta on "Fallacies in Seed and Crushing Costs." Dr. Peter K. Bohner, state veterinarian, will make the concluding address before the convention which will be followed by the reports of the committees and election of officers.

The Georgia association is the second largest of the south and is always noted for the intense enthusiasm which always marks its gathering.

Ethel Barrymore Quarantined.

New York, May 31.—Mrs. Russell Barrymore (Ethel Barrymore) was placed in quarantine today at a private hospital where she had taken her year-old baby for treatment for diphtheria.

Hundred-thousand dollar rates were authorized in three days.

The fiscal statement of the postal service for 1912 purported to show a deficit of $7,785,533, but that sum the independent auditors was understated by nearly $100,000.

Delays of promotions and filling of vacancies that lapsed salaries might be returned to the treasury the report says caused dissatisfaction among employees and lowered the standard of their efficiency. Employees were transferred from other departments to the postal service. It is charged that salaries in excess of the rate and grade, and irregularly granted in the civil service, and that such positions could not be filled by promotions were unjustified.

Public Criticism Justified.

The first administrative error was the placing of the postoffice department on a profit basis, says the report. "The public's criticism in the effort to succeed at this plan were overlooked and resulted in defective administration and just criticism on the part of the public."

That efficiency and economy should extraneous needs no argument, but the postal service affects so vitally the interests and welfare of the entire population of the country that economy which means a curtailment of postal facilities operates as a check to the social and industrial progress of the country. The public are entitled to the best facilities administered in the most efficient manner that the facilities furnished during the last four years were not the best is clearly established by the facts.

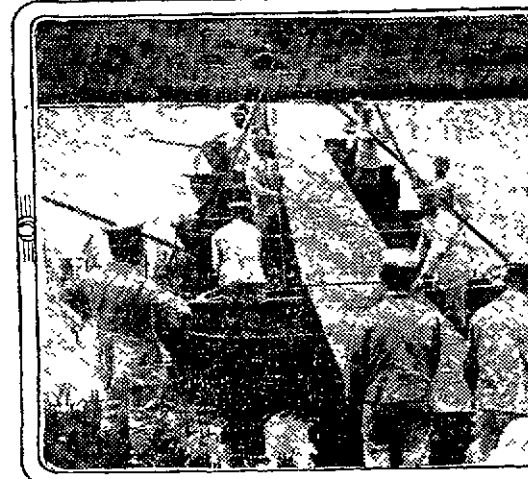

GERMAN SOLDIERS HALF STARVED BUT KAISER KEEPS INCREASING ARMY

General Fozias Von Herringen.

What the Public sees

German Soldiers in their "Hard-We-Downs" Cooking their eight cents a day meals.

Worst Clothed in Europe.

Berlin, May 17.—Germany is increasing its army at a mad pace, $250,000,000 above the usual amount spent annually on the Kaiser's mailed fist are about to be raised to make it the most perfect instrument of war in the history of the world. Infantry, artillery, cavalry, communications, aeronautics, railways—everything in fact will be improved out of all recognition except the stomachs of the soldiers.

Seven times within the past thirteen years has the Kaiser possessed his millions asking that something be done for the payment and to quote of the nation's defender. But the imperial government has always plucked the same excuse—lack of money. The problem of the Kaiser's legions is worse today than ever.

During the thirty years in which everything else in Europe has doubled in value the wages of the German war soldier has remained practically unchanged. The bill of two years ago attempted to remedy this grievance, but did not go far. So German soldiers' wages remain worse paid than any other, with perhaps the exception of Russia's.

The full infantry private in a line regiment gets only $1.50 a month, the sergeant gets $3 and the highest paid man in the non-commissioned ranks gets only $7. In the sergeant-major or "feldwebel" the privilege of services and a few privileged guards, regiments are a little better off. The guards' infantry private gets $2.50, but the foot, or fortress, artilleryman and the field artilleryman gets only the minimum $1.50. Men on the railway get $2. The highest wage is the railways $1.50 a month, and that can be reached only after serving at least six years. When the state is in a particularly generous mood it gives a reward. The "reward" for being the best shot in a guards' chasseur regiment is 61 cents a month.

Gets 5 Cents a Day.

Every ten days the German private soldier gets his wage of 50 cents. On this money he has partly to feed, to clothe himself, as the thrifty state does not provide what is necessary for health. He has to pay for his washing bill, for hair cutting and shaving, for soap and for sewing materials. The state provides for the washing of his clothing, but all washing of his own clothing he must provide out of his monthly $1.50. It is estimated that on these necessary things the soldiers spend at least $1 a month, so that he gets only 50 cents left for hair and nothing is left for amusement.

The state compels the young German to serve but does not even provide his preliminary outfit. When he is pointed to a regiment he has to provide a whole stock of relatively expensive things which ought to be part of his outfit and which he cannot do without. He has to bring with him socks to wear under his uniform, a cold weather five brushes of different kinds, leather cloths for cleaning his rifle, cleaning powders and socks. The least he can buy these things for is $5. This is equal to three months' wages. It does not always in this way that he is able to enter the army respectably. If not, his parents have to supply him. Often the money is borrowed, and the hands of soldiers enter the army in debt to money lenders who demand usurious interest. The young soldier is in trouble during all his two years' service.

The state shows a particular and ingenious meanness in the way it deals with the soldier's canteens. The rich officers are given free use of state buildings for their clubs and casinos, and the hungry soldiers have to pay the state a rent for the use of government buildings as canteens. The state lays a niggardly hand on the surpluses of canteens, which are entirely derived from the men's money. It compels the canteens to buy large stocks of tedious, stale and religious journals which the men do not read. When in a rare generous mood it resolves to give a reward to a man for good shooting or for otherwise serving with distinction. It does not always in this way at its own pocket. It takes the money out of the profits of the canteen, which ought to go for the benefit of the soldier. Many essentials of military equipment are supplied in this way at the men's expense. The government does not even supply the army with waste buckets, which are indispensable. It lets the regiments buy the buckets out of the profits of the canteen.

and as in summer time no oil is allowed for lighting, men have to go to bed in the dark.

That is the way in which thrifty Germany treats her defenders. No wonder her army costs less per head than the French, Austrian and Italian armies. The weak side of the system is its reaction on the men. The discipline is far too good to allow of hunger revolts but the men show their discontent by obstinately refusing to serve as non-commissioned officers after their two years' term has expired. Under the two years' service law all non-commissioned officers are not by inducing men to stay on, but no compulsion can be used.

The inducement given is a promise of a post in the police and on the railroad after retirement to civilian life. These posts are much coveted but such is the dislike of remaining in the army that the best men usually refuse, second best men must be taken for training as non-coms and this operates injuriously upon the discipline and morals of the whole army.

The new army bill as far as is known will not do anything to remedy these evils. A few military journals are clamoring that something be done, at least towards improving the in-country private's food. But the usual objection will be made that the state has got no money and Germany's hungry legions will remain as hungry as ever.

WIND STORM The Human Pepper Box of Billy's Crackers Sunday Game

Blows Down Signs At Ponce de Leon Ending Ball Game

Billikens Win Abbreviated Contest 6 to 4—Welchance, Long and Gibbens Hit Well—Good Crowd Out.

By DICK JEMISON.
 A tremendous wind and rain storm swept down on Ponce de Leon ball park Saturday afternoon with a suddenness that could hardly be realized by the large crowd of fans present, and put an end to the pastime for the afternoon.

When the storm arrived the score stood 6 to 4, with the Billikens leading, and the first of the seventh inning played. Reverting to even innings, the count stood 7. The second game was out of the question.

From the press box on top of the stand the storm could be seen approaching at a mile a minute and it struck with all its fury. It came over the left field fence assuming the proportions of a cyclone, and swept the playing field in brief time than it takes to tell it.

Signs Blown Down.
 The big sign alongside of the score board was crumpled as it had been so much this paper, and the newly erected sign on top of the right field bank, just back of the "bull" sign, was demolished completely.

Swinging on to the stands, the one humorous incident in all the reign of terror occurred. For several minutes it rained straw hats and derbies, and even the terrorized fans were forced to laugh.

Dust and pebbles were imbedded in the faces of the fans causing a wild rush for shelter. Nine-tenths of the huge crowd chose the walk under the stands as their place of refuge. But the situation in the stand caused some to risk getting drenched rather than have the massive structure crumple up on top of them, many standing right out in the open on the infield and outfield in the pouring rain.

A driving hail followed the wind and dust and a violent thunderstorm then broke in all its fury. The lightning flashes were vivid and the sharp peals of thunder in close proximity causing the fans to huddle closer.

To add to the discomfort the car seats were crumpled for nearly an hour, and nearly every fan, man, woman and child was drenched trying to return to their homes.

Old-time fans who have witnessed every ball game played in Atlanta are aghast in declaring that Saturday's experience was the worst they have ever witnessed.

To get back to the game, the Billikens were wrenched the score reverting to even innings when the storm suspended all further pastime for the day.

The second game, which was postponed, will be played on the Billikens next trip here.

Wright Is Incompetent.
 Far be it from us to lay blame on an umpire, but to Empire Wright's door can be laid the defeat of the locals.

Southern Peize was given all the worst of it on balls and strikes. The umpire's judgment in the game was based on his wife or was given their base on balls by the blind Tom behind the plate.

If Saturday had been the only day of Wright's we would have passed him in the line of umpires. He has exhibited in here he has proven himself the most incompetent man that we have ever had the misfortune to see arbitrate in his league in our five years of experience.

The New Orleans B-m's claims of incompetency made a couple of weeks ago, were fully sustained during the past week on the local grounds. Wright has not to guess one correctly. He also has a habit of kissing a decision before the play is completed.

Good Hitting.

WARES IS LEADING BASE PURLOINERS

By Dick Jemison.
 Wares, the Montgomery second baseman, is the leading base stealer of the southern league, with an average of .42. Robertson, of Mobile, is second, and Starr of the same club, third.

Mobile and Montgomery have three players each in the first ten base stealers.

Captain Charlie Starr of Mobile has stolen the most bases, but Wares is the real leader by reason of his having stolen but one less base in three less games.

ALABAMA STAR WITH BILLIKENS

Montgomery, Ala., May 31.—The Montgomery management has signed McDowell, the outfielder who played star ball with the University of Alabama this year. He will report here for duty tomorrow and will likely play in tomorrow's game.

TWO SPLendid ACTION PHOTOS OF CATCHER HARRY E. CHAPMAN, THE CRACKERS' NEW RECEIVER, WHOSE WORK HAS INFUSED THE NECESSARY GINGER INTO THE LOCALS.

Walker and Dunn were the features Due to poor umpiring none of the pitchers showed any form

The Crackers grabbed off a one-run lead in the opener. Long poled one to right for a single and went to second on Sloan's error. Welchance got an infield hit and Rabbit counted on a wild pitch.

The Billies took the lead in the second. Kutina got a free ticket and was sacrificed to second by Jantzen. Kraupp was walked. Donahue poked a long single to center, Kutina scoring and Kraupp going to third. Cotton counted on an infield roller.

The Crackers tied it up in their half. Blair got a life on Kutina's error. Agler sacrificed. Price counted Blair with a three cushion poke to the score board.

Billies Take Lead.
 The Billies grabbed the lead again in the third. Wares got a free ticket on the hit and run. Gibbens smashed one through short, Wares going to third. Sloan filed to left, and when Agler muffed up Long's throw to the plate, Wares counted and Gibbens went to third. He counted on Kutina's sacrifice fly. Long never ought to have made the play at all, but held the ball.

Chappelle relieved Price at the start of the fourth, and walked Donahue. Bagby attempted to sacrifice, but Donahue was forced at second. Walker hit a tough short, Wares singled to right, and Bagby was caught in a chase, but finally run down. Gibbens' single to right, scored Walker and Wares, who had advanced to third and scored respectively on the run down.

With one gone in the fifth, Long smashed one through Kutina for a single and scored on Welchance's triple to deep right. Harry scored on Alpermann's infield out.

The Billies were retired in one, two and three order in the seventh when the storm broke it up.

Jack Prince Has Corralled Best Motorcycle Riders in World For Atlanta Motordrome

"Why do you risk your neck riding ninety miles an hour on a board track when you might be earning a safer living?"

This question a reporter for The Constitution asked in turn of nine motorcycle riders gathered in Atlanta for the opening races over the Atlanta Motordrome next Friday night.

Here are the nine answers:
 1. "I couldn't say, I'm sure."
 2. "It's the only thing I know how to do."
 3. "I don't risk it. I let the other fellow do that."
 4. "Dunno."
 5. "What's the odds?"
 6. "I need the money."
 7. "I never stopped to think."
 8. "Because it's fun."
 9. "Ditto."

Richards Queried.
 The reporter's curiosity was unsatisfied. So he asked more questions. Here is a sample of a conversation with "Tex" Richards, one of the most daring of the riders here.

Q—How did you get in the racing game?
 A—Just happened to. Fellow asked me to ride in a dirt track race. So I went in. I haven't been out since.

Q—Isn't it awfully dangerous?
 A—I guess so.

Q—Any of your friends ever killed?
 A—Yes, plenty I rode all over Texas with Eddie Hasha, and you know what happened to him. (Hasha was killed at Newark in an accident that cost seventeen lives—an accident that could not be duplicated here, owing to the use of guard rails at the top of the track, through which a railroad engine couldn't make progress.)

Q—How many men have been killed in the racing game?
 A—A couple of dozen, I guess.

Q—Ever seen any of them killed?
 A—Yes, four or five.

Q—Ever get scared?
 A—No.

Q—Ever think about accidents?
 A—No, if I did I'd have one sure.

Q—Ever going to give up the shame?
 A—Yes, thought of it.

Q—And there you are?
 A—Not a man of the lot, and they are the wisest, bravest, cleverest motorcycle riders in all America, can give you any valid reason for risking his neck. Yet they do it every day in practice, and they do it every night in the race. Beginning Friday they will be doing it two nights a week in Atlanta, and later on they will be riding and tumbling and taking chances around the southern circuit four nights a week.

They aren't any of them getting rich out of it. They earn good money, but like all men who risk their necks, they live well, their machines cost them a lot of money and they are spenders. They are in the game because they are fascinated with it.

"Tex" Richards.
 Look over the bunch of them out at the motordrome. Take Wilmer Richards, the lad they call "Tex." A year or two ago he went down in a spill and smoozed all over the track "Tex," as his name might hint, was born in Texas, at the city of Waco April 5, 1892. He is five feet, ten inches tall, and weighs 150 pounds.

Richards rode his first race six years ago at Waco, on a dirt track, and has been at it ever since. His first race was on the board track at Denver, Col. On that track he rode a mile in 38 2-5 seconds, which is at a rate of 93 miles an hour.

"The High Harry."
 Harry Swartz, "The High Harry," they call him, because he hails from Denver, is another victim of the racing bug. He was born at Rosedale, Kans., but has lived in Denver for 18 years.

Like all the rest of them, Swartz has had his falls. His worst spill was at Denver. The track there is a 62 degree affair, 4 degrees steeper than the local track. A green rider took him into the fence at the top, he smashed through a 4x4 plank like a buzz saw, rolled down the track through a mess of wheels and brought up at the bottom with nothing the matter but a skinned of silvers, a broken hand and a few assorted dents.

Swartz was married a little over a week ago to Marguerite Merewether, of Dallas, and his bride is with him in Atlanta.

Loop-the-loop Lewis.
 Circus loop-the-loop rider, vaudeville bicycle rider, and captain of motorcycle police are a few of the titles that Henry Lewis is entitled to wear. A marvelous career this man has had. Though only 26 years old he has put seven years of vaudeville to his credit.

They say Lewis has money—way up in five figures and close to six, regular, genuine "cash money" to his credit in Fort Worth banks. Also, he had a good job. But it was too placid.

Lewis is about the gamiest gink in the riding business. Sudden death wouldn't startle him—nor would anything else. The other day, his first out on the board track, he nearly went to his death over the top, but he kept coming and whirled by the paddock 80 miles an hour, glancing like a Cheahire cat and was sore as a goat when they waved him off the track.

Ledges Luther.
 They kidded Freddie Luther into the racing game. Six years ago, a slim boy in short pants he was out at the Fort Worth track with a crowd of boys. Some motorcycle races were in progress. Freddie was rubbering around when one of the riders said:

"Say, kid, how'd you like to ride in the next race?"

"Sure," said he. "I'll do it!"

To make the joke stick, they trundled out an ancient motorcycle, renowned as the slowest on the track.

In the first race he went off with the bunch. They left him at the start, but he closed in, got on even terms, forged ahead and won the race.

He has been a motorcycle racer ever since. Freddie has never grown up very big. Today, at 21 years of age, he is 5 feet, 5 1-2 inches tall and weighs 118.

Billy Shields.
 Billy Shields—his real name is Raymond, but it didn't stick—was his start in the motor racing game to the fact that he worked in a motor repair shop and that he picked up an old piece of junk that traveled under the alias of a motorcycle and rigged it up into a speedy machine.

Thus equipped, he edged into the racing game. His first real contest was at the Syracuse state fair in 1909. He started "on the boards" at Brighton Beach last August. He and George Lockner, teamed as the Syracuse middle, won the Brighton Beach 24-hour race, one of the greatest contents of motorcycle history.

"Millionaire Marty."
 The man with the least excuse in the lot for being in the racing game is Marty Graves. He is known as "Millionaire Marty" by his racing friends and he comes by the name honestly, for he is the only son of a very wealthy man.

He was born at Chicago but claims Los Angeles as his home. He rode his first on dirt tracks and later on the boards. His first experience on a board track was with an eight-lap track, which is one of the finest places in the world to get killed—but Marty escaped. He is very clever, rider, and on a mile track has done a mile in 36 2-5, which is very fast. He has never had his share of accidents, but has never been seriously hurt.

The Honny Scot.
 Another one of the riders who is in it strictly for the frills is Georges Renel, the French champion. This chap used to be a jockey, and rode for eight years on famous French tracks with some success.

The timeliness of the thing irked him so he went in for motorcycle racing, and he has been at it since. His first race was in Paris twelve years ago. He has been in no mean accidents that he has lost count, but the worst was at Brooklands, in England, when Cissac was killed and in which Renel acquired a broken arm.

Another Scot.
 Another Scot is little Jock McNeil. Born at Edinburgh, Scotland, and an expert of wonderful ability, he could make big money in any gasoline engine race he does not want to. All of them are in it because the game fascinates them. They know as well as men can know that they take their lives in their trembling hands every time they start in a race. But they risk the danger for the sensations.

"Which," as has been remarked, "is fine for them that likes it."

Crackers to Meet Schwartz's Vols At Sulphur Dell

Wednesday Off Day—Lookouts Come Here Thursday for Three-Game Series at Poncey.

The baseball menu of the Crackers this week will be divided equally between home and abroad, three games being played the first part of the week on hostile soil, and three on the home lot, closing the week.

Bill Smith and his cohorts left here last night for Nashville, where they open up a three-game series with the Vols.

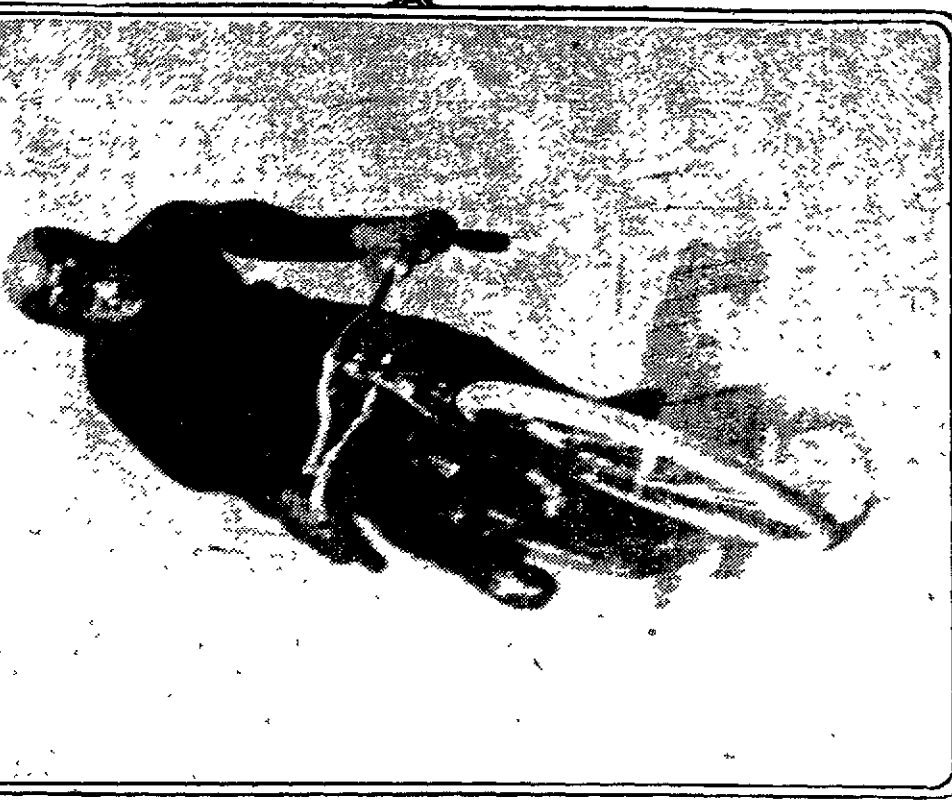

The games were originally scheduled for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, but the return of Sunday ball to the Dell has occasioned the team to move the three games up a day and by so doing allow an off day Wednesday for a postponed game in the event it rains any of the first three games out.

John Paul Jones Breaks World's Record For Mile; Pennsylvania Wins Meet

Cambridge, Mass., May 31.—Twelve sturdy Quaker legs, with which six wearers of the Red and Blue gathered in 24 points, won for the University of Pennsylvania the 38th annual field and track meeting of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America in the Harvard Stadium today. The score was the smallest made by a winner in the history of the association.

John Paul Jones, Cornell's captain, finished his college career track career by running the fastest mile ever credited to an amateur. His new world's record time was 4 minutes, 14 seconds, one second lower than the previous record he made on the same track two years ago. In the half mile event Jones finished second.

The association records in the 100 and 200-yard dashes and the 220-yard low hurdles were equaled respectively by J. E. Patterson and D. F. Lippincott, of Pennsylvania, and J. L. Wendell, of Wesleyan. The latter won both hurdle events and was the only double winner of the meet.

Jackson's Misfortune. Harvard lost when Jackson knocked down three hurdles in the 220-yard event and was disqualified. Had he won second place, Harvard would have won the meet.

Interest centered in the mile run, and many who saw Jones beat out Taber, of Brown, by ten yards, believed the Cornell captain might have supplanted the world's professional time as well, had he not lost through the first quarter, which took 1 minute, 14.5 seconds. The half was covered in 2 minutes, 52.5 seconds. Then Jones went to the front and passed the three-quarter in 3 minutes, 16.5 seconds, and with a burst of speed broke the tape, the acknowledged king of amateur milers.

None of the five field records was in danger, although a few were approached. Several of the contestants failed to approach their best previous exploits. It was on the elders that the leading feats of the afternoon were performed. Captain Huff, the Michigan star, ran the quarter mile within 2.5 of a second of the record. Then Patterson, in the century dash, equaled association figures of 34.5 seconds. Wendell cleared the high hurdles in 15 2/5 seconds in one of the trial heats. Lippincott's time in the furlong equaled another association record and he was running hard at the finish.

The weather was ideal.

Southern Golf Champions of Past Years

Indians 12, Scouts 0.

Savannah, Ga., May 31.—Savannah again outclassed Jacksonville and by winning the third game to day, 12 to 0, made a clean sweep of perhaps the poorest series ever played on the new local diamond.

Foxes 6, Peaches 1.

Columbus, Ga., May 31.—With Baker pitching the game of his life and the Foxes with a patched lineup, Columbus defeated Macon in the last game of the series this afternoon by the score of 6 to 1. Reynolds, of the Peaches, hit one of the longest liners seen on this diamond for some time. Manager Fox has been suspended indefinitely for a fuss with the umpire.

QUERIES ANSWERED.

Under this head, the sporting editor will endeavor to answer all questions pertaining to all branches of sports.

Q.—Dick Jensen, Sporting Editor The Constitution: The better hits a ball that is ordinarily used for these home. On testing them, he is surprised by the result. The runner, however, turns and sees that the second baseman missed the throw and he keeps on for the base. He is put out. Does he get credit for a three-bagger?

A.—Certainly. He had reached third base safely.

Q.—Dick Jensen, Sporting Editor The Constitution: Was the double-header played by Washington and Philadelphia last Tuesday a regularly scheduled one, or was one of them a postponed game?

A.—It was a postponed game.

Q.—Dick Jensen, Sporting Editor The Constitution: Where are Tommie Atkins and George Roseberry now?

A.—Atkins is in the Texas league and Roseberry was sent back to Charlotte.

Jones in Chattanooga.

Jerome Jones, editor of the Journal of Labor, left Atlanta yesterday afternoon for Chattanooga, where he was given a reception last night by the Chattanooga Federation of trades and a number of the leading professional and business men of that city. Mr. Jones went to Chattanooga in response to an invitation from the organized labor of that city to address a mass meeting of the working forces and the business men Sunday afternoon and to talk to the Chattanooga federation in their home tonight.

WESTERN GOLFERS ON LONG JAUNT

Chicago, May 31.—(Special.)—A team of eight middle western golfers and possibly two officials of the Western Golf association will leave Chicago on the night of June 6 to go to the Pacific northwest to play a series of matches against northwestern teams.

Some of the members of the middle western team are: Warren K. Wood, runner-up in the western championship, and probably the most brilliant player in the west. D. E. Sawyer, former western champion.

Harry Long, many times Trans-Mississippi and Minnesota champion. W. C. Fowles, Jr., Pennsylvania state champion and former national champion.

Howard Lee, one of the best players in Michigan. C. B. Devoil, who led the field with a brilliant 73 in the national championship qualifying round last year.

Charles Evans, Jr., western champion. The northwest will have a brilliant team; among the members of the team will be:

H. Candler Egan, Dixie Flinger, a California star and some British Columbia players of note. In addition, a team of northwestern professionals will be played.

Marist Specials Win.

The Marist Specials have just completed a remarkably successful season by defeating Formosa score 6-5. The winning run came across in the eighth on a well-executed "squeeze" by Jerry Adair and "Little Buck" Chew.

Jones, for the Socials, was the especially brilliant spot of the game. The big boy got several four out of five trips to the plate; two of them were for extra bases and put runs over.

This last series returned the Specials victors in every series played this season.

really amazing how those boys do love one another. Just mention the magical name of "Pries" where Britt can hear it and he froths at the mouth. If you say "Britt" to Pries he holds his nose in eloquent pantomime. They have to be roped to their corners before their bouts, and separated with a crowbar at the end of each round. But they surely do give the fans a lovely run for their money.

Three Corking Ten-Rounders At Auditorium Next Week and believes that his equal has never been seen—or not at least in recent years. When Savage met Kubiak here the latter landed just one real blow in ten rounds. And that was an accident. Savage could box a man like Kubiak all day and all night and not get up a perspiration. Because Savage is just naturally clever, knows how to use his hands, to duck, sidestep, parry, guard—and, when the occasion arises, to slug.

To waste any space telling who Jim Flynn is would be a waste, indeed. James is out with a challenge for the white heavy championship, and seems amply able to whip any of the crop—always excepting Savage.

Flynn Beat Coffey. Flynn's recent battle in New York with Coffey was a corking fine showing. Misleading reports were sent out in some cases about this fight, but the big experts were all of the notion that Flynn had all the better of it. Bob Edgren, of The New York World, one of the greatest authorities in the world on fistular subjects, gave the verdict without question or reservation to Flynn.

The Saul-Nelson engagement should be a hummer. It has been admitted for some time that neither Saul nor Nelson was a logical candidate for a world's championship, and at the same time it is recalled that they have always given the fans a run for their money.

Mike Saul is strictly a local product.

Never in Georgia has two such heavyweights been offered as Flynn and Savage. As matters stand today they are the class of the heavy division.

Jim Savage is today the cleverest heavyweight in the world. Jim Corbett says that and the word of James in the matter of clever heavyweights can be taken as authoritative. For James was considerable of a clever heavyweight himself in his young and palmy days.

Corbett fairly raves over Savage.

Where he was born the histories do not relate, but he has passed his busy long life right here in Atlanta. He broke into the boxing game as a rank preliminary lad—so rank that he battled under an assumed name.

He won his way to the front and stuck there a good while. He has never been far from there since. As a semi-wind-up man he is a tremendous card. Mike is a real slugger and gives the fans a run for their money. Terry Nelson is another wilding mixer, and their bout should be a pippin.

FAVORS REGULATION OF WIDTH OF TIRES

Meeting of Highway Commissioners and Wagon and Motor Truck Men Suggested

A meeting of leading state highway commissioners and the representatives of horse drawn wagons and motor driven trucks is the suggestion of Chairman George C. Litch of the Automobile Association of America National Good Roads and Motor Truck Men that the time has arrived when those interests can advantageously use the drafting of suitable legislation governing the width of tires and the weight of loads. An attached statement of views a committee could present the passage of which would be practically assured when put forward by the chief highway officers of the various states.

Many states have enacted laws which endeavor to regulate the width of tires of vehicles but in many instances there has not been a uniformity of these regulations. In Michigan, for example, the width of tires is one of the important factors in the construction and maintenance of roads, especially in the case of horse drawn wagons and motor trucks. The width of tires is a weak link in the chain of the highway system and it is a question of safety to the highway.

One great difficulty in enforcing these regulations is that horse drawn vehicles have been that while less traction is required with wide tires on all heavy clay or hilly roads it is difficult in wet weather to manage a horse drawn wagon or motor truck owing to its tendency to skid and slide into the ditches. In many cases frequent where in a journey a farmer must drive over a mile of slippery road and only have a few minutes to get to the highway in which case he would naturally prefer to use narrow tires for the entire distance rather than to attempt the use of wide tires over the slippery sections of the road.

There is no question that protection and economical maintenance of improved highways require that narrow tires should be used. It is a fact that many of the more popular sections such as New York and Pennsylvania many drivers of horse use lights without the legal requirement as a matter of self protection. This all do not do so emphasizes the need for laws on the subject.

Fruit Company Salesmen Now Using Automobiles In Hunting for Business

An unusually large individual sale of pleasure cars was made last week when the Pioneer Automobile company Chalmers dealers at Sacramento Cal. delivered sixteen Chalmers cars to the Pioneer Fruit company with headquarters at the California capital. Ten of the cars thirty sixes will be used by salesmen of the company and six sixes are for the officers.

The cars will be used in the sections of California and the western coast. The big sale was the direct result of the performance of a Chalmers purchased by one of the fruit company's salesmen two years ago. This sales man bought the car for his personal use and drove it when covering his territory in the fruit districts. He made so much progress and handled so much ground that his work attracted the attention of the officers of the company. They naturally looked for his secret of success and found it in the motor car. Up to this time they had not seriously considered the purchase of automobiles for their outside men.

The salesmen's car showed such a good record with a negligible cost of upkeep and gasoline consumption that the board of directors decided on the purchase of sixteen of the new models. The one man had increased his value to them through the use of a car and they reasoned that every salesman could do the same provided he was properly equipped. Then they placed the order.

R. D. Bunn manager of the Pioneer Automobile company reports a heavy increase in coast business and predicts a big gain next year. The 1913 sales Road improvement work in California has been so far advanced that the highways there are now pronounced as nearly perfect as possible. This says Mr. Bunn with the moderate climate is a great extent responsible for the popularity of the automobiles there.

Linsley to Investigate Motor Truck Prospects In American Republics

On May 7 D. R. Linsley representing the Chase Motor Truck company of Syracuse sailed on an extended trip to cover the leading points in the West Indies and South America. The Chase trucks are no use in practically all parts of South America. To Argentina alone upward of forty Chase trucks have been shipped. The demand throughout the continent as well as Brazil and United States of Colombia has of late been steadily increasing.

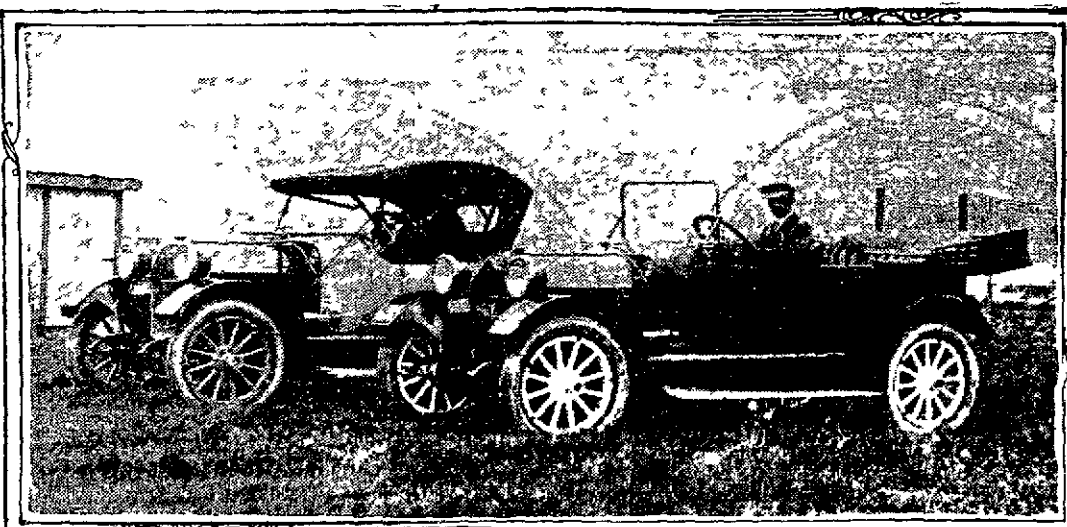

The chief object of Mr. Linsley's trip is to get first hand information on roads climate and trade conditions. Such information will be of greatest value to the home office especially in view of the development of motor truck uses on farms ranches and coffee plantations which offer an excellent new motor truck field.

Mr. Linsley will inspect the Chase trucks now in service. Many have been in use for a number of years. He will find out how these now compare with Chase trucks that have been equal service in our own climate.

Mr. Linsley will visit case dealers in Porto Rico Curacao Danish West Indies Venezuela United States of Colombia the Barbados Brazil Argentina and principal cities including Rio de Janeiro Santos San Paulo Buenos Ayres etc.

He will interview prospective dealers throughout these countries as numerous inquiries have been reaching the Chase Motor Truck company from South American cities and towns where the company is not now represented.

HENDERSON ANNOUNCES 1914 MODEL

R. P. HENDERSON AT WHEEL OF HENDERSON 1914 ROADSTER AND RAY HARROUN, THE FIVE TIMES CUP WINNER AT WHEEL OF 1914 TOURING IN SPEEDWAY PADDOCK

In keeping with the policy of for years The Hendersons of Indianapolis are making their announcement of the 1914 Henderson cars at the time of the 50 mile race at Indianapolis. Proceed to the north side of the grounds in the Hoosier Hotel the announcement is made through the columns of the Indianapolis and during the race the new cars will be on exhibit in Indianapolis at the Claypool hotel.

These new cars while retaining the many features that made the Hendersons famous at all the automobile shows last year at Indianapolis will be equipped with the latest in motor and electrical equipment. The new series operates a six cylinder in-line four to the four and both the six and four will be offered in the following body styles: Its passenger touring model and coupe.

The Henderson Motor Car company is the first in America to offer wire wheels as regular equipment on stock cars and the success of the wire wheels in the past six months has led these progressive manufacturers of Indianapolis to offer in this new series the choice of wire wheels or the conventional wood wheel on any model.

The unique center control lever which is placed between the front seats and has made the Henderson one of the most advanced cars in the world of 1913 is retained. The control is operated by lifting up the knob of the control lever and moving back and forth. Left hand drive and gasoline tank in the dash cowl are also features of the new series which were incorporated in the 1913 cars. The gasoline tank in the dash cowl is a distinct advantage as it gives a perfect gravity feed of fuel to the carburetor at all times and the car will climb an grade owing to the level of the tank always being higher than the carburetor.

Another distinct feature of the new series will be the offering to the American public of the first practical kerosene carburetor in this country. This instrument is the invention of Ray Harroun the famous racing driver. The carburetor will use kerosene gasoline or motor spirit with like good results from all and it can be adjusted for any fuel by an adjustment on the carburetor. This carburetor may be had on any model of the new series.

The Henderson models will also be characterized by the fine running boards as in the previous models. All battery boxes and tool compartments being concealed under the front seats and the spare tire or wheel is carried at the rear. The fifty inch three quarter elliptic spring which does away with the installation of shock absorbers is also retained. Another feature is the combination tail light and license bracket which is so constructed that the license tag of any state can be attached in a moment.

The Ward Leonard electric lighting and starting systems are also a part of the regular equipment and the ignition system will be a separate high tension magneto.

It is our opinion that every successful motor car of 1914 must be extensively advertised in the newspapers.

MOTOR CAR IS SAFEST METHOD OF TRAVELING

You Hear of Accidents, but They Are Comparatively Few, Says H. R. Radford

That the motor car is the safest of all means of transportation is the statement of Harry R. Radford vice president and general manager of the Cartecar company of Pontiac Mich. Mr. Radford makes some very interesting comparisons to bring out the basis for his assertion.

Just consider the number of motor cars that are used said Mr. Radford. Think of the thousands of drivers that are whizzing over every road in the country. You hear of accidents true but these accidents are very few remarkably few when you think of the great number of motor cars in use.

Trains are wrecked every day yet there are more automobiles in one state than there are trains in the whole country. You hear of horses running away of trolley cars causing trouble of Titanic disasters, and when you sum these all up you will see that the motor car is really safer than walking.

The manufacturers are doing everything in their power to make their cars safe continued Mr. Radford and the result of their work is very gratifying. We have made the Cartecar practically immune from any kind of trouble simply by cutting out the complicated parts such as using a gearless transmission. This feature of the Cartecar is one of the reasons why we get so many enthusiastic letters.

PLAYERS' FRATERNITY SUES THE RED SOX

New York May 31—The recently organized baseball players fraternity started suit here today against the Boston American club in behalf of pitcher Burt M. (Casey) Hageman to recover $1,400 on the ground that the club broke a contract with him when it suspended him last June. The papers set forth that the club refused to give the pitcher his release, and that he was not permitted to play with any other club.

The contract according to the complaint provided that Hageman should receive $400 a month from April 15 to October 15 1912.

RINGING CURFEW FOR JOHN KILBANE

Fight Critics Do Not Like the Champion—McCue and Anderson Are Promising Material.

By JAMES J. CORRETT. (Former Heavyweight Champion of the World, writes Exclusively for The Constitution.)

New York, May 31—(Special)—Although Johnny Kilbane has not expressed any intention of abdicating as boss of the featherweight division, the pugilistic sharpshooters throughout the country are busily engaged in speculating on his probable successor.

In the middle west the fight critics believe they have discovered the "coming" champion in the person of Matty McCue, an 18-year-old boxer of Racine, Wis., who boasts a long string of victories in which the "k.o.'s" figure prominently.

There is little doubt that McCue has been coming along very fast. That his record is sufficiently impressive to expect great things of him in the future but it will take more than newspaper "hype" to make us consider him seriously as a candidate for the championship at this time.

Matty's record has so far been compiled chiefly at the expense of second and third-raters. He has not yet met a first-class man and until he has done so it is absurd to talk of measuring the youngster for a championship crown.

I understand McCue has been matched to box Abe Attell, at Atlanta, Ga., next Tuesday night. It will be a ten-round match. If Matty comes through that battle a victor it will be time enough to talk about his championship pretensions. When Attell is no longer the great little fighter of a few years back, he is by no means a "dead one" and it will take a real good performer to beat him. A draw with Abe will boost McCue's fame and if he loses wins over the class of fighters he has been meeting the past year or so, and a clean-cut victory over the former champion would put the youngster in position to demand a match with the best boys in the featherweight division.

Anderson attracts. Everybody is talking about young "Bud" Anderson, the western light weight whose remarkable work the last few months has brought him to the front with a rush. Six months ago Anderson had not even been heard of east of the Rockies and today he looks the best material in the lightweight class, barring Champion Ritchie. And even that clever young man would probably admit, if questioned, that "Bud" stacks up as a very dangerous rival.

If Tom McCarey is the shrewd matchmaker he is popularly credited with being, he will not let the chance to match Anderson and Rivers on the Fourth of July, get away from him. It looks as if the much-talked-of Ritchie-Rivers thing is off for the present, and McCarey could not possibly arrange another card that would appeal as strongly to Los Angeles fans as an Anderson-Rivers set-to. It is a toss-up which is the more popular with the sportsmen, Joe's a native, and "Bud" has fought all the important battles at McCarey's club. From a financial standpoint it would be the biggest thing Tom ever staged, and he has pulled off many important bouts at that.

Papers Are Faked. It is about time the attention of the New York boxing commissioners is called to the practice indulged in by local promoters of sending out announcements of matches between prominent boxers before the important detail of consulting the boxers themselves has been attended to.

Recently the St. Nicholas Athletic club has announced that it would conduct a series of welter-weight elimination bouts in which such well-known boxers as Ray Bronson, Tommy Howell and Clarence ("Wild Cat") Forns were to start. It was the club's plan, according to the announcement, to continue the elimination series until a champion was developed, and to present the final winner with a bona fide title.

It was a most worthy undertaking for any club, no matter how pretentious, and the local papers boosted the show to beat the band. But that's as far as the publicity went. The newspaper stage it turned out that the boxers who were to be the features of the series had not been consulted in the matter at all.

Eight follow-up articles in newspapers for news of important matches, and I am surprised that local sporting writers have permitted the promoters to get away with such raw work. It seems to me that they ought to their readers call for concentration that will compel the boxing commissioners to take steps to prevent a repetition of the offense.

Young Jack O'Brien. One would think that an experienced bird like Philadelphia Jack O'Brien would have realized he was making a big mistake in allowing Young Jack, his brother, to take up the strenuous game of boxing as a professional, before the youngsters had made the acquaintance as in the prediction made that Young Jack could not stand the gaff very long, are being borne out by recent performances.

When the "Kid" was first "sprung" a year or so ago, he created great sensation by his speed and boxing skill. He was a pocket edition of his famous "buddy," and his success for a while against more rugged opponents was really remarkable, considering his youth and comparative lack of experience.

I was one of the many who cautioned Philadelphia Jack about overtaxing the strength of the toughest contest with apparently the veteran allowed his desire to get the money quickly and in chunks to outweigh his better judgment. Young Jack was pitted against several of the toughest contenders among them Ad Wolgast and Leach Cross. While the boy made a creditable showing in these bouts the punishment received was too severe for his young frame.

When his great physical advantages may develop into a great fighter. Champions are not made overnight.

Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, who takes one of the leading roles in the Players' club performance Tuesday evening, is shown in the center top picture, in a charming pose hitherto unpublished, taken by Hirschburg. On the left, from top to bottom, are Mrs. Henry Bernard Scott, Marsh Adair and R. Frank Taylor. On the right, Hamilton Douglas, Jr., Lamar Hill and Mrs. William Owens. In the lower center picture is Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith. Photos of Mrs. Owens and Mr. Adair are by Hirschburg; of Mr. Taylor and Mr. Douglas by Stephenson, and of Mrs. Scott by McCrory.

After three weeks of nightly rehearsals, in which the minutest points of the action have been developed into a remarkably breezy and entertaining style, the cast of the Atlanta Players' club has at last become letter perfect. The rehearsal Saturday night at the Grand went through from beginning to end without a hitch and splendid success is predicted for the presentation next Tuesday night.

The Importance of Being Earnest, the play to be presented, has been declared the cleverest and most popular of all Oscar Wilde's plays. It has been presented many times by the players' clubs in society circles of London, and has recently spread its popularity to America. It was lately presented with success by the Savannah club. Being filled with humor and worldly philosophy, it has a peculiar appeal that makes people want to see it again and again. Only One Performance Here. Tuesday evening will be the only time it will be presented in Atlanta, however, according to the present plans. It will probably be taken on a short tour to a number of southern cities by the Players' club later in the summer or fall.

Warren A. Rogers, the new stage director of the club, is the man to whom credit is given for getting the play into perfect shape this far in advance of the actual presentation. Night after night he has worked for many hours with the players, stamping his own individual interpretation of the theme for the play upon the action as performed by the cast. This is Mr. Rogers' first year with the Atlanta club. He has traveled over the country as stage manager for dozens of companies, and has been at times connected with such celebrities as Viola Allen and Richard Mansfield.

Mrs. Slaton in Leading Part. Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, wife of the governor-elect, will take one of the leading roles of the play, being Lady Bracknell, an austere Englishwoman of the upper class. Miss Hildreth Burton Smith will make her debut with the Players' club in the role of Lady Bracknell's daughter—known as the Honorable Gwendolyn Fairfax—whose adoration for the name of "Earnest" furnishes the theme for the play. One of the most interesting characters of the play will be that of Miss Prism, played by Mrs. Henry Bernard Scott. Although Mrs. Scott really does not like the role, which is that of an old maid governess, she has thrown into it a versatility and individuality which will make the character be one of the stand-out features of the performance. Mrs. William Owens appears in the naive role of Cecily. Lamar Hill presents the blasé and cynical Algernon Moncrief. His success in former roles is well known. Marsh Adair, Hamilton Douglas, Jr., and R. Frank Taylor render him good support.

Tom Donaldson Joins Cast. Living up to its reputation of having skilled and talented players even in the minor parts, the club has secured Tom Donaldson to present the part of one of the butlers. He has had remarkable success in past performances. He and Mr. Taylor will appear as typical English butlers in full livery, and their portrayal of the part is entertaining, indeed.

Society will be out in full force on Tuesday night, the boxes being brilliant with the gowns of the beautiful Atlanta women who will be present. The Players' club will have seats in a body in the orchestra. After the performance the officers of the club and the casts will be entertained at supper at the Piedmont Driving club, society also gathering here at the tables on the lawn.

was eliminated before the finals were reached. Assurance was received from tennis clubs of Montgomery, Ala., that a number of players from that city would take part in the matches here. Numerous inquiries relative to the meet were being received each day. The tournament committee states that they expect the largest number of entries this year and, accordingly, the most successful meet.

Announcement was made Tuesday that a team consisting of Henry Garrett and Will Gary will represent the Country club of Augusta in the South Carolina championship contests at Greensville, and that M. Kennedy and Frank Capers will go to Richmond for the Virginia state championship matches.

South Atlantic Tennis Tournament at Augusta

Augusta, Ga., May 31—(Special)—The first entry in the annual tournament of the South Atlantic States Tennis association was received by the local committee yesterday from Rutledge Capers, of Augusta, 14 years of age, and spoken of as the fastest tennis player of his age in the south. This meet is held each year on the five courts of the Country club of Augusta, beginning this year June 30.

This boy is said to be a phenomenon at the same time his ability being principally in the uncanny control he has of the ball, both in serving and returning. He participated in the meet of this association last year and defeated a number of the fast players of the south Atlantic states, though he

ATLANTA WOMAN WINS IN MEMPHIS TOURNEY

Court of Inquiry Ordered. Washington, May 31—Rear Admiral Robert M. Doyle, the commandant of the Norfolk navy yard, recently made an unfavorable report upon the fitness of Captain J. B. Quimb, commanding the receiving ship Franklin at the Norfolk yard. Captain Quimb's demerit was an investigation and the navy department has ordered a court of inquiry to meet at Norfolk next Monday to examine and report upon the case. The court's composition of Rear Admiral W. B. Caperton, Captains W. L. Chambers and W. S. Benson, with Lieutenant Commander J. M. Luby as judge advocate.

Missouri Wins. St. Louis, May 31—The University of Missouri won the Missouri Valley conference basketball meet this afternoon, scoring 27 to 25, the nearest score by 2.

HE CROSSED LAKE ERIE IN A "FLYING BOAT"

Atwood's Trip Was Marred at Very Close by Lack of Gasoline. Sandusky, Ohio, May 31—Harry N. Atwood, of Boston, the aviator who flew from St. Louis to Boston in an aeroplane two years ago, left this city this afternoon in a "flying boat" of his own manufacture. He was sighted over Put-in-Bay island at 3:30 and a telephone message received here at 10:15 o'clock stated that he had made a landing this evening near Amherstburg, Ont. on the Detroit river, a few miles south of Detroit.

Picked Up by Tax. Detroit, Mich., May 31—Harry N. Atwood, en route from Sandusky to Cleveland across Lake Erie in a hydro-aeroplane, was picked up near Amherstburg, Ont. this evening. His gasoline had given out. He is spending the night at Amherstburg. Atwood told his rescuers that fog and wind, when he was about thirty miles out of Cleveland, caused him to change his course for Put-in-Bay. He said that while flying about a thousand feet up his gasoline ran low. When he reached the water he appealed to passing freighters, and one summoned a tug from Amherstburg, which picked him up. Atwood said he would attempt another trip up the river to this city tomorrow. The machine was not damaged.

CHARLESTON LOSES HER GRANDSTAND

Many Spectators in Stands, but None Were Hurt by the Flames. Charleston, S. C., May 31—During the progress of an amateur baseball game this afternoon at Hampton park, the baseball grounds of the Charleston club, the grandstand caught fire and burned to the ground before the arrival of the firemen. There were many spectators in the stand at the time the blaze was discovered, but no one was hurt. The theory is that a lighted cigarette or match was dropped between the cracks of the stand and thus caused the fire.

Owner Walsh, of the local club, states that the six games scheduled with Columbus and Jacksonville next week will be played here. A new grandstand will be erected at once. Injured at Ball Game. Lewisville, Ark., May 31—Two women probably were fatally hurt and about twenty other persons injured when a grandstand collapsed during a ball game here today.

FRANCHISE YIELDED BY THE BRISTOL CLUB

Action of the Club Due to Attitude of Head of Appalachian League.

Bristol, Tenn., May 31—Because of the attitude of President Jacob Smith, of Cleveland, Tenn., in regard to fines imposed on Manager "Red" Munson and five of his players by Umpire Harry Nickens, and because of statements in a letter from the president, which the local club considers as serious reflections upon it, Bristol tonight surrendered its franchise in the Appalachian league.

TESTED DEVICES FOR THE HOUSE WIFE

(From The Ladies World, New York) Perhaps the most difficult part of all housework and the part still least removed from drudgery, is the weekly washing and ironing. People must be clean, but just how best to attain that end is still a problem incompletely solved. One snag which every housekeeper at one time or another is sure to run around. The problem will, of course, be solved in time, but at the present day there are only two alternatives, neither one of which is entirely satisfactory. The work must be done out of the home by expensive, inefficient and more or less destructive "launderies," or it must be done in the home. Occasionally a good woman may be found who will take washing "out," but this is merely a matter of transfer of homes. The ideal way would be the establishment, in every city or town, of thoroughly competent laundries on a large scale, where work could be done in a sanitary and satisfactory manner at a cost well within the means of all. It is not only possible, but probable that the present laundries will be obsolete—except in rare and particular instances. Until that day arrives, however, the greater part of the family washing must be done in the home and the problem remains.

If this is the case, why not make use of the many devices recently perfected for the purpose, and so meet the problem in the best way at once? For instance, as far as the washing itself is concerned, there are some half a hundred good machines now to do that part of the work, ranging in price from $2.00 to $12.00. The washboard and its accompanying ill-sorted knuckles, scolding back, worn clothing—is a thing of the past! If one cannot afford the luxury of a motor washing machine, there is a wonderful little vacuum washer well within the means and accommodations of any home, requiring no power to work them other than hand, and accomplishing results that are little short of marvelous. The vacuum washer is funnel-shaped and works on the principle of forcing the hot water through the dirty clothes. It is attached to a long handle, and is worked by hand, either in the tub or in the boiler, as desired. With this washer a full tub of soiled clothes may be washed to a snowy whiteness in four minutes, without boiling or rubbing, or even previous soaking. There is no wear and tear on even the most delicate fabrics. It requires no bending or stooping, or straining of the muscles in operating. Rinsing and bluing may also be accomplished more thoroughly and easily by means of this washer, and it is not necessary for the hands to touch the water. It is so simple that it is finally taken out for rinsing. For blankets and woollens it is unsurpassed, also for dry cleaning with gasoline. Of course distinct stains of any kind must be removed first, as is always the case with any of these devices. It is so convenient for using in a parl or hand basin for washing handkerchiefs, baby clothes or other small articles, and is a very handy little device to put in one's trunk for traveling.

EVERY AMATEUR GAME POSTPONED

The storm played havoc with the schedule of amateur ball games Saturday, not a single team playing, the storm breaking in its fury just after the time the teams were scheduled to start.

SENATE ON TRAIL OF TARIFF LOBBY

Monday President Wilson's Charge Will Be Probed. Every Senator Will Be Questioned.

By John Corrigan, Jr. Washington, May 31.—(Special.)—One of the most sweeping investigations of the senate by the senate ever undertaken will begin on Monday at the instigation of President Wilson, and in response to his public charge that an "insidious lobby" was attempting to defeat the Underwood tariff bill.

Senator Bacon is among the first four senators who are to be examined as to whether they know anything about a lobby, have been approached improperly on tariff legislation or any other since they have been in the senate, and whether they are "financially or professionally" interested in any corporation which business is affected by the tariff bill. Senators will be called alphabetically and each will consume 15 minutes of time.

Wilson May Be Witness.

President Wilson is also expected to appear as a witness later on and give them information which led him to make his charge against lobbyists that will focus national attention on the senate during its consideration of the Underwood bill.

For a president of the United States to appear before a committee of congress is a violation of precedent more pronounced than his delivery of his messages to congress in person, or his act in carrying the plum tree to the senate marble room.

Among those who have appeared before the senate committee are letters and telegrams amendments of the bill are F. B. Gordon, of Columbus, president of the Georgia Cotton Manufacturers' association; H. P. Melkelham, president of the Massachusetts mill, Lindal, Hollins N. Randolph, of Atlanta, and others.

Senators Bacon and Smith must pass upon the motives of the applicants and state whether they are lobbyists or persons who have approached in a proper and legitimate manner their representatives in congress on a matter of public concern.

The Probing Committee.

The investigating committee is composed of Senators Overman, Walsh, Cummins, Reed, and Nelson. Mr. Overman is chairman.

The sub-committee considered a tentative list of questions prepared by Senator Overman.

President Wilson was sent a certified copy of the resolution authorizing the inquiry, and Senator Overman is expected to appear before the committee to give information that the committee would begin work Monday.

Georgia Bar Opposes Calling Of Constitutional Convention

Robert C. Alston, of Atlanta, Is Elected President of the Association.

Members of the Georgia Bar association who attended the two-day session at Warm Springs on Thursday and Friday appeared overwhelmingly against the suggested calling of a constitutional convention this summer, or at any time soon.

The matter was given the attention of the association for practically all of the final day's session. A committee, headed by Alex W. Smith, was appointed to go thoroughly into the question and make a report on the final day.

The committee reported adversely on the question, taking the stand that for the good of the commonwealth it would not be wise at present to undertake such a venture, as under the present state of mind of a number of demagogues it would not be safe to make changes in the constitution and to open the way for various radical differences in the established order.

After thorough discussion on the part of members of the lawyers present a vote was taken, and the report in which the matter was treated adversely was almost unanimously accepted.

Two Atlantans received high honors at the hands of the association. Robert C. Alston was chosen as president of the association and Alex W. Smith was chosen as the permanent committee on revision to succeed the late Judge John L. Hopkins, of Atlanta.

Mr. Alston's election as head of the Georgia Bar association came as the second high honor of the week paid to him. In Athens there was a banquet in his honor, and he was elected as chancellor of the Episcopal diocese of Atlanta, one of the greatest tributes which his church could pay a layman.

ROBERT C. ALSTON, New president of the Georgia Bar Association.

Walter Harlow, of Macon, was selected as chairman of the executive committee.

Parade Three Miles in Length Planned by Grocers and Butchers

In a parade of over three miles in length, participated in by nearly 1,000 grocery wagons and by automobiles, and led by a brass band, the Retail Merchants of Atlanta will inaugurate on Wednesday afternoon their first Wednesday half holiday of the season. Through June, July and August the grocers will give their employees an afternoon off on Wednesdays, and on the first day upon which this is done, they plan to celebrate it in due form.

There are in Atlanta over 800 food stores interested in the movement, with something over 7,500 men in their employ. These stores reach every man, woman and child in the city at least three times a day, and often between meals.

As an instance of what they are worth to the business of Atlanta and to the progress of the city, the following facts have been cited. The annual rents of these stores amount to over $3,000,000, and their salary rolls amount up to $80,000 every Saturday night.

The grocers do an annual business, amounting to over $20,000,000, and employ more men than any other single line of industry, as well as purchasing annually more horses and vehicles than any other industry and also employ more men than any other one line of business.

The grocers have announced through the chairman of the committee, Francis E. Kamper, that their reason for holding the parade is to press the importance of a half holiday for the great number of men and women whom they employ, and to let the masses of the people see how many people are given an afternoon off in this manner.

The movement to allow grocery store employees a half holiday in the summer was first brought actively before the association last year by Colonel Harry L. Schlesinger at a luncheon at the Piedmont hotel, when the following were present, besides himself: O. T. Camp, W. A. Evers, Francis E. Kamper, J. E. E. Joy, R. Morris, J. G. Rainey and R. H. Comer.

Colonel Schlesinger called attention to the fact that the dry goods merchants on Whitehall street had taken up this custom and found it a profitable one for the sake of the increased efficiency of their employees during the summer months and that the wholesale jobbers, commission merchants and packing houses had also adopted this plan. He then asked the members present why the retail grocers should not be as generous to their employees.

Immediately following the wagons will come the wagons of the local and western packing houses, the jobbers, commission merchants, cracker manufacturers, pickle manufacturers, bakeries and others. The city salesmen will also be in the parade.

Declare Half Holiday.

The merchants of East Point and College Park, a great number of whom have decided on a half-holiday, will join in the parade with the Atlanta grocers.

The grocers will form heading on Washington and Mitchell streets, and will form on Washington street, north of Mitchell street, on East Hunter street, on Capitol square and streets east of Capitol square. The packing house wagons will form on East Mitchell street, Central avenue and west of Washington street, and will follow the grocers. The commission merchants' wagons will form on East Fair street and Trinity avenue. The bakery wagons will form on Washington street south of East Fair and on Woodward avenue. The ice and coal corporation's wagons and their manufacturers will form on Pulliam street and other cross streets. The parade will assemble at 1:30 o'clock, and will move promptly at 2 o'clock down Washington to East Fair, East Fair to Brotherton, Brotherton to Whitehall, Whitehall to Peachtree, down Peachtree to North avenue, down North avenue to West Peachtree, back up West Peachtree to Five Points and there disperse. During the afternoon there will be special features appealing to and of interest to every groceryman and their friends. At all of the moving picture shows at night there will be other special features, and the opening race at the Motordrome.

Triennial Convention For Railway Trainmen

San Francisco, May 31.—Conventions of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen hereafter will be held triennially, instead of every two years, the organization decided late today. The proposition rejected several days ago was revised this afternoon and finally carried by a vote of 3 to 1. A special committee appointed to consider the question had reported that the triennial meetings would mean a huge saving to the brotherhood. The remaining sections of the constitution were considered today and the committee's report adopted, as was the report of the committee on general rules.

Congressman Kenig Dead.

Baltimore, May 31.—Representative George Kenig, Democrat, of the Third Maryland district, died of pneumonia at his home here this evening. He was 57 years old.

Denver Offices Guarded.

Denver, Colo., May 31.—Every municipal office in the city and county of Denver tonight is under heavy guard of uniformed and plain clothes policemen to frustrate any attempt of the newly-elected commissioners to take possession of the city administration.

NEW FREEDOM COMING FOR AMERICAN INDUSTRY

Redfield Predicts Great Growth With Elimination of Inefficient Management.

Pittsfield, Mass., May 30.—Secretary Redfield, of the department of commerce, speaking at a banquet here tonight, predicted by the industry committee, denied the contention that American manufacturers could not compete successfully abroad, and declared that on the other hand, they were doing so more and more successfully. He pointed to a continuous growth in the business of American manufacturers abroad, beginning with a total of $552,000,000 in 1922, to an estimated total of $1,500,000,000 in 1931. He predicted a still greater growth with the elimination of what he termed "unsystematized management."

"A new freedom for American industries," he said, "was the affirmative test to which the democratic party had set its hand."

"It stands for industrial education and for federal aid to it," said he. "It stands for the reduction of the taxes, not only upon food, but upon the means of earning; that is to say, upon buildings, upon machinery, and upon materials, which are the fundamental of our industrial life. It does not stand for a reduction of wages, because it knows that American economic history has taught us as a lesson that the greatest success has been achieved by the highly paid workman, well equipped and well fed, is the cheapest producer in the world, else with our handicaps we should not be selling $1,500,000,000 abroad now."

Tariff Keeps Prices High.

"All through the year since 1902 there has existed a high tariff in this country. No one will deny that this has kept prices of buildings, machinery and materials at a much higher level than they are abroad. The average of the year 1922, in protesting against the reduction of the tariff now proposed, has urged that each of these three items costs him a great deal more here than in Europe. Say they do; no one doubts it. Therefore, it appears to be the truth that notwithstanding what some men would call severe handicaps in the way of more costly machinery, more costly buildings, and often more costly materials, the results of which I speak to you have been worked out. How is it that in spite of greater expense in these three important directions, we have yet managed to sell goods abroad in competition with the world at the rate of about $1,500,000,000 a year in manufactured goods alone this year? It is because of the high efficiency of our well-paid labor when combined with the fine mechanical equipment of many of our factories. Owing, I do not say to our factories, for it is unfortunately not true of all our factories."

"We have industries that are highly efficient, for example, steel, though in this industry there are wide variations in efficiency. In other industries we have individual factories that are highly efficient, while others are less so. You will find, for example, in various lines of machinery one factory selling its goods all over the world and another selling none outside the United States; the variations of efficiency exist from 20 per cent of a good standard up to 70 per cent, and even higher. Our factories are very much unlike, and a good many of them have gotten along somehow at a rather high cost to the public in the price of the goods they make, because being free from foreign competition they have not had to be efficient."

Not the Only Handicaps.

"But these are not the only handicaps that have troubled our industries. We have almost wholly lacked industrial education and we still lack it sadly. We spend a lot of money turning boys and girls out into the world quite untrained to do anything in particular. Yet, does not the very fact of the wonders that have been worked despite such obstructions point forward to the times when wonders yet undreamed shall come to pass, once these obstructions have been removed?"

"If for a condition in which most of our industrial plants come under the head of what is called 'unsystematized management,' we substitute another where merely in order to exist plants must become systematic in their methods; if for the ignorance as to cost and the carelessness as to waste, which still prevails too much in many a fac-

CONTEST IS BREWING OVER FRISCO SYSTEM

Bond-Holders Will Fight to Have One of the Receivers Removed.

New York, May 31.—Members of the international banking firm of Speyer & Co. had a conference today with New York lawyers who will cooperate with Frederick W. Lehmann, of St. Louis, as counsel to determine a plan of action in a fight to bring about the dismissal of at least one of the receivers appointed for the St. Louis and St. Paul, Mo., railroad and the substitution of a man to represent the interest of the bond-holders.

Mr. Lehmann is expected here early next week and will soon return to St. Louis where the receivers were appointed, and that legal proceedings would be begun early next week.

James Speyer has cancelled an intended trip to Europe and will remain here to look after the interests of the holders of $65,000,000 Frisco bonds which Speyer & Co. floated and for whom, it is said, on behalf of the firm, it feels a responsibility.

Discussions from Paris say that French investors in the bonds are very indignant that the receivers should have been appointed without consulting the bond-holders and that the country to follow the reorganization proceedings.

The fact that Speyer & Co. issued a statement stating that they were "not interested in the appointment of the receivers, both of whom are officials of the road, has brought about what is characterized in Wall Street as open warfare between the firm and F. F. Youkum, president of the road, and it is predicted that the coming legal contest will amount virtually to a fight to control the Frisco.

Mr. Youkum is quoted as saying that the best interests of the company are all safe. The stock will be worth more than ever. It will take only a little time to demonstrate this.

The fact that the Frisco's bonded indebtedness far exceeds its outstanding stock issues is, according to Wall Street opinion, the chief cause of the road's troubles. In behalf of the Speyer & Co. it is said that the fate of the bonds, which are a lien ahead of the stock, is the more important question to be determined.

Friction between Speyer & Co. and Youkum began a few months ago, it was said, when the firm declined to finance maturing notes for $2,250,000. This brought about the receivership, although the earnings of the road, the bankers said, did not warrant such action.

JUDGE COVINGTON TALKS AT DAWSON EXERCISES

Dawson, Ga., May 31.—(Special).—Dawson's public schools closed at the usual time last evening with interesting commencement exercises in the auditorium. Superintendent Mosley's baccalaureate address was most appropriate and enjoyable. Judge W. A. Covington, of Moultrie, delivered the literary address, speaking about three-quarters of an hour to a large and attentive audience. His address was replete with forceful, practical and admirable utterances, and made a fine impression.

MURDER IS CONFESSED BY A GEORGIA NEGRO

Maxton, N. C., May 31.—Arrested here today on the charge of larceny of merchandise from a Washburn store, a negro giving his name as Leo Davis, and his home as Carterville, Ga., broke down and confessed to having killed George Blaine, a sea captain, at Jacksonville, Fla. Davis says there is a reward of $4,000 offered for his arrest in that state. His county authorities have been notified of the arrest.

There shall be substituted intelligent care in both directions; if for the taxes which have made the cost of machinery and buildings and materials excessive we may substitute a system which shall reduce these costs. If for the general ignorance of our young working people of any definite occupation we may substitute the trained hand and instructed mind of intelligent young men and women; if, I say, we may do all these things, why may not our commercial position in the world, already mighty, become the mightiest?"

MILLION TO VANDERBILT FROM ANDY CARNEGIE

Ironmaster Makes Notable Gift to Medical Department of the University.

Nashville, Tenn., May 31.—Chancellor J. H. Kirkland, of Vanderbilt universities, had been made by Andrew Carnegie to provide a million dollars for the benefit of Vanderbilt's medical department. Of this sum $200,000 will be given to the university at once for erection and equipment of laboratories of whom shall be eminent in medicine and surgery, and the balance of $800,000 will be paid annually for the support of the department, through the Carnegie corporation.

A condition of the donation provides that the direction of the educational and scientific work of the department be committed by the board of trustees to a small board of seven members, three of whom shall be eminent in medical and scientific work.

The offer has already been reported to the executive committee of the board of trust, and accepted by it. The action of this committee is to be ratified at the annual meeting of the board of trust on June 15, at which time the governing board of seven will be selected. It is provided that the chancellor himself be one of the seven. The gift is the largest single gift ever made to the university. To the interest of Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, president of the Carnegie Foundation, is ascribed the handsome donation.

PREPARING TO PROBE WEST VIRGINIA STRIKE

Washington, May 31.—Consideration of plans for the probe of conditions in the strike zone of the West Virginia coal fields was begun today by the senate committee on education and labor.

After four days of effort, advocates of the investigation finally succeeded in getting the committee together. It is expected the investigation will be begun by a sub-committee, which will visit the strike district and take the testimony of mine owners, strikers and officers of the militia. A sub-committee to take charge of the investigation was appointed with Senator Swannor, of Virginia, as chairman, Senators Martine, Shields, Borah and Kenyon make up the committee.

No definite plans were formulated today, but the sub-committee will meet again Monday. It is expected that before the senators go to West Virginia, a general investigation will be begun here from documentary evidence concerning the activities of the West Virginia militia after the declaration of martial law.

The committee wants to have a fairly complete record of the legal status of conditions in the strike zone when it visits the affected territory.

BURWELL CONFIDENT HE WILL BE NEXT SPEAKER

Representative W. H. Burwell, of Hancock county, who is running for the speakership of the next Georgia house, was a visitor in Atlanta yesterday. Mr. Burwell has canvassed the situation pretty thoroughly, and he has every confidence that he will win out. He believes that he will be elected on the first ballot, with probably as many as 125 votes.

While Mr. Burwell would not discuss the legislation that will be before the coming session of the legislature, he is of the opinion that the session will be a busy one, and that important measures will be enacted.

Other candidates for the speakership are Representative Hildeman, of Jefferson, and Sheppard, of Sumter. All three are experienced legislators and have many friends in the state.

FIRE-FIGHTING FORCE FORMED AT WASHINGTON

Washington, Ga., May 31.—(Special). A largely attended mass meeting of citizens met Friday evening at the courthouse for the organization of a fire department for Washington. It was effected by the selection of the following officers: W. W. Hill, chief; F. K. Rogers, assistant chief; T. W. Miller, captain of the up-town division, and Joseph Toomy, captain of the down-town division. An advisory board composed of the following well known citizens was also organized: W. W. Hill, chairman, Charles E. Irvin, J. G. Wright and W. M. Hill. The city council will be requested to clothe the department with sufficient powers to act in properly handling of the fire-fighting force and equipment in Washington. A superintendent will be employed to devote his entire time to the fire house, and the city council has been petitioned to purchase an automobile fire truck.

CLUBMAN IS ARRESTED FOR SHOOTING A GIRL

Los Angeles, May 31.—Fred E. Kolb, a wealthy young clubman, is under arrest, charged with having shot Miss Irene Noble, 22 years old. George E. Noble, the girl's brother, according to his statement to the police, found her lying on the floor of his residence last night, unconscious from the wound, with Kolb at the telephone summoning a physician.

When she was revived at the hospital, Miss Noble charged that Kolb had fired the shot. She probably was fatally wounded. A letter in her handwriting addressed to her mother, threatening suicide, was said by the police to have been found in her clothing.

Kolb is the son of the late C. C. Kolb, millionaire manufacturer. He inherited a large portion of his father's estate.

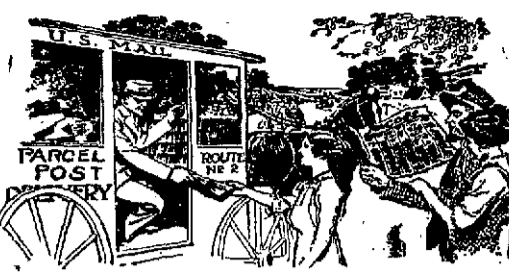

Kolb said that the girl had wounded herself during an attack of hysterics brought on by brooding over the mental condition of her mother. Kolb made the statement after being told that his sweetheart, although shot through the neck and paralyzed from the shoulders down, had a chance to recover.

Miss Noble's mother, Mrs. W. B. Guinand, and her brother, George Noble, told detectives they believed Kolb's story. Kolb, however, will be held pending further investigation.

Buying Diamonds on Partial Payments is Money Saving.

Our plan is offered to anyone who promptly meets their obligations. To have a regular amount to meet each month, and to know that it is for something worth while, prevents the wants of salary and income that otherwise is trifled away for things of no intrinsic value.

Diamonds possess a constancy of value given only to gold. Wearing them gives an air of prosperity and success, a cultivated finish to the toilette. One of the great humorists transposed a familiar quotation into "Them who has, gits." Nothing succeeds like success.

We insure the value of your Diamond in that we contract to buy back our Diamonds at 90 per cent of purchase price at any time within one year, and always allow just what you pay for it in exchange for a larger Diamond. You can run no risk in buying our Diamonds.

We mean that you can buy from us a $100.00 Diamond, wear it for an entire year, and return it to us and get $90.00 for it. Our small margin of profit of 10 per cent being all that you pay for the pleasure of wearing a handsome ornament a whole year.

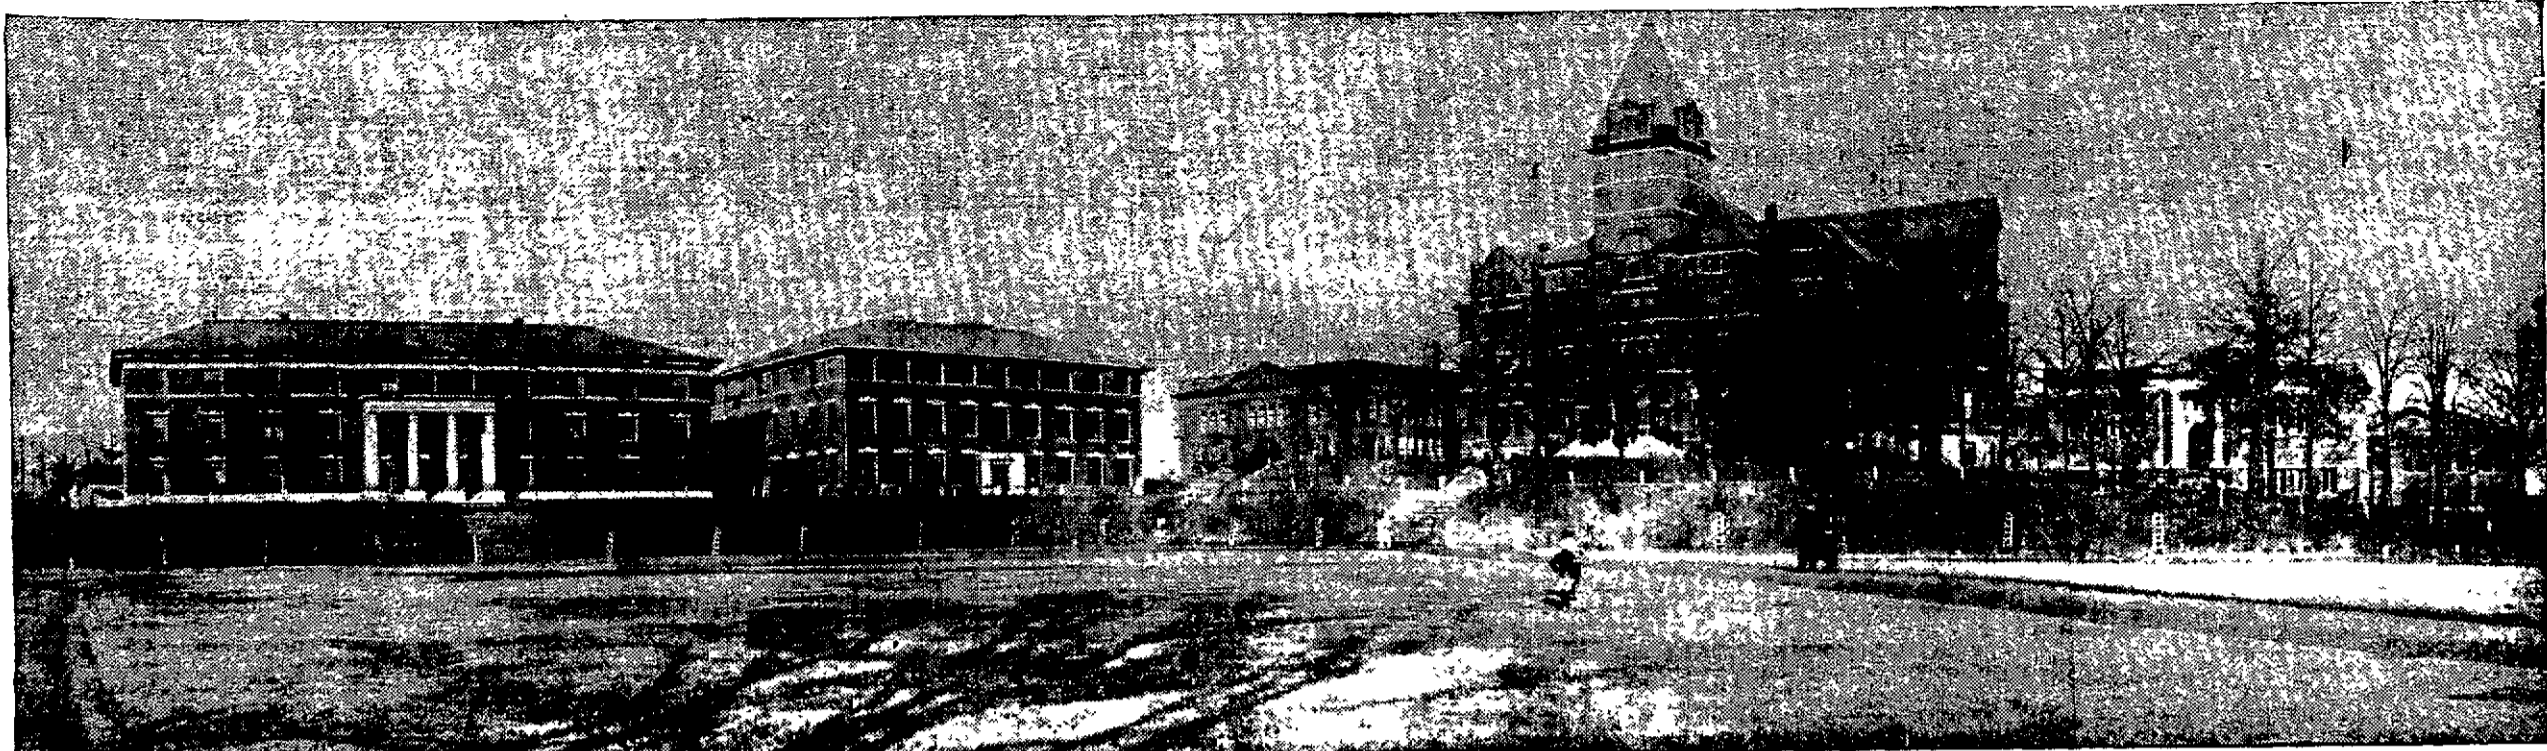

If you desire to exchange it for a larger diamond, at any time, we would allow you $100.00—your full purchase price—for it, and our plain-figure cash prices enable you to make the exchange at the same price as if you were paying all cash. On account of the constant increase in the price of Diamonds, we can frequently allow more than the original price.

Whether you buy on our deferred payment plan or for all cash, our prices are just the same. We accept notes from those whom we are assured are worthy of credit, and divide the payments over as much as ten months, if desired.

Our Diamond Book, No. 7, tells all about our plan, and more. We would like to send you this Book No. 7. A postal will bring it.

Tech's Splendid Growth In Quarter Century; From Log Cabin to Plant With 700 Students

View of Buildings and Campus of Georgia School of Technology.

Georgia Tech begins its quarter centennial celebration tomorrow. Georgia Tech is one of the few big educational institutions in America which could hold a quarter centennial. One of the remarkable things about Tech is the fact that it is a product of a single generation.

Most educational institutions which rank beside it, north and south, go back fifty or one hundred years for the date of their founding.

Dr. Hopkins Idea.

Prior to the early eighties, the Georgia School of Technology did not exist even as an idea. In 1822 or 1833 Dr. Isaac S. Hopkins, who later became the first president of Georgia Tech, fitted up a modest work shop in an old log cabin in the back yard of his home in the village of Oxford. He was then a professor in Emory college. He had a love of mechanics, and a genius for invention, and the students of Emory used to eagerly gather round him and watch his work at the bench and with the lathe. It so fascinated them that they wanted to learn, too. Yielding to the requests of parents of the boys, Dr. Hopkins began to instruct them in tool craft in 1834. It was there that technological education in the south had its birth.

From a log cabin less than thirty years ago to a magnificent plant covering twenty-five acres, with sixteen buildings, valued at approximately $800,000 is the history of the progress of technological education in Georgia in twenty-five years. It will be celebrated at this quarter-centennial.

Tech's Real Beginning.

The work of Dr. Hopkins in his little cabin at Oxford, however, was merely creating the prologue to the real founding of Georgia Tech. The bill creating a state technological school in connection with the state university was formed and introduced by Colonel N. B. Harris, of Macon. It passed the state legislature in 1885, and Colonel Harris thus became the founder and father of the institution. He has never ceased to take active and effective interest in working out its destinies, and is today president of its board of trustees.

Georgia Tech has only had three presidents in its history, Dr. I. S. Hopkins, the late Dr. Lyman Hall and Dr. G. M. Matheson, its present president. Under the successive direction of these three gentlemen, all of its wonderful growth has taken place.

Georgia Tech today has between 600 and 700 students. Twenty-seven states and some foreign countries are represented. It has a faculty of sixty-five members and associate members.

Still Cannot Meet Demand.

Yet with all this splendid growth, the Georgia School of Technology cannot turn out graduate engineers fast enough to meet the demand in the south, and Dr. Matheson hopes to see greater growth during the next ten years than Tech has ever known in one decade before. He ever to see the capacity of the institution doubled. He wants to see the property enlarged to fifty acres. He hopes to reconstruct the temporary buildings and make them permanent and to build more. He wants to be able to accommodate within the next few years a student body of 1,500 to 2,000 young men.

The annual resources now amount to $90,000 from the state, $7,000 from the city and $30,000 in fees. He wants to double them. Says Dr. Matheson in a recent interview: "Three years ago for every graduate engineer who came out of a southern institution fifteen came into this territory from the north, and then there were not nearly enough."

The Georgia School of Technology takes its chiefest pride in and attributes its wonderful success to the fact that it is intensely practical. It turns out capable men—"builders" in the widest meaning of that word. Its mechanical engineer, electrical engineer, civil engineer, textile engineer, chemist and architect are today helping to build a new south.

If the city of Atlanta, with all its churches, roads, factories and skyscrapers were swept off the map by a tornado today, the graduating class of the Georgia School of Technology could furnish the brains and the technical knowledge necessary to direct its reconstruction.

A boy who graduates from the Tech can do more than wield a hammer or run a dynamo. He can make a hammer. He can build a dynamo. He is taught to make tools, to use them, and above all, to direct their intelligent use by others.

Yet the scholastic and intellectual amenities are not neglected. The departments of English and modern languages are as fine as those in any non-technical college. Culture is considered along with the work of a purely practical nature. Students who desire to do so, may learn German, French and Spanish. Tech doesn't turn out mere specialists. It turns out well-rounded men.

At Georgia Tech one gets the combination of theoretical and practical knowledge, which is today recognized as the best form of education. A leading engineering magazine recently said, "Either theoretical knowledge or practical knowledge is a good horse, but they work and pull best together."

At the Tech the theory of engineering subjects is obtained from classroom and laboratory from men expert in their line, whose character and knowledge have been vital factors in building up the school.

Study in the Shops.

In the shops one learns the practical side of the question, sees the work done by expert machinists, foundrymen and so on, and does the work himself under their supervision. By performing these different kinds of work, all useful and practical, one soon becomes familiar with shop methods and shop limitations, learns the "impossibilities" which a good designer must not call for, learns the best methods of doing such work, and, therefore, the best methods of design. In the work of designing, too, the student is taught by actually drawing and designing different machines and parts of machines under the guidance of men who know. With their supervision the theoretical and practical sides of designing are studied and discussed. Some of the things which have been designed and built in the shops are steam engines, one of which is now driving the shops, several gas engines, a rotary converter, one or two electric generators, and numerous small things, such as reducing valves, repairs on many of the different machines around the school, lathes and so forth, for shop equipment. Altogether, the system of study and work is designed to produce men who are trained to do and to think.

Besides opportunities of obtaining technical training and knowledge, Tech offers other very valuable advantages to a young man, which he cannot afford to neglect, if he is to attain success. Because of its location in a large and enterprising city, students have the opportunity of seeing countless construction jobs of observing new engineering practices as they appear, of examining the work done in the many manufacturing plants located in or near the city, and of observing the methods of management of these plants.

Athletics Not Neglected.

Just at the time the average man is in college, he is passing from boyhood to manhood and his whole success depends on obtaining and keeping a strong, healthy body. At Tech, under the instructions of the best coaches in the land, one may take up baseball, football, tennis, track work, basketball and other forms of athletics, and thus keep his body in fit physical condition for hard study in classroom work. The advantage of this cannot be overestimated.

Another advantage is the good influence continually thrown around the students by the Y. M. C. A., the Student Bible Study Groups, by the Sunday school classes which have been established solely for their benefit, and by the example of the men who are at the head of the institution.

To Celebrate This Week.

It is the building up of the institution described here which will be celebrated this week and next week in connection with the commencement exercises.

The first public gathering is tomorrow night at the Grand opera house. Georgia Tech is a state institution. It belongs to Georgia, and the people of Georgia. All its friends and patrons who can come are cordially invited to be present at the celebration exercises.

LAST WEEK OF SCHOOL, PERIOD OF ACTIVITY

Little Folks Are Making Ready for Vacation Joys—Graduating Exercises at Grand.

This is the last week of school. It will consequently be a week of joy and excitement to approximately 25,000 of the growing generation of Atlantans. When they are dismissed from school next Friday afternoon, it will be the end of the study season for the three months and the beginning of the merry, care-free, irresponsible, out-of-doors vacation time.

Many are the plans that are incubating in the brains of the little folks (or the enjoyment of their period of freedom. Some will go away to the country and a few to the seashore, but most of them will spend the time right here in Atlanta, many of the poorer ones having to go to work to help out their families. The great majority of them will be ready and willing to get back to their school tasks again when the bells ring in September.

This week then will be a week of great activity in all the schools. Stock will be taken of the year's work, to use an expression familiar to merchants, examinations will be finished and promotions announced. Many of the grammar schools are preparing entertainments for their pupils, parents and friends. There will be the graduating exercises of the high schools at the Grand, when the finishing classes will reach the summit looked forward to by all their juniors in the grades below them and be handed their diplomas.

Superintendent William M. Slaton reports that the year just passed has been the most prosperous and the most generally satisfactory in the history of the public schools. The entry rollment for the year is 24,085, as against 22,071 last year, showing an increase of 1,014. This is said to be the greatest increase in enrollment yet made in a single year. That there is a large number of young Atlantans still unprovided for in the schools, however, is shown in the census recently completed by the state department of education. This census gives the number of children of school age, black and white, within the confines of the city as 32,149.

An unusually large class of girls will graduate from the several divisions of the Girls' High school this year. The total is 168, of which number 21 are normal school graduates, 4 in the English Commercial High school and 1 in the High school proper. The graduating exercises to be held next Thursday evening at the Grand opera house will doubtless be most interesting and brilliant in every particular.

There will not be near so many boys to graduate this year as girls. It is true that the girl graduates usually outnumber the boys, but the chief reason for the great difference this year is in the fact that there will be 4 graduates of the High School of Technology, owing to the addition of another year's work by the board of education. The class that set out to finish this year will not be graduated until June of next year. The graduating exercises of the boys' High school will take place at the Grand Friday evening.

HOT FIGHT EXPECTED AT MERCER MEETING

Expected That Differences Between Prudential Committee and President to Be Aired.

Macon, Ga., May 31—(Special)—When the board of trustees of Mercer university meet in Macon Monday there is sure to be something doing, and by some it is said the fight will be about the administration of the affairs of the college by President S. Y. Jameson, who recently declined the presidency of the Ouachita college at Arkadelphia, Ark., and announced his intention of remaining at Mercer another year.

The members of the prudential committee, which is composed of the members of the board of trustees, residing in Macon, are said to be lined up against Dr. Jameson, and it was the differences existing between that committee and the president which caused the board of trustees to appoint a special investigating committee some months ago to look into the matter. The report of this committee will be made to the trustees Monday.

Dr. E. C. Dargan, president of the First Baptist church of Macon, and chairman of the board of trustees, is said to be at odds with Dr. Jameson, and he has the support of the other Macon members. The strained relations existing between President Jameson and Dr. Dargan is said to have caused President Jameson to decline to have the annual commencement sermon preached in the college chapel this year, instead of at the First Baptist church, as has been the case in former years.

The local trustees will not discuss the fight that it is reported will be made on Dr. Jameson, but they do not deny that it is brewing.

It is said that it had been planned to demand the resignation of President Jameson at the meeting of the trustees last year, but Dr. Dargan advised against such action.

One of the other important matters to be considered at the meeting of the trustees Monday is the proposition to abolish the Greek letter fraternities from the university. The non-fraternity men have the support of President Jameson in this fight.

One of the causes of the strained relations existing between the Macon trustees and Dr. Jameson is said to be the outspoken advocacy of Dr. Jameson in favor of the removal of the university from Macon.

THREE ARRESTS MADE IN HAWKINS MURDER

Coroner's Jury Adjourns Until Tuesday, When Bellton Killing Will Be Taken Up.

Lula, Ga., May 31—(Special)—The coroner's jury was adjourned until Tuesday next, when they will again take up the Hawkins murder, which occurred near Balltown, Ga.

There have been three arrests made, the two Cantrell brothers and a young man named Miller. All have been placed in Hall county jail at Gainesville.

It is said Mrs. Hawkins requested the Cantrell brothers and Miller to go look for her husband when he failed to come in at the usual time, and they found the body, but left it alone in the woods, where it remained all night, and until the sheriff arrived on an early train from Gainesville.

Teeth loosened and face bruised. Of the injured only four were seriously enough hurt to necessitate them being taken to the hospital. They were Engineer Hayes, Fireman Joiner and Ticket Collector Landrum, of the train crew, and J. E. Robertson, one of the passengers.

Conductor J. F. Bennett, of the switch engine, had gone into the brick yard office to telephone to the Southern railway office to find out where the passenger train was, and while he was doing that he heard a crash. He thought at the time he had five minutes to spare.

Engineer Brantley, of the switch engine, jumped in time to avoid being hurt.

The passengers on the Joe Brown train were all shaken up more or less, but only those named were in anywise injured.

WILSON TO MAKE FIGHT FOR CURRENCY REFORM

President Is Urging Monetary Legislation by the Present Session of Congress.

Washington, May 31—Senator Tillman today made public a letter from President Wilson in which the president declared for currency legislation at the present session of congress.

In that portion of the letter referring to currency, the president wrote:

"This is the time to pass currency legislation and I think we are in a sense bound in loyalty to the country to pass it, so that any attempt to prevent, or at any rate, check in its inception a monetary panic," Representative Johnson wrote.

When Senator Tillman gave out the correspondence today he accompanied it with a prepared statement in which he began by declaring that the republicans were fighting to retard tariff legislation and to retard or prevent entirely currency reform.

"In my judgment it is of vital importance to the future success of the democratic party that we should have currency legislation as soon as possible," said he.

"We ought to force the fighting on the tariff and drive it through the senate under whip and spur, just like it was driven through the house."

"We ought to begin promptly to inaugurate changes in the currency and banking laws, which will make it possible for men, big and little, to take care of themselves in business. We have too many multi-millionaires, and too many paupers. The division is not just or equal, and the people know it. And they have committed the democratic party to right these wrongs."

Senator Tillman's statement added that the "game" of the republicans was to retard or prevent tariff or currency legislation at this congress, in the hope of turning the democrats out of power at the next elections and controlling the legislative situation during the remainder of President Wilson's term.

Representative Johnson also issued a statement urging immediate currency reform, declaring that if it were now delayed, it would not be accomplished until the regular session of congress in 1914.

Instructing his attorneys to give up all attempts to secure him a new trial, E. T. Darden recently sentenced to a three-year term in the state farm at Milledgeville, left yesterday morning to begin his sentence.

GEN. PORFIRIO DIAZ BOUND FOR MEXICO

Former Dictator Reported to Have Sailed on a French Liner—Report, However, Is Denied by Friend of Diaz.

Paris, May 31.—According to a dispatch from Coruna, Spain, the newspaper La Voz de Galicia says General Porfirio Diaz is proceeding to Mexico aboard the French liner steamer Espagna. The Mexican consul at Coruna, the paper adds, is understood to have received letters addressed to the ex-president aboard the steamer. A member of the Diaz household in Paris, however, denied today that General Diaz is leaving on the Espagna. The former president, he said, had gone on a short visit to his son in the country near Paris.

Rebels Defeat Federal Forces

Laredo, Texas, May 31.—Federal forces numbering 250 men surprised a Carranza force of nearly 200 at Columbia, 25 miles above here, on the Rio Grande, this morning. They poured in upon them a deadly fire from machine guns, killing 25 rebels and wounding 30 and taking 106 prisoners. Only six federal soldiers were killed. The rebels, which had been stationed near Columbia for months, conducted a government of their own, collected customs duties on cattle and in general carried out their plan of separation from the Mexican government.

Taking the offensive the federal forces under command of Colonel Gregorio Villa Real, silently left Nuevo Laredo last night for Columbia arriving at 7 o'clock this morning before the rebels realized the federal were in the vicinity.

The rebels soon became demoralized and fled precipitately. Twenty rebels crossed the river at Minerva, Texas, and were arrested by the fourteenth cavalry patrol on the Rio Grande. It is said that among the rebels is one American, Paul Mason, who, with Lee Christmas, has been identified with several revolutions in Central America. The American, it is said, took an important part in directing the federal forces.

Sheriff Sanchez of Webb county, who took charge of the prisoners, requested the military authorities to hold the prisoners but was advised to take charge of their arms and allow the prisoners to return to Mexico, which they did. It was reported that another battle had taken place with 300 constitutionalists at Hidalgo, 26 miles above Columbia, but this could not be verified. Later in the day the rebels were reported by 300 men from Hidalgo. When the fresh forces arrived the federal are reported to have abandoned many of their prisoners and to have returned to Nuevo Laredo, Mexico.

Mercado Succeeds Rabeago

Chihuahua City, May 31.—General Samuel R. Mercado, recently recalled from Parral, today was appointed military governor of Chihuahua state. He succeeds General Antonio Rabeago, who has been called to Mexico City.

Colonel Romero, with 1,800 federalists, is marching south in an effort to restore rail and wire communication along the Mexican Central railway as far as Torreon.

In a fight with insurgents under Villa, Herrera and Hernandez, at Sausalito, the government reports 25 rebels killed and several taken prisoners. The constitutionalists are concentrated at Santa Rosalina, while the government troops are repairing burned bridges at Conacoas. The government column is carrying several pieces of heavy artillery. The insurgents' strength is estimated at 1,400, with no heavy artillery.

American Is Wounded

San Antonio, Texas, May 31.—Aroused by reports that M. L. Vought, formerly of St. Paul, Minn., one of the best known Americans in northern Mexico, was seriously injured in protecting his wife and her sister, Miss O'Keefe, of Topeka, Kan., from assault by two Mexican soldiers in his home at Xicotencatl, state of Tamaulipas, John Warren, United States consul at San Antonio, today sent urgent telegrams to Senator Culberson and Governor Colquitt demanding protection for the women and official investigation of the outrage.

Details regarding the affair are meager and it is not known whether the soldiers were punished, nor whether they were federal or constitutionalists. Mr. Warren declared his intention of writing Senator Morris Sheppard and the American consulate at Tampico asking an investigation.

DR. OGDEN TO BEGIN PARABLE SERIES TODAY

Taking as his theme, 'The Parables of the Kingdom' Dr. Dunbar Ogden will begin a special series of sermons at the Central Presbyterian church to-day. He will interpret the lessons of Christ's parables in the light of modern problems, and the series will be one of the most interesting he has ever given.

The Word of the Kingdom will be the subject of the first of these sermons given Sunday morning. It will be followed in the evening by an address on 'The Sons of the Kingdom' and on subsequent Sundays the series will be carried out with other sermons portraying the thought and philosophy of the old parables of the kingdom of God.

During the past two weeks the pulpit of the Central Presbyterian has been occupied by many of the leading Presbyterians of the country—among them being Moderator Bayard, of the United Presbyterian assembly. Dr. William H. Roberts, stated clerk of the Northern Presbyterian assembly and Dr. J. H. Strickler, former pastor of Dr. Ogden's church, who is now of the Union Theological seminary, at Richmond.

Theaters Offer Fine Entertainment

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Forsyth.) The bill of Keith vaudeville that is to be the attraction for the busy Forsyth for the week that commences with matinee on Monday and that will keep the theater very much alive all the week, daily matinee and evening performances is headed by Lillian Shaw, about the most popular of the singing comedienne who visits this city. And there are six other acts of the very highest quality, just the sort that have been liked best here in Atlanta and that will most surely register hits that will have a big and strong drawing value.

Lillian Shaw is indeed one of the headliners of modern vaudeville. She is possessed of every quality and every mark of a star. She has held her own for several seasons, and is so much in demand in the largest cities that it is the rarest event that she is billed in any other place. It is her own wish to play in Atlanta every season, and theatergoers recall with keen pleasure the fact that her summer visits to this vaudeville theater helped to make things brighter and happier and more worth while. She has been the feature of some of the biggest shows that have been offered along Broadway this season and her three months' stay in Chicago won new laurels for her already crowded crown. Miss Shaw is a character comedienne in a class all alone and she is going to introduce some of the newest song hits and interest with some of the newest hits. Keith vaudeville in a monologist that lots of people have heard about but who has never been seen here before. He is the creator of a lot of interesting stories that have a laugh in them and his songs have won applause right here in Atlanta when some one else's song with them. He is a popular fellow with every audience he meets, and Union Broadway there is no one in vaudeville any more popular than he.

When M. H. H. and Keith played at the Bijou last week, in Atlanta, it helped to make a big attendance record for 'Seldom's Poles' in March. Since that engagement the artists offering has been seen in many parts of the country, and with the same success that has been registered in Atlanta. Returning a few weeks ago from abroad Seldom took up his American route and will be one of the attractions of the bill. He is a wonderfully clever artist himself and with models that are marvelous will present an act that will have a strong drawing power. Horace Wright and his pretty little partner, Miss Rene Duchich, will offer a singing novelty that has an extreme big value. They are both clever people, and have not failed at an anytime to give real assistance in making a vaudeville program delightful.

The Gaiters Brothers, an eccentric dancing duo, and the Three Alex's, in a mighty interesting gymnastic performance, will be on the bill, and the big comedy feature will be the appearance of the famous character comedienne, Ward and Curran, who will offer for their satire on stage life, 'The Stage Door Tender.' There are no better funmakers in the profession than 'Pop' Ward and Frank Curran. They have been comedy headliners for some time and though younger performers have come into the business, Ward and Curran still occupy a position that makes their service of real value to any vaudeville theater.

There will be much on this bill that will interest and there are many revivals and box parties already listed.

'The College Girl.'

(At the Bijou.) That the Bijou has grown more popular in two weeks than it has been during the last two years is best evidenced by the tremendous attendance representative of the week recorded since the introduction of Tabloid musical comedy and vaudeville at extremely popular prices.

The Bijou is splendidly adapted for the presentation of tabloid shows. It has a splendid seating capacity, and the theater is equipped with every modern idea for cooling and ventilating. It has been a perfectly comfortable place during warm weather and its offering has been seen in many parts of the country, and with the same success that has been registered in Atlanta. Returning a few weeks ago from abroad Seldom took up his American route and will be one of the attractions of the bill. He is a wonderfully clever artist himself and with models that are marvelous will present an act that will have a strong drawing power. Horace Wright and his pretty little partner, Miss Rene Duchich, will offer a singing novelty that has an extreme big value. Are Rheumatic Sufferers Negligent?

Many Suffer Excruciating Agony for Years Without Investigating the Cause of Their Pain or Its Cure.

Rheumatism frequently comes from uric acid poisoning. Uric acid accumulates from undigested food remains in stomach, and generates this poisonous acid. If not expelled promptly it gets into the blood, and eventually forms uric acid deposits which settle in joints and muscles and stiffen them.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT has been remarkably successful in the treatment of rheumatism resulting from uric acid poisoning. It is a true uric acid solvent which will break up the deposits already formed, dissolve the uric acid out of the tissues and hold it in solution until expelled in the urine. It will not cure your rheumatism overnight, neither did your rheumatism come overnight, but JACOBS' LIVER SALT will relieve you more promptly and surely than anything else, because it thoroughly purges the system of fermenting waste, eliminates the poisonous uric acid and purifies the blood.

Almost without exception the sufferer from rheumatism is subject to constipation, indigestion or dyspepsia, and a sluggish liver is at the bottom of the whole trouble. JACOBS' LIVER SALT stimulates the liver and kidneys, and makes them keep your system clean. No other liver medicine has the same solvent action upon uric acid, therefore insist that your druggist give you the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he hasn't it, full size, send for it, with receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Mid- and guaranteed by Jacobs Pharmacy Co., Atlanta. (Advt.)

Praise This Remedy For Lung Trouble

If the voluntarily written words of grateful people living in all parts of the country praising Eckman's Alternative is a remedy for coughs, throats and lung troubles, are to be believed, this medicine is certainly doing a vast amount of good for such sufferers. This is a simple taken from many.

Widow of Policeman in Need; Case Is a Deserving One

There has come to the Constitution the appeal of a widow of a policeman who died shortly before Christmas while in the service of the citizens of Atlanta.

There is in this family a 14-year-old girl who is feeble-minded and unable to render any assistance, a little 2-year-old child, and a few weeks' old baby.

The woman is under ordinary circumstances self-supporting, but owing to conditions she has had to appeal to the Associated Charities for help.

The doctor has advised that in order to give this little baby a fair chance so that it can be started on its development as a normal healthy child that it is absolutely necessary that this mother be allowed to nurse it during the summer months.

It is not only necessary that this baby be given its due right for a fair start, but it is also necessary that this woman be given reasonable time in which to regain her strength before having to start on a battle for existence for herself and children.

The doctors say that she should be taken care of for five months, which will take her and the baby past the hot summer months to the autumn, when she can again become self-supporting.

To do this requires a pension of $40 a month and the Associated Charities are appealing to the citizens of Atlanta to help this widow and orphan of a man who died in the service of the city.

This woman is not a beggar, but is only asking a fair chance for herself and babies, and the Associated Charities are appealing through The Constitution for this five months' pension with which to save this family and relieve the city of a burden.

SIX UP-TO-DATE HOMES

And 19 Ready-to-Build-on Lots

SATURDAY, JUNE 7, 1913,

At 3 p. m., on the Premises.

THESE are 5 and 6-room houses, with every city convenience and connection, including furnace in several of the houses, but no gas as yet. These houses were built of the best material, under the personal direction of Colonel I. N. Ragsdale, who could not be induced to build a shoddy house.

These houses are real city homes, located in the social center of the Tenth Ward, and only a step from the best car service in Atlanta.

We urge you to go out and inspect this property. Each house will be plainly placarded, showing cash payment and monthly payments; also the amount of the loan to be assumed.

THESE HOUSES ARE NOW RENTED, and bring in from $18.50 to $30.00 per month. Think of what a help that, will be to you, in meeting your payments, should you not be ready to occupy the house.

The houses and lots front on the following streets:

Arlington Avenue, Princess Avenue, and LaRosa Terrace.

Arlington Avenue runs off of Lee Street, right at Colonel Ragsdale's handsome home. Princess Avenue runs off of Avon (Oakland) Avenue, between the Baptist church and Captain E. P. Ryan's fine home, giving the property two approaches, each of which is a prominent street.

THIS SECTION HAS NO OBJECTIONABLE FEATURE

It is logically the place for the people to live who are engaged in business, or who are employed among the many industrial and manufacturing and railroad enterprises around the Terminal Station, Whitehall Street, Mitchell Street, and the Central and West Point railroads, and the adjacent territory. The car service and the way the streets run prove these statements to be true. Think about it, and you'll see it as we do.

THE LOTS ARE READY TO BUILD ON

These are the lots to buy, either for home sites or for speculation, because they are ready to build on. In addition to this, every lot is a beauty, with nice young oak shade trees scattered over them. Also, because their location is excellent. They are only a short distance from the business center of Oakland City. Only two blocks from the City School, and near the churches; and the farthest lot is only two blocks from the car line; and, best of all, they are socially in the swim, and will range from $150 to $250 cash, and the payments will range from $22.50 per month to $25.00 per month, with 6 per cent simple interest. Small loan on five of the houses, to be assumed by the purchaser.

ALL CITY IMPROVEMENTS DOWN AND PAID FOR

THE TERMS ON THE LOTS are right. Every lot will be sold on terms of $50 cash, and the balance $15 per month, with only 6 per cent simple interest on the deferred payments.

HOW TO GET THERE—Take cars at the corner of Forsyth and Alabama streets, marked "East Point," "Hapeville" or "College Park." Get off at the corner of Avon (Oakland Avenue). You will then be only a step from this property.

LOANS.
LOTS! LOTS! LOTS!
WE ARE OFFERING at private sale the choicest lots in East Point for residence purposes. These lots lie elegantly, and most of them are beautifully shaded. Some of them have frontage of 75 feet by a depth of 400. These lots range in price from $350 to $900, and the terms of payment are 10 per cent cash and 2 1/2 per cent per month. Each lot in this subdivision either fronts directly on a street having sewer, water and electric lights, or can be easily and quickly connected with them.
EAST POINT is the largest manufacturing city of its size in the entire country. An investment in a lot in this subdivision will prove a money maker. While Atlanta increased its population 70 per cent in ten years, East Point increased its population over 300 per cent. East Point is built up solidly to the lots we are offering.
IF YOU are interested in suburban property within the city limits, there is nothing offered that will excel lots in beautiful "Brownwood Park." This property belongs to the Joseph E. Brown Co. The lots range in price from $7 to $16 per front foot, and in size from 50 to 70 feet frontage, and all have good depth. These lots have front and side building lines, which assures home builders ample protection. If you want a pretty home directly on a car line, with sewer, water and electric lights, we will arrange to have one built for you in this subdivision.
OUR "GRAND VIEW" LOTS, just to the right of Ponce de Leon, at North Avenue and Bonaventure, are unexcelled by anything on the north side. In fact, they are the cheapest lots in the city, considering the location and their commanding view. Look these properties over and talk with us about them.

ACREAGE

106 ACRES, between Decatur and Stone Mountain, on new car line. This tract fronts the highway for a distance of 1,050 feet. Price $150 per acre. Here is something extra good for subdividing into 5 and 16-acre tracts.
22 1/2 ACRES south of Decatur at $75 per acre. This is a beautiful tract with a lake covering six acres of ground; excellent fishing. Will trade for Atlanta property.
150 ACRES on Powers Ferry road at $80 per acre. When the Powers Ferry road is widened and cherted this property will be worth $150 per acre.

LA TEST MARKET REPORTS

WHEAT MADE ADVANCE ON LIBERAL BUYING

Market Closed One Quarter to One Cent Higher—Corn Also Up

Chicago, May 31.—Rising force in wheat today had greater momentum than at any time since the beginning of adverse weather and crop reports from the southwest. Notwithstanding setbacks due to heavy profit taking the market closed steadily at an advance of 1/4 cent to 1/2 cent.

Blistering temperatures and also the need for rain worried not only Kansas but Oklahoma and Missouri. Nebraska as well as wheat was suffering from the drought heat of a general rain. A market that is the official wheat crop of the United States is being distributed to the market.

Belated rains in the southwest advanced wheat prices at the close of the week. Prices were mostly higher than at the close of the week.

IT will be the finest edition of its kind ever published in the South. It will prove not only to this state, but to the world, the ability of Georgia women and the progress made by their state. The women have done everything but print the edition

They have acted as reporters, visiting the Capitol to secure interviews with the Governor and members of the Legislature; also visited the Mayor in his office, securing an interview with Mayor Woodward. They have attended Police Court and talked with Chief Beavers and other officers

Georgia women have written every line of the edition. They have sold many columns of advertising to firms and individuals all over the state who offer in this edition every manner of necessity and luxury, who give the very latest word of what is new from the great world of commerce. The Ella F. White Memorial Endowment Fund, for the maintenance of the general work of the Federation, shares in a substantial way in all the proceeds. They have worked night and day to make it a success and to show what woman can do and does.

A STRANGE BANQUET

By John Kendrick Bangs

Drawing by D. Russom

THADDEUS,' said Bessie to her husband as they sat at breakfast one morning shortly after the royal banquet over which "Grannies" had presided. "Did you hear anything strange in the house last night? Something like a footstep in the hall?"

"No," said Thaddeus. "I slept like a top last night. I didn't hear anything. Did you?"

"I thought so," said Bessie. "About two o'clock I waked up with a start and while it may have been a sort of waking dream I was almost certain I heard a rustling sound out in the hall and immediately after a creaking on the stairs as though there was somebody there."

Well why on earth didn't you wake me Bess? returned Thaddeus. "I could easily have decided the matter by getting up and investigating."

"That was why I didn't wake you. Teddy. I'd a great deal rather lose the silver or anything else in the house a burglar might want than have you hit on the head with a sand club," said Bessie. "You men are too brave."

"Thank you," said Thaddeus with a smile as he thought of a certain discussion he had had not long before at the club in which he and several other brave men had reached the unanimous conclusion that the best thing to do at dead of night with burglars in the house was to crawl down under the bedclothes and snore as loudly as possible. Nevertheless my dear you should have told me."

I will next time said Bessie. "Was anything in the house disturbed?" Thaddeus asked.

No said Bessie. "Not a thing as far as I can find out. Mary says that everything was all right when she came down and the cook apparently found things straight because she hasn't said anything."

So Thaddeus and Bessie made up their minds that the latter had been dreaming and that nothing was wrong. Two or three days later however they changed their minds on the subject. There was something decidedly wrong but what it was they could not discover. They were both awakened by a rustling sound in the hallway outside of their room, and this time there was a creak on the stairs that was unmistakable.

Don't move Thaddeus said Bessie in a terrified whisper, as Thaddeus made a brave effort to get up and personally investigate. "I would not have you hurt for all the world, and there isn't a thing down stairs they can take that we can't afford to lose."

Thaddeus felt very much as Bessie did, and it would have pleased him much better to lie quietly where he was than run the risk of an encounter with thieves. He had been brave enough in the company of men to advocate cowardice in an emergency of just this sort but now that this same course was advocated by his wife he saw it in a different light. Prudence was possible cowardice was not. He must get up and get up he did but before going out of his room he secured his revolver, which had lain untouched and unloaded in his bureau-drawer for two years and then advanced cautiously to the head of the stairs and listened—Bessie meanwhile having buried her face in her pillow as a possible means of assuaging her fears. It is singular what a soothing effect a soft pillow sometimes has upon the agitated nerves if the nose of the agitated person is thrust far enough into its yielding surface.

"Who is there?" cried Thaddeus, standing at the head of the stairs his knees all of a shake but whether from fear or cold as an admirer of Thaddeus I prefer not to state.

Apparently the stage whisper in which this challenge to a possible burglar was uttered, rendered it unavailing for there was no reply but that there was some one below who could reply Thaddeus was now convinced, for there were sounds in the library—sounds however suggestive of undue attention to domestic duties rather than of that which fate has mapped out for house breakers. The library floor was apparently being swept.

"That's the biggest idiot of a burglar I've ever heard of," said Thaddeus returning to his room.

"Wh-wha what did you say?" asked Mrs Perkins burying her ear in the pillow for comfort now that she was compelled to take her nose away so that she might talk intelligibly.

"I say that burglar must be an idiot," repeated Thaddeus. "What do you suppose he is doing now?"

"Wh-wha-what, d did you?" asked Bessie, apparently unable to think of any formula other than this in speaking since this was the second time she had used it.

"He is sweeping the library."

"Then you must not go down," cried Bessie sitting up, and losing her fear for a moment in her anxiety for her husband's safety. A burglar you might manage but a maniac—

I must go Bess said Thaddeus, firmly.

Then I'm going with you," said Mrs Perkins with equal firmness. Now Bess don't be foolish returned Thaddeus his face assuming a graver expression than his wife had ever seen there. This is my work, and it is none of yours. I positively forbid you to stir out of this room. I shall be very careful and you need have no concern for me. I shall go down the backstairs and around by the porch and peep in through the library window first. The moonlight will be sufficient to enable me to see all that is necessary.

Very well acquiesced Bessie, only do be careful.

Thaddeus donned his long bath robe, put on his slippers and started to descend. The stairs were so dark that he could with difficulty proceed—and perhaps it was just as well for Thaddeus that they were. If there had been light enough for him to see two great glaring eyes that stared at him through that darkness out from the passageway at the foot of the stairs, upon which he turned his back when he went out upon the porch it is not unlikely that a very serious climax to his strange experience would have been reached then and there. As it was he saw nothing but kept straight ahead stepped noiselessly out upon the piazza crept stealthily along in the soft light of the moon until he reached the library window. There he stopped and listened. All was still within—so still that the beating of his heart seemed like the hammering of a sledge upon an anvil by contrast. Then raising himself cautiously upon his toes he peered through the window into the room, the greater part of which was made visible by the wealth of the moon's light streaming into it.

Humph! said Thaddeus after he had directed his searching gaze into every corner. "There isn't anybody there at all. Most incomprehensible thing I ever heard of."

Ring he walked back to the piazza door and went thence boldly into the library and lit the gas. His piazza observations were then verified for the room was devoid of life save for Thaddeus's own presence but upon the floor before the hearth was a broom and there were evidences also that the sweeping sounds he had heard had been caused by no less an instrument than this for in the corner of the fireplace was a heap of dust cigar ashes, and scraps of paper, which Thaddeus remembered had been upon the hearth in greater or less quantity when he had turned out the gas to retire a few hours before.

"This is a serious matter," he said to himself. "Something is wrong, and I doubt if there have been burglars in the house but I can ascertain that without trouble. If the doors and windows are all secure the trouble is internal."

Every accessible door and window on the basement and the first floor was examined and with the exception of the piazza door which Thaddeus remembered to have unlocked himself a few minutes before every lock was fastened. The disturbance had come from within.

"And Bess must never know it," said he, "it would worry her to death." And then came a thought to Thaddeus's mind that almost stopped the beating of his heart. Unless she has discovered it in my absence," he gasped in an instant he was mounting the stairs to hasten to Bessie's side as though some terrible thing were pursuing him.

Well what was it Ted?" she asked, as he entered the room.

Perkins gave a sigh of relief. All was safe enough above stairs at least.

"Nothing much," said Thaddeus, in a moment. "There is no one below."

But what could it have been?"

I haven't the slightest idea," said Thaddeus unless it was a stray cat in the house. The sweeping sound may have been caused by a cat scratching its collar—or purring—or—or—something. At any rate things appear to be all right my dear so let's go to sleep."

Thaddeus's assumed confidence in the rightness of everything rather than his explanations was convincing to Mrs Perkins, and in a very short while she was sleeping the sleep of the just and serene, but to Thaddeus's eye there came no more sleep that night, and when morning came he rose unrefreshed. There were two problems confronting him. The first was to solve the mystery of the swept library floor the second was to do this without arousing his wife's suspicions that anything was wrong. To do the first he deemed it necessary to remain at home that day, which was easy for Thaddeus was more or less independent of office-work.

"I'm glad you're not going down," said Mrs Perkins, when he announced his intention of remaining at home. "You will be able to make up for your loss of sleep last night."

Yes, said Thaddeus. It's the only thing I can do. I'm so played out. Breakfast passed off pleasantly in spite of a great drawback—the steak was burned almost to a crisp, and the fried potatoes were like chips of wood.

Margaret seems to be unfamiliar with the art of cooking this morning," said Thaddeus.

So it would seem," said Bessie. "This steak is horrible."

"The worst part of it is," said Thaddeus, "she has erred on the wrong side. If the steak were underdone it wouldn't be so bad. Isn't it a pity Edison can't invent a machine to rarefy an overdone steak?"

"That would be a fine idea," smiled Bessie. And to take a Saratoga chip and make it less like a chip of granite block.

"I don't mind the potatoes so much," said Thaddeus. I can break them up in a bowl of milk and secure a gastronomic novelty that suitably seasoned isn't at all bad but the steak is hopeless."

"No sir," she replied, simply. "Where could I look?"

"Then it wasn't the cat," said Bessie, sinking back into her chair. "We have been robbed."

"Well it's the first time on record I guess, that thieves have ever robbed a man of his china," said Thaddeus, calmly. Have you looked for the plates?" He added, addressing the waitress.

"No sir," she replied, simply. "Where could I look?"

"Then it wasn't the cat," said Bessie, sinking back into her chair. "We have been robbed."

"Well it's the first time on record I guess, that thieves have ever robbed a man of his china," said Thaddeus, calmly. Have you looked for the plates?" He added, addressing the waitress.

"No sir," she replied, simply. "Where could I look?"

"That's so—where?" said Bessie. "There isn't much use looking for dishes when they disappear like that. They aren't like whisk brooms or butter hooks to be mislaid easily. We have been robbed, that's all there is about that."

"Oh, well," said Thaddeus, "let's eat lunch and see about it afterwards."

This was quite easy to say, but to eat under the circumstances was too much for either of the young householders. The luncheon left the table practically untouched, and when it was over Thaddeus called his man in to the house, wrote a note to the police station, asking for an officer in citizen's clothes at once, and despatched it by him, with the injunction to let very little grass grow under his feet on the way down to headquarters. He then summoned the waitress into the library.

"Have you said anything to Margaret about the china?" he asked.

"Yes sir," she replied.

"What did you say?"

"I told her as how wasn't it funny the way it had went, sir?"

"And what did she say?"

"Nothing, sir. Only she seemed to think it was funny, because she laughed."

"And what did you say then?"

"Nothing, Mr Perkins. Margaret and me have very little conversation, because she don't fancy me, and prefers talkin' to herself like."

"H'm," said Thaddeus. "Talks to herself does she?"

"All the time, sir," returned the waitress, "and she seems very fond of it, sir. She laughs, and says things and then laughs again. She does it by the hour."

"How long has this been going on?"

"About a week, sir. I noticed it first last time I had my day out. I didn't get in until nearly eleven o'clock, and I found her sitting at the table havin' supper and talkin' and laughin' like as though there was folks around."

"She was entirely alone was she?"

asked Thaddeus.

"Yes, sir."

"What did you do when you came in?"

"I said Hello' to her and sat down opposite to her at the table where there was a place set and I told her I was glad she had something to eat and a place set for me because I had not had any supper and I was hungry, sir."

"Did she make any reply?"

"No sir. She looked at me kind of indignant, and turned out the gas and went up to bed leavin' me in the dark."

Thaddeus's brow grew thoughtful again. It wrinkled into a half dozen lines as he asked:

"Why didn't you speak of this before?"

veloped in the cellar, I suppose," said Thaddeus.

"No," said Bessie, "it isn't as bad as that, but the ice-cream man has telephoned up to know whether we want the cream for dinner or for eleven o'clock, according to the order as he understands it."

"Well," said Thaddeus, "I don't see anything very unusual in an ice-cream man's needing to be told three or four times what is expected of him."

"But I never ordered any cream at all," said Bessie.

"Ah," said Thaddeus, "that's different. Did you tell Partunelli so?"

"I did and he said he was sure he wasn't mistaken, because he had taken the order himself."

"From you?"

"No, from Margaret."

"Do you think Margaret is dishonest?"

"I don't know," said Thaddeus. "I shouldn't be surprised if she had friends with taking ways in other words, my dear, I suspect that Margaret is in league with people outside of this house who profit by her mistaken notions as to how to be generous, but I can't prove it yet."

"But what are you going to do?"

"Set a watch. I have sent for a detective," said Thaddeus.

"Detective!" she gasped.

"Exactly," said Thaddeus, "and here he comes he added, as a carriage was driven up to the door and one of the citizen police descended therefrom."

"You would better leave us to talk over this matter together," said Thaddeus as he hastened to the door. "We shall be able to manage it entirely, and the details might make you nervous."

"I couldn't be more nervous than I am," said Bessie, "but I'll leave you just the same."

Whereupon she went to her room, and Thaddeus, for an hour, was closeted with the detective, to whom he detailed the whole story.

"It's one of the two," said the latter, when Thaddeus had finished, "and I agree with you it is more likely to be the cook than the waitress. If it was the waitress, she couldn't have stood your examination as well as you say she did. Perhaps I'd better see her, though, and talk to her myself."

So it was arranged. The detective was introduced into the family as a correspondent of Thaddeus's firm, and he settled down to watch the household. Afternoon and evening went by without developments, and at about eleven o'clock every light in the house was extinguished, and the whole family, from the head of the house to the cook, had apparently retired.

At half-past eleven, however, there were decided signs of life within the walls of Thaddeus's home. The clew was working satisfactorily, and the complete revelation of the mystery was close at hand.

The remainder of the narrative can best be told in the words of the detective.

"After we'd had dinner and spent the evening in Mr Perkins's library, the family went to bed, and I pretended to do the same. Instead of really going to bed I waited my chance and slipped down the stairs into the dining room, and got under the table. At eleven o'clock the maidservants went up to their rooms, and at quarter past there wasn't a light burning in the house. I sat there in the dining room waiting, and just as the clock struck half past eleven I heard a noise out on the stairs, and in less than half a minute a sulphur match was struck almost over my head under the table, and there stood the cook her face livid as that of a dead person, and in her hand she held a candle, which she lit with the match. From where I was I could see everything she did which was not much. She simply gathered up all the table fixings she could and started down stairs into the kitchen with 'em. Then I went up to Mr Perkins's room and called him. He put on his clothes and got out his revolver, when we stole down stairs together, leaving Mrs Perkins upstairs, with her boy's nurse and the waitress to keep her company."

"In a second we were in the laundry, which was as dark as the ace of spades, except where the light from four gas jets in the kitchen streamed in through the half-open door. Mr Perkins was for pouncing in on the cook at once, but I was after the rest of the gang as much as I was for the cook, and I persuaded him to wait, and, by thunder, we were paid for waiting. It was the queerest case I ever had."

"That woman—looking for all the world like a creature from some other part of the universe than this earth, her eyes burning like two huge coals, her cheeks as yellow and clear as so much wax, and her lips blue-white, with a great flaming red tongue sort of laid between them—worked like a slave cleaning the floor, polishing the range, and scrubbing the table. Then she dusted all the chairs, and, producing the missing table cloth, she laid it snow white upon the table. In two minutes more the lost china was brought to light out of the flour barrel, polished off and set upon the table—enough for twenty people. The dining room things I had seen her take she arranged as tastefully as any one could want, and then the finest layout in the way of salads, cakes, fruits and other good things I ever saw was brought in from the cellar. To do all this took a marvellously short time. It was five minutes of midnight when she got through and then she devoted three minutes to looking after herself. She whisked out a small hand glass and touched up her hair a bit. Then she washed her hands and pinned some roses on her dress. Smiled a smile I can never forget in my life and opened the kitchen door and went out."

"She's going to give a supper!" whispered Mr Perkins.

"It looks like it," said I. "And a mighty fine one at that."

In a minute she came back with a pail in which were four bottles of champagne, in her hand. This she took into the cellar returning to the kitchen as the clock struck twelve.

"Then the queerest part began," said the detective. "For ten minutes by the clock people were apparently arriving though, as far as Mr Perkins or I could see, there wasn't a soul in the kitchen besides Margaret. She was talking away like one possessed. Every once in a while she'd stop, rush to the door, and shake hands with some invisible arrival. Then she'd walk in with them, chatting and laughing. Several times she went through the motion of taking people's hats, and finally, if we could judge from her actions, she had 'em all seated at the table. She passed salads all around, helping each guest herself. She sent them fruit and cakes, and then she brought out the wine, which she distributed in the same fashion. She also apologized because some ice-cream she had ordered hadn't come."

"When the invisible guests appeared to have had all they could eat, she began the chatty part again, and never seemed to be disturbed but once, when she requested some one not to sing so loud for fear of disturbing the family."

"Mr Perkins and I didn't know what to make of it. There wasn't a thing stolen, and it was clear to my mind that I'd done the woman an injustice in connecting her with thieves. She was honest, except in so far as she had ordered all those salads and creams and things from time to time on Mr Perkins's account, which was easy enough for her to do, since Mrs Perkins let her do the ordering. There was only one explanation of the matter. She was crazy, and I said so."

"I fancy you are right," said Mr Perkins. "We'll have to send her to an asylum."

"That's the thing," said I, "and we'd better do it the first thing in the morning. I wouldn't tackle her to-night because she's probably excited, and like as not would make a great deal of trouble."

"And that," said the detective, "was where Mr Perkins and I made our mistake. Next morning she wasn't to be found and to this day I haven't heard a word of her. She disappeared just like that," he said, snapping his fingers. "Of course, I don't mean to say that anything supernatural occurred. She simply must have slipped down and out while we were asleep. The front door was wide open in the morning and a woman answering to her description was seen to leave the Park station five miles from the Perkins house, on the six thirty train that morning."

"And you have no idea where she is now?" I asked of the detective, when he had finished.

"No," he answered. "not the slightest. For all I know she may be cooking for you at this very minute."

For my part I hope the detective was wrong. If I thought there was a possibility of Margaret's ever being queen of my culinary department, I should either give up housekeeping at once and join some simple community where every man is his own chef, or dine forevermore on canned goods.

"That woman—looking for all the world like a creature from some other part of the universe than this earth, her eyes burning like two huge coals,

"How Can We Better Serve People?" Is the Eternal Question in This Store.

"A Little in Front of the Next"---Said Kipling.

Merely to pass muster satisfies no "live" man nor any live store.

As people become more and more familiar with the reality of good merchandise at low prices a store like this becomes more and more indispensable to the public necessity.

And with the growing need for it the store grows in service and strength for service.

Tomorrow we serve with important and opportune outclearings of these myriads of beautiful and GOOD Muslins offered at prices*frankly intended to clear them out.

And may we say that those who come to share a very wonderful event, will in no wise be disappointed.

Davison Paxon Stokes Co.

An announcement that will be gladly welcomed by thousands of women who have been on the watch for this very occasion.

The Undermuslin Sale of Real Integrity Is Also the Sale of Real Stamina

Gala Week at Asheville.

Battery Park Hotel, Asheville, N. C., May 21.—With the probable season of grand opera, the horse show, the completion of Asheville's "great white way," the innovation of a "baby show" at the state fair, the opening of another resort hotel, and the influx of 125,000 tourists, Asheville will be placed in the front ranks of the summer resorts of the country. That the Battery Park hotel is to have more than the usual number of summer guests is proved by a glance at the long list of advance bookings, for at last northerners are beginning to realize that even south of the Mason and Dixon line it is much cooler than at many of the northern resorts, provided the tourist spends the summer in the Blue Ridge mountains, where even in August grate fires often blaze cheerily in the hotel lobby.

Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels and William Gonzales, editor of The Columbia State, are to be two of the distinguished guests at the meeting of the North Carolina Press association to be held here this summer. Mr. Gonzales has been recommended to President Wilson for appointment as minister to Cuba.

Governor Locke Craig will come to Asheville next Tuesday and will be tendered a luncheon by Mother Flanck at St. Gevelevie's college, where later in the afternoon the governor will deliver the commencement address. The governor always pays a visit to the Battery Park hotel when in Asheville, where he is sure to find many of his friends.

That Atlanta guests are to figure in the summer sojourns at this resort is underscored by a glance at the long list of advance bookings for guests from that city, and a week goes by that a small colony of them cannot be found at the Battery Park hotel.

Mrs. Frank Butt, of Atlanta, who has been spending some time here as the guest of Mrs. Anita D. Martin, at her home on Church street, has returned to her home. She was entertained at numerous informal affairs during her stay in Asheville.

St. Edna Massengale, of Atlanta, made a visit to the Battery Park last week on business, but later in the season will return with her family to spend the summer here.

Mrs. E. T. Paine, of Atlanta, has been sojourning here.

Miss Dorothy Wells and Mrs. Arthur Billings, of Atlanta, are expected next week for a month's stay at this hotel.

Miss Taylor to Entertain.

Miss Annie Taylor will entertain at her home, 306 Capitol avenue, on the afternoon of Saturday, June 7, in honor of Miss Dalay Patterson, a popular bride-elect of this month.

Roberts-Forest.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Grubbs announce the marriage of their niece, Miss Bessie Curry Roberts, to Mr. Joe Runey Forrest, at their home, in Sylvestor, Ga., June 22, 1913.

Coffee-Poller.

Mr. J. A. Coffee announces the marriage of her daughter, Eugenia Brown, to Dr. Alphonse Raymond Poller, the marriage to take place in Vienna, Austria, May 18.

Birthday Reception.

Mrs. H. M. Jones entertained at a lovely reception yesterday afternoon, in compliment to Mr. R. H. Stewart, of Chicago, who, with his daughter, Mrs. George R. Stewart, are the guests of Mrs. Jones, after attending the reunion in Chattanooga.

The occasion marked the seventy-fifth birthday of the honor guest, and was a very happy one. Mrs. Jones' home on West Peachtree street was decorated with palms and ferns, and a profusion of white carnations and sweet peas artistically arranged.

The table in the dining room was covered with a cluny lace cloth, and the centerpiece was a plateau of carnations and sweet peas.

A white birthday cake, embossed with pink sweet peas, was a feature of the attractive table, and all other details were in pink and white.

Lunch was served in the den by Mrs. J. A. Baldwin, and assisting in entertaining were Miss Kirkpatrick and Mrs. W. H. Foster.

Mrs. Jones was gowned in cream chamoisee satin with lace draperies, and Mrs. Stewart wore a white lace gown.

Mrs. Sewell Entertains.

Mrs. J. A. Sewell delightfully entertained her Fancy Work club at her home on Grant street Thursday afternoon.

Twelve club members and four other guests enjoyed Mrs. Sewell's hospitality.

Mrs. J. W. Tallent will entertain the club Friday afternoon, June 13, at her home on Grant street.

Junior Banquet.

A delightful event of Friday evening was the banquet given at the Aragon by the Junior class B, of the Boys' High school.

The toastmaster of the occasion was Mrs. J. P. Stewart, and other appointed speakers for the evening were Messrs. Spurlock, Johnson and Hendrix. Short impromptu talks were made by Messrs. Keaton and Price, the president of the class.

For Wedding Party.

Mrs. A. Waddy will entertain at a buffet supper at her home on Courtland street for her daughter, Miss Irene Hartzog, and Dr. J. C. Wright, after the church rehearsal for their wedding on Wednesday evening.

Hartzog-Wright.

The marriage of Miss Irene Hartzog and Dr. Jesse Colquitt Wright will be an interesting event of the week, taking place Thursday morning at the First Methodist church at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. C. N. Dennis will be Miss Hartzog's matron of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Esdie Wright, of Chattahoochee, and Miss Etie Westbrook, of Fairburn. Mr. Robert W. Spies will be best man and the ushers will be Colonel Frank L. Newville, Mr. C. N. Dennis, Mr. George Cunningham, Mr. J. E. Duffie.

The ceremony will be performed by Dr. DuBose, and Miss Irene Bearden will play the wedding music.

There will be a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's mother on Courtland street, after which Dr. Wright and his bride will leave for an automobile trip through North Carolina and Tennessee. On their return they will be at home with the bride's mother.

Rosser-Holcomb.

Griffin, Ga., May 31.—(Special).—An elaborate social event in Griffin will occur next Thursday evening, June 5, when Miss Mary Rosser, of this place, and Mr. Alfred Starr Holcomb, of Atlanta, will be joined in marriage.

The ceremony will be performed in the First Methodist church, of which the bride is a member, and will be said by Rev. Richard Orme Flinn, pastor of the North Avenue Presbyterian church, of Atlanta.

Northcutt, of Chattanooga, Ga., and Robert Walker of Griffin, will be ushers. Miss Mary Louise Warren, of Griffin, a niece of the bride, will be flower girl.

Nearly 500 invitations have been issued, and a very large number of visitors and guests are expected to be present and witness the marriage. Among them, Mrs. F. L. Immediately after the wedding the bride and groom will leave for the home of the groom, where they will be at home for a part of the summer to a summer home at the foot of Missionary Ridge, near Chattanooga, Tenn. In the fall a permanent home will be established in Kennesaw, Ga., at which place Mr. Holcomb has been transferred and promoted in his insurance work.

Miss Rosser is the daughter of the late Rev. John E. Rosser, former member of the North Georgia Methodist conference. She is quite gifted in art and music. She has studied at several institutions, holding a diploma for voice culture from Shorter college.

North Avenue School.
On Friday morning the children of the North Avenue Presbyterian school, school. The songs sung by the prize of the year of study. The most interesting feature of the exercises was the fact that they were representative of the regular work of the school. The songs sang by the primary grades were some of the ones learned during the year. The little play that the fourth grade presented was done in the same manner in which the children give dramatized their reading lessons. The eighth grade gave a folk play which reflected credit on the members of the grade, for they had managed the training and the presentation with very little help. The living pictures posed by the high school, with some assistance from the primary grades, were favorite personages chosen from their history and literature.

Besides the pupils who took part in the entertainment, especial praise is due to Isabel Gullm, Frances Knight, Lin Adams, Thomas Hull and Emery Flinn, who managed the staging and lighting.

Before the guests were seated they were shown exhibits of the handwork done in the various departments. The drawings of the younger children showed excellent training. From the higher grades there were note books showing some of the splendid Bible work that has been done by every class in the school. The history classes displayed the scrapbooks which have helped to vitalize their interest in the great deeds of the past. The girls of the home economics department exhibited creditable specimens of their work in sewing and cooking, and the boys demonstrated by a display of woodwork what they have done in the annual training class, and towers used in decorations were grown in the school gardens.

Announcement was made of the winner of the U. D. C. medal which Mrs. McCabe had offered to the school. This year the subject of the essay was John B. Gordon. The medal was won by Helen McCarty, and honorable mention was given to Frances Knight, Majorie Weidon and Dorothy Albright.

Miss Bates Entertains.

A happy occasion of Friday evening was the dance and lawn fête given by Miss Annie Bates at her home on West Peachtree street. The house was thrown together and decorated with palms, ferns and flowers, and an orchestra furnished bright music for the dancers.

The lawn was lighted with many Japanese lanterns, and presiding at the punch bowls were Misses Sarah Banks, Naomi Jemison, Irene King and Maude Barker Cobb. Delicious refreshments were served on the lawn during the evening. Miss Bates wore a dainty gown of white shadow lace over white, with trimmings of pink satin, and she was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Winship Bates.

The guests included about two hundred and fifty of the schoolgirl and boy set.

Birthday Party.

One of the most enjoyable events of the week was the birthday party given by Mr. and Mrs. George B. Hill in honor of their daughter, Miss Dora May, who celebrated her ninth birthday. Games were enjoyed. Prizes were won by Miss Helen Witherspoon, Miss Annie Wolpert, Miss Theresa Knoff. Refreshments were served in the spacious dining room, which was decorated with panicles and sweet peas. Miss Caryl Caffin, Mrs. Otis Witherspoon, Mrs. E. Rogers, Mrs. James Hollowell and Mrs. J. E. Morgan assisted in entertaining the guests. Music by Mr. George B. Hill was enjoyed.

The guests were Misses Margie Morgan, Bertha Knoff, Edna Rogers, Martha Rogers, Mary Hightower, Maude Knoff, Edna Thompson, Florine Wilson, Delle Mae Hill, Thelma Hollowell, Helen Frambrough, Ethel De Lorm, Helen Witherspoon, Marguerite Lacy, Annie Wolpert, Messrs. William Wolpert, J. T. De Lorm, Harold Hollowell, Jim Caffin, Harold Goldstein, Leman Lacy, Inis Frambrough and Beverly Rogers.

One thousand cards have been issued to the friends and acquaintances of the troop and the Hyperion club and Entre Nous have also joined in with the troop, all expecting to have an enjoyable time. Refreshments in the form of "Military Lunch" will be served, this being a delightful beverage made famous by being served by the Governor's Horse Guard at all of their dances.

All arrangements are in the hands of a committee of three, composed of R. Marshall Todd, chairman, S. LaPrade Sloan and E. Horine Andrews.

Exercises at Hanna School.

One of the most beautiful and unique entertainments of the past week was the commencement exercises of the Hanna school. A large and appreciative audience greeted the pupils of this well known institution, and from first to last they held the attention of their listeners, both in the graduation exercises proper and in their production of the beautiful classic play "Eurytion," adapted from the noted poem of that name by Keats. Especially fine was the rendering of the prologue "A thing of beauty is a joy forever," by Miss Vivian Mathis, who showed a fine appreciation of the beauties of the author.

The spectacular features of the play were fine, and the beautiful voice of Miss Cyburn lent charm to the performance.

The faculty and pupils of the school are much to be congratulated on this successful performance.

Taylor-Bagley Wedding.

At the Baptist church in Avondale Wednesday evening, Miss Audrey Bagley and Mr. Vincent Taylor were married in the presence of a large number of their friends.

The altar was banked with ferns and palms and at 9 o'clock the two ushers, Mr. Upshaw Bentley and Mr. Gus Taylor, led the processional. Mrs. Bennett, of East Lake, was the matron of honor. She entered alone wearing a becoming toilette of white chiffon over khaki mesaline and carried white roses. She was followed by the two bridesmaids, Miss Grace Bentley and Miss Ethel McCool. The groomsmen, Mr. Cary Bentley and Mr. Andrews proceeded down the aisle in advance of the maid of honor, Miss Vivian Bagley, the bride's sister. Artistic Dissipation

The designing of the tea set must be a kind of mental relaxation with the artist whose specialty is designing in Silver. So much of the freedom and originality, both of line and detail, is permissible, that real enthusiasm can have full play. But the end in view must always be an air of elegant conventionality. The reflection is apropos of our beautiful showing in time for June weddings.

PADEREWSKI touches DOWN on the Keys

MELVILLE CLARK'S

APOLLO

The Player Piano

If Paderewski is Right, The Apollo is Right

All pianists, great or indifferent, play the piano with a downward stroke on the keys. That is the only way to play a piano. To pound on the strings without the delicately balanced keys is to abuse a delicate instrument.

Yet the Apollo is the only Player Piano that touches down on the keys

All other manufacturers could make inside players with a downward stroke on the keys if they could; but they are protected in the exclusive right to do this by U. S. Patent No. 75,617.

Since this is only one correct way to play a piano, and all others are denied the right to make a player that plays that way, and since we charge no more than manufacturers whom our patents compel to use a substitute method, are you not sufficiently interested in the Apollo to come and see for yourself?

Come and learn about the solo device, the self-acting motor, the transposing device, the accompaniment player—all exclusive features of the Apollo.

These things are being demonstrated daily in our salerooms. We are exclusive agents in this territory for this marvel of music. Melville Clark's without reserve $200.

THE ONLY REAL HAIR SAVER AND HAIR GROWER

Price One Dollar at Drug, Hardware and Dept. Stores

Those who have tried the many so-called Hair Tonics, Hair Restorers, Hair Foods, etc., as found in the shops, know they are practically worthless; they don't touch the spot. Prof. Melnichoff, Europe's greatest Biologist and Scientist, discovered that all hair and ailments are due to certain germs or parasites that are propagated in the hair roots, where they feed on the elements that are intended to nourish the hair and supply its color. And he found that these germs could be reached and destroyed only by the Electro-Magnetic-Heat of the ARSENERION COMB, which also cures Dandruff, itching, hair-fall and itching, prevents Premature Grayness, and changes a "kink" into a "wave."

Savannah, Ga., May 31—(Special Correspondence)—The wedding of next week will be preceded by a number of parties.

Monday Miss Dorothy Baldwin will give a luncheon for Miss Battey, and Monday afternoon a tea will be given for her and for Miss Laura Boyd by Mrs. John Cabell Miss Boyd's marriage to Dr. W. F. Shallenberger will take place Saturday evening.

Tuesday Mrs. John Heard Hunter will give a luncheon for Miss Battey, and Tuesday evening Miss Carolyn Myers will entertain the wedding party after the rehearsal.

At the wedding of Miss Ada Turner and Mr. William de Bruyn Kops Wednesday evening, Miss Fanny Turner, of Atlanta, the bride's sister will be her maid of honor and Miss Jane Hopkins and Miss Henrietta Seaboard bridesmaids.

The girls of the Pape school enjoyed their annual picnic at Tybee yesterday. The younger girls went down for the day, returning at 6 o'clock and the older ones went down this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock and returned at 10.

A very elaborate toilet can scarcely be devised in even the latest styles, so the modiste is put to it in selection of both fabric and style.

For an Atlanta woman who will make several week end auto trips from one point, an evening gown which can easily be folded and put in the big valise is of the softest white charmeuse.

For her debutante daughter in the same party was an evening gown of white embroidered chiffon with a white silk, lace introduced on both skirt and corsage and appropriate ornaments.

A pretty school girl who will be present at the entertainments incidental to Annapolis commencement, has been decorated for the occasion.

The guests were received at the door by Mrs. W. D. Cunningham, Miss Mami and Mrs. Sumner in the reception line were Mrs. T. R. Perry, gowned in Copenhagen blue charmeuse, with hat to match.

In the afternoon Miss Emily Charlton and Mrs. Nellie Innes Hay accompanied the girls, and in the party were Misses Ethel Boy, Eleanor Ellen Carter, Lois Carter, Pauline Corson Ruth Hoppe, Ermine Munford, Gladys Patton Nelson, Margaret White Helen Carson, Ruth Artley Inez Farnes, Paul Jones, Rietie Gandy, Ruth Davis, Page Anderson Marjorie Catts.

That the people tend to stay in Savannah later and later each season, is undoubtedly true, and with the high light weather that has prevailed this spring there seems less reason than ever to leave the comfortable big house at home in its summer array for the doubtful pleasure of the summer resorts.

North Hatley Can is one of the places where a number of Savannah people go each season. Mr. and Mrs. Haskell even had their own home there as do Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Walthour and Colonel and Mrs. Beine Gordon.

AUGUSTA'S SOCIAL SIDE

Augusta, Ga., May 31.—(Special Correspondence)—Miss Arrington Butt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Butt, who has been a popular visitor for some weeks past, left this week for Annapolis to visit friends, and later will be with Mrs. Maggie Barrett Dugas and Miss Dugas at the White Sulphur Springs, Va. Mr. and Mrs. Butt have made their home in England for a number of years, and this was the first visit of their young lady daughter to the old home of her parents. She was pretty and charming in manner, and has been very popular during her stay in Augusta. Just before her departure she was entertained with a bridge party by Miss Margaret Wright at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Boykin Wright. The Hill, Miss Isabella Phinley was awarded the prize for the high score; Miss Virginia Anderson drew the consolation; and Miss Bate was presented with a dainty workbag as a souvenir of the occasion.

Miss Edith Jackson, whose marriage to Mr. Bishop Alexander will occur June 18, was complimented on Tuesday with a dainty bride party by Mrs. Leroy Hankinson at her charming home in North Augusta. The house was filled with bright flowers and a delightful luncheon was served after the game. Miss Mary Porter carried off the high-score prize; Miss Virginia Carter drew the consolation; Miss Therese Dugas the low-score prize; and Miss Edith Jackson was presented a pair of silk hose as souvenir.

Mrs. B. S. Dyer and Mrs. Roseor Perkins carried off the prizes at the Tuesday card club, for which Mrs. Eugene Murphy was hostess.

Miss Edith Jackson was entertained informally, but very delightfully, at bridge on Friday afternoon by Miss Calene Broome.

Mrs. Laura Duffy, after a pleasant sojourn here, left Friday for Philadelphia.

Mr. Hale Houston, now of Houston, Texas, is visiting his brother, Dr. W. R. Houston.

Miss Terence Batey has gone on a visit to relatives in Savannah.

Mrs. James P. McGowan is visiting friends in Athens.

The North Augusta Bridge club was entertained on Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. J. L. Beckwith, delightful afternoon following the game. Mrs. Andrew Walden received the high-score prize, and Mrs. Anderson Shibley drew the consolation. The party was profusely decorated with flowers, and five tables of bridge were played.

Forbes entertained her Sunday school class with a picnic at Lakeview Tuesday afternoon.

The Redpath chautauqua, with its three daily sessions, this week, has proven not only a musical and literary success, but decidedly a pleasant social feature. Making new friends, new friends and acquaintances each day.

The Philomathic club has chosen the modern drama for the subject of its 1913-14 entertainments, and the presence of Dr. Thomas Barney Thompson, lecturing each morning at the chautauqua on "The Drama," has proven a great treat and inspiration to the members of the club. Dr. Thompson was the guest of the Philomathic at their last meeting in the season of Wednesday afternoon at the rooms of the Young Women's Christian association, and gave them a most entertaining and encouraging talk, giving new impetus and enthusiasm to the work of the club.

Miss Jessie Mae Moon, after a pleasant stay with Mrs. Kelly Ranson, on Greene street, has returned to her home in Georgetown, Ky.

Miss Helen Hatch has gone to Tennille to join a pleasant home party.

It is somewhat of a coincidence that the social columns are carrying at the same time the marriage of Dr. John C. Wright, of Tennille, to Miss Helen Greenberg, of San Francisco, to Augusta to marry Miss Hannah Baron. One of the members of the club, the afternoon of the 1910 minstrel was the banquet tendered President James J. Mathews Thursday night at the "College Inn." Mr. Mathews was taken by surprise. He was quietly induced to enter the establishment, and found waiting in the banquet room nearly every member of the 1920 Minstrel club. Before the delightful supper was served, Mr. W. D. Irwin, acting as toastmaster, arose, and in a few appropriate words presented to Mr. Mathews, as gifts from the members of the 1920 Minstrel club, a handsome pair of diamond studded link buttons and a stickpin to match. Mr. Mathews responded with one of his character-

HYDROPHOBIA MAY BE ELIMINATED

No Case in England Since 1902—Plan to Drive the Disease From the State of Georgia.

Can rabies in dogs and its equivalent, hydrophobia in human beings, be eliminated from Georgia? That is one of the problems that the legislature will be asked to solve this summer. A bill will be introduced giving the state board of health larger discretionary powers to order the muzzling of dogs and to make regulations governing their transfer from one locality to another.

Can Be Eliminated.
That the disease can be stamped out altogether and that without very much difficulty when once its elimination is undertaken in earnest is the conviction of the health board and of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. With a few to this end, the chamber of commerce, through the chairman of its committee on public safety, W. J. Lowenstein, has recently instituted a careful research into what has been done in other countries toward combating the disease. Here are some of the things Mr. Lowenstein has found:

The first countries in Europe to take up the fight in the disease were Norway and Sweden. There has not been an authenticated case of rabies or hydrophobia in those countries for more than a generation.

Germany next tackled the problem and in nearly all of the German states the disease has been entirely eradicated.

England's Experience.
The first legislation in England on the subject was as long ago as 1871, but no serious effort was made to rid the land of the disorder until 1897, when the board of agriculture, which is by law invested with power to deal with the subject, issued a sweeping order taking upon itself the supervision of all muzzling regulations which had previously been enforced solely by the local authorities, and adopted a rigid provision for the muzzling of all dogs in infected districts and the slaughter of those known to have been bitten by an infected animal.

No Case Since 1902.
As a result of the change of attitude toward the subject, there has not been a case of hydrophobia in England since 1899, and there has not been a proven case of rabies among dogs in that country since 1902. In the period of eleven years, as the eradication of the disease was brought about within five years it was at once seriously taken up notwithstanding the fact that for fifteen or twenty years before that time it had been a scourge to the people of Georgia to understand just how they did it.

In England, just as well as in all the other countries that have earnestly sought to eradicate the evil, it was undertaken in the way of successful muzzling with the disease was by enforcing the muzzling of dogs at large and in public places. They did not try to muzzle all the dogs in the country at one time, but to put into effect positive regulations on the subject in country districts difficult of access, but they did subject large areas to muzzling orders and to a system of close inspection for the purpose of discovering the malady at the minute it should break out, and by gradually extending these areas of muzzling and rigid inspection, in a remarkably brief period of time they had all the dogs in the country under observation as it were, and rendered it next to impossible for a case of rabies to break out, while their rigid rules governing the importation of animals prevented the introduction of any dogs that had been exposed to the disease from abroad.

It was at the close of the year 1899 that measures were first taken by the privy council to check the progress of rabies in London and it was determined by the board of agriculture to extend the operation of muzzling to the thickly populated districts of Lancashire, Yorkshire and other localities where the disease was prevalent. The result was that, while the reported cases had risen from 150 in 1898 to 312 in 1899, they were reduced to 129 in 1899. In 1891 they fell to 79, and in 1892 to only 38 reported cases. Then, owing to the opposition of dog owners to the muzzling regulations were for a time relaxed and the problem again abandoned to the local authorities. In 1893 the number of cases of rabies rose from 38 in the preceding year to 92, in 1894 it rose to 248, and in 1895, the extremely high figure of 672 reported cases was reached.

It was now evident to the board that the local authorities could not be expected to cope with the situation, and that if it were really desired to exterminate rabies and hydrophobia from the country, it could only be done by general muzzling regulations scientifically applied to all sections of the island. Each local authority naturally hesitated to incur the odium of making muzzling regulations that, if successful in extirpating the disease from its own boundaries, could only be reintroduced from a neighboring local authority that had not co-operated in the work.

When the board of agriculture seriously undertook to rid the country of the disease by its general order of 1897, which compelled the muzzling of all dogs in public places in those localities where any cases of rabies had been reported, the effect was quickly apparent. As has already been indicated, the disease in dogs was practically eradicated in 1899, since which year there has been no case of hydrophobia in the island, and entirely so since 1902, since which time no authenticated case of rabies has occurred.

But it was not sufficient for the board merely to apply its restrictive regulations to dogs that were already in the country. Close espionage must be kept on imported dogs in order to prevent the introduction of the disease from abroad. It was required that every imported dog should be kept in confinement or at least isolated on the premises of its owner for a period of six months after its landing. This is the limit of the time during which the disease may develop in a dog that has been bitten by an infected animal. Anyone who desired to import a dog must first obtain a license from the board to do so, and the license required that the destination of the animal be approved by the board and under the control of a veterinary surgeon. No mitigation of the rule was allowed, except in the case of performing dogs and dogs which were to be exported within forty-eight hours after their arrival.

That the situation in Georgia is far more serious than it was in Great Britain, when these muzzling regulations were first undertaken is clearly indicated in the reports of the state board of health. Not only are there many more cases of the disease reported annually in this state than in England's bad year, 1895, but they are increasing in number at a really alarming rate. This is notwithstanding the fact that the dog population of England is considerably larger than that of Georgia, and the number of human beings is between fifteen and twenty times as great.

Health Board's Figures.
Here are some of the figures which show how the disease has progressed in Georgia since the introduction of the Pasteur treatment by the board of health in 1908. These figures, be it understood, are not of muzzling dogs reported as in England, for there is no law requiring the reporting of dogs afflicted with rabies, but of persons actually treated who have been bitten by animals reported to be infected. In the year 1908, 215 cases were treated; in 1909, 442; in 1910, 482; in 1911, 483, and in 1912, 673. In 1913 the report for the first quarter alone shows 301 cases treated, which ratio, if kept up for the balance of the year, would bring the total over 1,200, nearly double the last year, which was greater than any that had preceded it.

The 673 cases treated last year were at a cost to the state of about $5.50 for each treatment. While even this is a great saving as compared with the treatment of patients at a private institution as formerly, it will be seen that the eradication of the disease will mean a further economy to the state treasury of several thousand dollars annually.

Increase Alarming.
It is true that of the 2,596 cases treated by the board since the installation of the treatment, only nine have died, and that five of the nine had developed the disease before the treatment was applied, but this only proves the efficiency of the treatment and does not lessen in any respect the magnitude of the problem indicated by the rapid increase in the number of cases treated. That this increase cannot be attributed to hysteria or unreasonable fear in the patients treated is proved by the fact that of 1,351 brains of dogs examined by the board for evidence of rabies during the five-year period under review, 999 were positive and 352 negative. This shows that nearly 66 2-3 per cent of the slaughtered animals sent to the board for examination are found to have been afflicted by the disease.

To Pass Moderate Law.
It is not the intention of the chamber of commerce of Atlanta and of others interested in legislation to object to having an act of radical nature passed that the temper of the people would not allow of its enforcement. They realize that there are too many dead letter laws on the statute book already. They are not asking for a law that would put muzzling on the faces of every canine in Georgia without regard to breed or location, but they are asking for legislation that will give the board of health increased authority to cope with the subject.

In the first place, they would have some registration of diseased animals adopted so that the board might be able to tell just how prevalent rabies is in each locality. Then they would have the board given authority to order the muzzling of dogs in those localities, particularly in cities, where the disease is found to be most prevalent. Third and lastly, they would have the board given authority to inspect and isolate animals shipped into the state from other states and foreign countries, so that the disease might not be introduced from abroad.

Say Muzzling Humane.
One of the chief arguments advanced by the opponents of muzzling is that it is an unnecessary cruelty imposed upon the animal. It is hardly fair, they say, that the entire canine population should be made to suffer torture to keep a few from being bitten by a stray mad animal. On the other hand, the advocates of muzzling insist that the dog soon accustoms himself to the muzzle, and is not at all inconvenienced by it, and that as an instrument of torture it is not to be compared to the bit when first introduced into the mouth of a young colt or the cheek rain from which all horses suffer, young and old, in the physical suffering it produces. It is not to be compared with vaccination for smallpox in human beings. Yet the most tender-hearted mother freely consents to the vaccination of her child in order that it may be immune from smallpox, a disease that is not half so horrible or deadly as hydrophobia.

Necessity Thereof Temporary.
Then the advocates of muzzling urge that its necessity will only be temporary while its results will be permanent. Once you have eradicated the disease from the state, it will no longer be necessary to apply the muzzle. Says Dr. H. Harris, secretary of the board of health:

"If I could muzzle every dog in Georgia for six months and prevent the introduction of infected animals from outside, rabies and hydrophobia would be entirely unknown in the state."

NO RACING PLANNED.
The Public Invited to Inspect New Motordrome.
Following a conference with Police Chief Beavers, Saturday morning, Councilman Claude L. Ashley, of the Fourth ward, made the statement that the police would be asked to stop the exhibition motordrome if any are attempted, Sunday afternoon.

Councilman Ashley says he does not object to the concert, but he is against exhibition races on Sunday, even though no admission be charged. "There will be hundreds of negroes attracted to the place, and there is certain to be some disorder," Councilman Ashley says. "I am not fighting the races nor the management of the track. I don't want the Sunday peace and quiet of the people of the Fourth ward disturbed, and I have asked Chief Beavers to send men out to stop the races, if any are attempted."

"In my announcement in the daily press," said Jack Prince, it was specifically stated that no riding would be done, but that the management and all riders would be on hand to show the fans just what the motordrome is and to explain all the details of the tracks and the machines.

"Therefore, it is hardly necessary for me to comment on this resolution. It has no meaning, as there will be nothing at the track that can be stopped, unless they see fit to stop the band concert."

By J. D. MCARTNEY.

In 1832, the state of Georgia began to realize that it was worth while to educate the deaf, and efforts were begun in that year looking to the ultimate establishment of a state school for these unfortunates.

After many vicissitudes, the movement reached a point in 1846 where the Hearn academy at Cave Spring was induced to establish a department for deaf children, and systematically to educate them.

Oliver P. Fannin, a native Georgian and assistant principal of Hearn, was deputed to go to Hartford, Conn., to learn the methods of teaching the deaf from the American Asylum for Deaf at that place.

He returned in a few months, and on the 15th day of May, 1846, in a little log cabin at Cave Spring, with an enrollment of four pupils, began the work which has grown steadily, and almost by its own efforts, into a great institution of usefulness to the state and nation.

In 1849, the first real state institution was opened in a very modest way, with Mr. Fannin as superintendent. Its growth was rapid, for it filled a real want, and when the war between the states began in 1861 more than fifty pupils were in attendance.

Three years previous to this time Wesley O. Connor had entered the service of the school as instructor, but, feeling the call of his state, he enlisted in the confederate army, and served through that conflict, in spite of an offer of the school's superintendency if he would resign his military position. All the male teachers of the school, regarding their duty in the same light as Mr. Connor, went to the war and left no one in charge of the institution. It was, therefore, closed until the end of the conflict.

In Charge of Institution Since Civil War.

In 1866, after he was released from Camp Chase, where he was a federal prisoner, Mr. Connor was called back to assume the management of the institution. With fidelity and efficiency he has since served continuously in the same capacity, until he is now, as superintendent of the state institution, the oldest in point of service, and best-known instructor of the deaf in the United States.

The location of the Georgia School for the Deaf is at Cave Spring, Floyd county, 16 miles from Rome, on a branch of the Southern railway.

The environment is pastoral, though not inconveniently so. Cave Spring, with 1,000 people, is not large enough to present those diversions and temptations which beset pupils of schools located in cities. The high altitude and picturesque scenery is as bracing and delightful as the state can furnish. Located in the famous Van's valley, the school can raise and buy its vegetables, chickens, eggs and produce at from 20 to 30 per cent less than elsewhere. By this fact alone the state saves several thousands of dollars annually.

As its name implies, this is a school for the education of deaf persons strictly, and in no sense an asylum, any more than the colleges at Dahlonega, Athens or the Tech in Atlanta; neither is it a charitable institution.

It is a public school established for the benefit of such persons as are too deaf to be instructed by methods used in other public schools in the state. All persons over seven and under twenty-five years of age, who are mentally and physically in condition to receive instruction profitably, but so deaf that they cannot be taught in the common schools, are entitled to the benefits of the institution free of charge. Absolutely no fees are charged for such length of time not to exceed twelve scholastic years, both board and clothing being furnished.

The control of the school is in the hands of a board of trustees, seven in number, appointed by the governor. W. J. Griffin, who was appointed on the board in 1899, has been chairman for ten years while D. W. Simmons, clerk of the superior court of Floyd county, has been secretary and treasurer of it for several decades. The other members of the board are Dr. J. W. Taylor, of Luthersville; Dr. William Bradford, of Cedartown; Hon. P. M. Hawes, of Elberton; H. C. Arnall, of Newnan; Wilson M. Hardy, of Rome, and W. T. Roberts, of Douglasville. Professor Wesley O. Connor is principal, and Miss Nettie McDaniel, assistant principal. They have an able corps of assistants.

Pioneer in Vocational Training in South.

The Georgia School for the Deaf was the pioneer in industrial education and vocational training in the south. The pupils are taught those simple occupations by which they can earn an honest living in competition with those who speak and hear. The trades of the shoemaker, the printer, the tailor, carpenter, barber, painter, harness-maker, wood carver, pyrographer, hair dresser, dressmaker, rug maker, farmer, truck gardener and domestic science are among those which the pupils are taught at Cave Spring, and in which they become quite proficient.

More than 1,200 boys and girls, by virtue of their training, have left the institution to become solid and substantial citizens, instead of wards of the state.

The 1910 census reveals the fact that there were in Georgia only 22 deaf children of school age not enrolled in the G. S. D., and several of these were in private institutions in Georgia and New York. This shows the unanimity with which the deaf people appreciate the opportunities afforded them to gain an education. The enrollment at Cave Spring this year is 170.

Seventh State in Union to Establish School.

Georgia was the seventh state in the union to establish a school for the deaf. Inspired by the work of the Cave Spring institution, J. H. Johnson, one of the trustees, founded a similar school at Talladega, immediately after the war. He has been succeeded by his son and grandson, both namesakes.

The large and complete plant at the Georgia School for the Deaf enables the state to educate its deaf at a minimum cost. Over 100 acres of fertile land cultivated intensively and scientifically, with dairies, water and lighting plants, go far toward making the institution and each individual pupil a unit self-sustaining. The farm work and domestic work is done largely by the pupils.

In recent years there has been a wide discussion of the merits of two methods of teaching the deaf—the oral and the manual. Experience has shown that the best results are obtained by using both, and the G. S. D. does this.

When it becomes apparent that a pupil can be taught to read the lips of a person talking, he is instructed in the oral method. On the other hand, there are large numbers who cannot be successfully taught the oral method, and these are instructed to talk an read by signs and finger-movements.

Velled criticism which has been made of several southern institutions because they have not forsaken the first method of teaching—the manual—has been well meant, but ill advised. Those pupils who are hardest to teach, the dullest, cannot be taught in any other way. By using both methods, as is done in the largest deaf schools of the United States, all classes of children can be reached. No institution can carry out its mission in any other way.

Professor Stockard, of the Cornell

University Medical college, has announced through the Journal of the American Medical association his discoveries of the effects of alcohol on racial degeneration.

The result of the investigations has shown conclusively that alcohol may affect the offspring through either parent. In order that records of degenerates, statistics on insanity and the great quantity of other-contributed evidence could be verified by actual tests, the doctor began his experiments on lower animals.

It is wonderful how every opposition appears to lose its substance when men actually grapple with it.

BR'ER RABBIT BRISBANE.

Arthur Brisbane most brilliant of the Hearst editorial galaxy, is the Br'er Rabbit of American journalism. Br'er Rabbit was the envied of all the field animals for one cute trick—he was the slipperiest customer the field held when it came to getting out of awkward corners.

The original issue was the Covington 'lamplight funeral' sob-story, published editorially some weeks ago by Brother Brisbane as an indictment of Georgia civilization. The Constitution objected to having Georgia thus unjustifiably placarded. It probed and pounded the life out of that yarn.

Here is how the machinery goes around His original sob-story, based ostensibly upon an item in The Covington News, ran to the effect that a girl worker in the Covington cotton mills had died of consumption. Her friends in the mills wanted to attend the funeral. The mill owners were too greedily greedy to let them off in the daytime.

The Constitution knew no such outrage could occur in this state. Before making inquiry, even, it said so. Simultaneously, it acquitted Mr Brisbane of any intention to slander Georgia. We declared our belief that he had been imposed upon.

Now to the premises upon which Mr Brisbane builds his tearful dissertation upon child labor, an imaginary cold trail of his invention which now turns up for the first time in connection with this case—which has nothing whatsoever to do with child labor.

first three paragraphs of his editorial reproduced on this page. Note his charges and then, on the basis that they are true, how magnificently he condemns with a sweep of the hand a civilization that permit of such a horrible state of affairs—utterly diaregardful of the fact that there is not a scintilla of truth in either one of the three premises on which he draws the doleful conclusion in the fourth paragraph immediately following his three paragraphed premises.

Premise No. 1—"A girl who had worked in the Covington mill, at Covington, Ga, died of consumption"

The "girl," who was a woman aged 25 years, never worked in the Covington mill. That fact is admitted. Premise No. 2—"The funeral service was held at night because her friends wanted to attend the funeral. And they couldn't attend the funeral in the daytime, as they had to be in the mills in the daytime"

The funeral service was held at night, at the request of the family, to meet a family exigency. The interment was held in broad daylight. At that interment were dozens and dozens of the girl's friends who worked in the cotton mill, very few of whom were at the service the night before. One and all, they testified they had no difficulty in getting away from the mill in the daytime. They never had difficulty in getting away from the mill in the daytime, and they were never penalized in wages or conditions. The PREACHER who conducted the service will probably be accepted as a competent witness. HE TESTIFIES THAT THE NIGHT SERVICE WAS HELD AT THE REQUEST OF THE FAMILY, AND FROM NO EXIGENCY OF EMPLOYERS' OPPRESSION, AND THAT THERE WAS ABSOLUTELY NO BASIS FOR THE "LAMPLIGHT FUNERAL YARN."

Premise No. 3—"The facts were taken by this newspaper from The Covington News published where the thing happened"

The only fact, as we have said, taken from The Covington News, was the bare announcement of the night service. The embellishments were supplied to Mr. Brisbane by a private correspondent, who has since admitted to The Constitution that he was misinformed, and that he so informed Mr. Brisbane.

How unjust, therefore, Mr Brisbane's conclusion. "We have said, and we repeat, that it is a fine picture of our civilization when a working girl who dies of consumption before she is 25 must have a night funeral in order to give her friends a chance to see the last of her"

Of course! And who wouldn't say the same thing if such a condition existed anywhere? As to the child labor issue, dragged into the discussion to divert attention from the real issue, The Constitution's attitude in that matter has been more effectual in Georgia than Mr Brisbane's has been in New York. We have the advantage of him, in that conditions are infinitely better in Georgia, in this respect, as he admits, than in New York. In the bettering of these conditions, The Constitution is proud to say it has taken a leading part.

We have brought Br'er Rabbit Brisbane back to the facts. He should now, in simple fairness to a people, retract the statement that the "Covington outrage"—proven to be purely a myth—is an indictment of our civilization. Will he not give Georgia the benefit of his circulation to right a wrong unintentionally put upon the state?

WHO IS READY?

With a crematory ready to work and summer at hand—

ANYBODY WHO ASSUMES THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR NOT LETTING IT PERFORM ITS LIFE-SAVING FUNCTION—

May be prepared to accept accountability for the first death ensuing from municipal inefficiency.

THE HEAD IN THE SAND.

The supreme court of Georgia has in reality done the city of Atlanta a service. It has taken the municipal head out of the sand where, for a good many years, it has been hidden in sublime indifference to the menace that has hedged the city on every side. The supreme court is going to bring us down to brass tacks as regards this city's present and future. It has told us that the moral obligation device, upon which we have depended for nearly all of the imperative public improvements for the past few decades, is a broken reed. The tribunal did not pass on or deny that the improvements secured by this method were indispensable, that was not within its province. But every Atlantian of sound mind knows they were and are indispensable. What the supreme court has done is to decree that hereafter and forever the moral obligation device is to be abandoned.

not so held, Atlanta might have gone on indefinitely pursuing that course and cramping itself in many vital particulars. That bogie is now brushed aside and we stand face to face with naked facts.

What are we going to do about it? Admittedly, the city is run down at the heel, municipally-speaking. Nearly all of its public facilities are inadequate. Schools are insufficient in floor space, vulnerable to fire. Our sanitary functions are, from financial cramp, notably insufficient. Our streets are ragged, lacking in uniformity, needing to be regraded, readjusted. Our sewer and water system requires standardization.

In almost every detail, turn where you will, will be seen the crying need for the knif of the municipal surgeon, cutting away the old rotten growth and replacing it with healthy material, material so fitted as to stand the pressure of expansion no less than the obvious requirements of the moment.

In meeting this situation we have been essaying the impossible. We have been trying to take care of current up-keep and also of growth, and all out of current income. No other city of size attempts this economic insanity. Any business house that tried it would be put out of commission by the mercantile agencies and its creditors. And if Atlanta keeps it up after the thundering warning of the supreme court, she is going to face a heavy future penalty.

The logical way out is the authorization of a bond issue sufficient to wipe out the neglect of the past and to get the balance in trim for the future. Already council has provided for a commission on the initiative of Councilman Thomson, for a thorough probe as to the advisability and scope of a bond issue. Its work should be prosecuted speedily but conservatively. We have five or six millions of credit lying absolutely idle. The city is suffering and will suffer still more for the need of improvements that are permanent in their nature, and in the payment of which it is simple justice that posterity should have its share. The constitutional restrictions around Atlanta's credit are so hidebound as to make any bond issue by this city religiously safe. Atlanta's credit is gilded in the money market.

The supreme court has made us take our head out of the sand. It is time for us to realize our duties and opportunities in the premises and get busy.

MADE IN ATLANTA.

The committee of Atlanta merchants who investigated the working of Chattanooga's permanent "home made" industrial exhibit have returned home with glowing reports of the enterprise. They are strongly of the opinion that Atlanta should do the same thing.

Atlanta's exposition of last August was an indication of what even a temporary display can accomplish. It showed that a regular exhibit would be of incalculable value in encouraging the coming here of new industries and promoting the patronizing of home industries.

A careful analysis of the expenditures of Atlanta for the necessities and luxuries of life would, undoubtedly, disclose that we are each year sending outside the state hundreds of thousands of dollars for articles and commodities that are manufactured within our borders. We are paying the freight two ways, adding a middleman's profit and, most serious of all, we are supporting capitalists and wage earners else where when we could as well increase the number and wealth of both right at home.

Home-made goods must, of course, compete with those imported, and meet them upon every qualification. Atlantians should buy goods made in Atlanta, not because of that fact, but because they cannot buy similar goods made elsewhere any better in quality or lower in price.

An object lesson of what is made and what can be bought at home day in and out, the year around, will serve an admirable purpose. The process is cumulative. The dollar spent not only remains here, but it attracts other industries, to the enrichment of the entire community. That fact is a strong argument for the permanent manufacturers' exposition.

It will be almost a miracle if they succeed in keeping chautauqua senators in Washington this summer.

No one ever dreamed that tariff talk could be made so interesting.

"Most of the great men are in Texas," says The Houston Post. Why don't they come out in the open, where the country can take their measure?

They can't convince congressmen who have lecture dates that Washington is in the best summer resort class.

The vacation season offers splendid opportunities for bringing on more trouble by running into debt.

"We have with us this morning—" But the Secretary of State can speak for himself.

The mikado is convalescing from eight doctors. Some men are hard to kill.

Mexico called off hostilities long enough to enable her to borrow $100,000,000.

No matter what name you give the tariff it will stab them with the goods.

Journal of an Office-seeker. I have been living on hope so long that I am now thin enough to pose as the living skeleton in a sidewalk.

If the office ever sought the man there wouldn't be such an army of the disappointed walking home from Washington.

I only wanted a foreign ambassadorship in order to see Europe and die for I was well aware of the fact that I couldn't live on the salary.

I'm in such a desperate frame of mind that I'm almost tempted to run for the job of representative and get lost to the world in congress.

The Spirit of Love's Dream.

A dream shines through life's shadows—a dream that speaks to me In mysteries of music—like bells heard far at sea. A face love-blest is with me where stars of midnight beam. And I quaff a cup to dreamers for the beauty of my dream.

Musing in the shadows, alone I fill my glass. Yet not alone for memories like ghosts before me pass. I wander in loved pathways 'neath skies serene and fair. Where the south-winds kissed the violets and Jenny's golden hair.

In a sweet dream I see her beneath those far off skies, The light of Love's own heaven bright in her lifted eyes. And when she said I love you life's dream of heaven came true, And only the silent cedars and the stars and violets knew.

O meadows of Love's Maytime, with all the world in bloom, Your memories like stars have come to light the midnight gloom. My heart would answer with a cry but that it fears to speak. For I feel Love's benediction and her breath upon my cheek.

Still let me dream forever as on this night divine, As Memory sits beside me and her hand is seeking mine. For sweet are all the shadows, and blessed are the gleams. In the land where Love still lingers to give me back my dreams.

The Life Race. The life race my hearty, Win you Love's grace, And well if he gives you A rose for the race.

'Twaer well worth the labor— So, heed his command, Earth's riches are yours With a rose from Love's hand.

MR. BRISBANE AND THE "LAMPLIGHT FUNERAL"

Under the following heading, Mr Arthur Brisbane, in The New York Journal and the other chain of Hearst newspapers, answers a recent editorial in The Constitution:

"Mr. Clark Howell, Didn't You Sweep the Dirt Under the Bed?—Sweep It Out of the Front Door—Admit That It is Dirt—By the Way, Do You Know Why You Are Here and Rosy, and Useful to the Public, Instead of Being Lean, Haggard and Nearly Dead?—We Shall Tell You."

With this illuminating headline, Mr Brisbane proceeds.

A girl who had worked in the Covington mill, at Covington, Ga, died of consumption.

The funeral service was held at night because her friends wanted to attend the funeral and they couldn't attend the funeral in the daytime, as they had to be in the mill in the daytime.

The facts were taken by this newspaper from The Covington News, published where the thing happened.

We said, and we repeat, that it is a fine picture of our civilization when a working girl who dies of consumption before she is twenty-five must have a night funeral in order to give her friends a chance to see the last of her.

It is surprising and disappointing to have Mr Clark Howell, of The Atlanta Constitution, criticize fair criticism of mills and working conditions in Georgia.

Mr Howell takes the broad ground that everything in Georgia is perfect.

We tell Mr Howell that he is mistaken, and that the state of Georgia, and other states know that he is mistaken.

We tell Mr Howell that the old fashioned method of sweeping the dirt under the bed is out of date. You only hide the dirt for a little while when you sweep it under the bed. It has to come out in the end, and when it does come out it is offensive and makes painful house-cleaning.

Sweep your dirt out of your front door right away, and be done with it, Mr. Howell.

And since you represent the people as an editor, tell your readers where the dirt is, and let them help to sweep it out.

Don't defend any child labor system, don't defend the rotten system that ties women through all hours of sunlight in factories, and sends them into the grave with consumption before they are twenty-five.

Tell the truth about everything, even about industries in your own state. You can please a few mill owners, you may think you are pleasing financial investors, and encouraging them to come to Georgia, by hiding the dirt under the bed. But you don't help your state and you don't help your readers.

We tell Mr Howell, whom we have often seen looking happy and proud, as he well may do, in the corridor of the Waldorf-Astoria, why it is that he reminds us of a happy little round cherub.

His complexion is pink. He is the exact opposite of the cublat ideal, for he is all made up of curves and smiles, and energy and power.

He is healthy, with red blood in his body, and with a good active brain.

But does he know why he possesses these fine qualities?

Mr Howell, you are round, plump, pink, cherubic, healthy, strong, and useful—when you don't defend a rotten industrial system—because when you were a child you were playing in the sunlight and not working in a mill.

You are happy, fat, prosperous and powerful, in middle life, Mr Howell, because you had a chance when you were a child.

Use your paper to give other children of Georgia the chance that you had.

Don't use your paper defending mill owners that work children and mill owners that work women into consumption.

There isn't enough money in the north to make it worth while for a self-respecting southern editor to defend an industrial system, no matter how big dividends it pays, if that system hurts the inhabitants of the state who must supply the victims for the mills.

Tell the truth about your own state and about your own mills. Sweep the dirt out of the front door.

In New York state, conditions are worse than they are in Georgia—and the newspapers that respect themselves in New York state say so.

The canning factories of New York state are worse than anything in Georgia. We doubt if there is any man in Georgia brutal enough to work women and children as they are worked in the New York canning factories.

The thing to do is to tell the truth about them and get laws passed as has just been done here in New York regulating the brutality.

It doesn't hurt a state to tell the truth, Mr Howell. It doesn't offend the people of a state to protect their children and their women.

It will not help a state to protect men who exploit labor unjustly.

It helps every kind of a house to sweep the dirt out of the front door.

Remember that good friend Howell and you will be a much better editor ever afterwards.

The Georgia Hills.

The Good Book tells of wondrous streets All paved with purest gold, But these old Georgia hills today Are wondrous to behold.

The good old hills, the faithful hills That gave to me my birth, I'd be content if heaven itself Was made of such red earth.

For from it springs the rarest things That ever pleased the heart of man, And yesternoon I saw Young Spring Come down the road with Peter Pan.

She lightly tript while gaily he Blew elfin strains upon his flute, All Nature hushed each sound to list, The Mockingbird himself grew mute.

"O Life thou'rt fleet and Love thou'rt sweet, Grim Care can wither in a day We'll spend the hours amongst his bowers And dance a merry roundelay."

The vision passed, but well I know Pan is not dead, he lives again, From every feathered songster's throat I seem to hear that glad refrain.

So, come with me, and mayhap we Can find him in some fairy wood, We'll spend the hours amongst his bowers And hear his tales of Robin Hood. —WILLIE H. BELLAH.

TEAMSTERS THREE.

By Philip Welter, Secretary Prison Association of Georgia.

No one can blame the meanest of wardens, or the lowest of guards. We can only blame ourselves. Think about it a minute. Remember there is nothing offered the convict to do his best. It is to his advantage, to do the least he dares. Even that is too much. This means that the guards must be constantly on the alert, the captains ever ready with the lash. Put yourself in their place. What would you be at the end of ten years? The wonder is they do not throw up the job and quit. If they get any work out of the convicts, they are bound to be hard. The system gets them in the end. There is no way out.

Most of the Saturday night crowd had dispersed to their homes. The water trucks were plying up and down, sprinkling the dust-laden streets. Even the missions had closed. The "bums" were asleep.

In a dark alley in the slums stood three figures. The one in the middle was supported by his two companions. A flask was pressed to his lips. He tried to push it away, but partly by force and partly by persuasion, they induced him to take another pull.

It had been pay day with these teamsters three. They had brought the young one along to "put him out" and take his pay. Across the street two mission workers were watching. They brought a policeman over to see the sight. The teamsters saw them and vanished, except the boy, who was too full to flee. The mission people carried him to their room and put him to bed.

The trio were employed at a convict camp to drive the wagons. If you were a teamster, you would be a drunkard, too anything to forget. This is what Georgia has done—inaugurated a penal system that degrades the convicts and harms those in control. Why endure it longer? The remedy is not far to seek, nor hard to effect. Georgia owes it to the convict, to his overseer and to humanity. This does not mean that Georgia's plan of working convicts on the roads is not the best. It simply means that the administration of the plan is woefully deficient.

The Sensation Monger.

(From The Cedartown Standard.)

The Atlanta Constitution is doing a good work in placing in the pillory of public opinion the sensational penny-a-liners who misrepresent Georgia, especially in writing to New York papers. No. He is too bold for them to tell it they can sell it. Only a few days ago some slanderer wrote that Georgia mill owners were so grasping that they would not let their employees off to attend funerals, and that their burials had to be held at night! Down in Macon a young real estate man swallowed a dose of poison by mistake, and he made a brave fight against the slow but sure action of the deadly drug. Some pervert made a sensational story out of his gallant fight and represented him as attending a banquet and giving a big farewell reception to his friends!

Young Men and Their Work.

(From The Philadelphia Ledger.)

There is a general tendency among the effective young men of America to get to work earlier in life. They are studying out the problems and they have found that it is a mistake to spend too many years in preparation. In fact, every year given wholly to study after twenty is toll upon a career. Of course there are many exceptions to this statement, but they serve to prove the rule. The specialist has to take more time, but the specialists are the minority. One result of the new tendency is that many young men are leaving college in their sophomore and junior years. This is most unfortunate. They should graduate, even though they feel the pull of active employment. But it shows how powerfully modern work is attracting the young people. Business has become a great post-graduate school in itself and some of the big corporations with system expressed in a working science are higher universities. No wonder the ambitious boy wants to get into them, to draw his own pay and feel that he is in line for the rewards of merit and industry. The great thing in life is youth. Business is hungry for it. The world wants it more and more. And youth is eager for the game.

Country Schools.

(From Popular Mechanics.)

Inspecting the country schools as regards grounds, building, furnishings, heating, ventilation, library, water supply and sanitation, as well as to the qualifications of the teachers and the granting of a standard school diploma to the schools found to be fit in all these respects, is the method adopted by the Illinois state school authorities, as an incentive to improvement. With the presenting of the diploma goes a placard or nameplate. This is of steel covered with a black preparation and bearing the legend "Standard School" in gold lettering. Placed on the door of the front door, it may be read several hundred feet away. Some 857 of the 10,532 one-room country schoolhouses in the state have already earned the right to display these plates.

Influence of Galileo.

(Professor Henry Crew in Science.)

Perhaps, after all, his most important contributions lie outside of physics. Indeed, Galileo has not yet shot his last arrow. For his life still teaches us that nothing is so because any man says it is so. His example still shows how experiment can rob a man of all arrogance of opinion, how familiarity with unproved problems can give a man genuine humility, and how, on the other hand, the possession of clear experimental science arms him with sure confidence. Critics tell us that Florence, during the Renaissance shone with a borrowed light—a light reflected from Athens. But I venture to think that those who will take the pains to look over the pages of Galileo will find them self-luminous.

The growth of the cotton seed oil business has developed from nothing, a few years ago, to millions a year. The men directly responsible for this development are the men engaged in operating the plants and the high efficiency they have attained in handling the machinery provided for the work.

It is noteworthy that Atlanta has been selected for the second consecutive year for the forty convention of these interests. June 1-6 are the dates selected for this convention, which will be held in the Auditorium-Armory, requiring the entire main floor of the stage for the placing of the exhibits and a meeting place for the delegates.

A highly instructive educational program has been prepared for the superintendents, and those not attending will miss much that will be useful to them in improving the efficiency of their plants for the next year.

Making Snub a Pleasant Affair.

That snub was a complete success. It was meant for just what it accomplished. The audience—rather the spectators, for there were no auditors—saw a girl of glowing beauty striding idly about a front yard and reaching the purple hued lilac bushes.

The lilacs were never so glorious as the day of the snub. The day was so warm that Audrey had sat at an open window reading a book. It could not have been a very fascinating book because she looked up from it so much, looked up from the book and looked down the street.

Her mother sat crocheting and watching her. After a while Audrey put aside the book, rose and yawned. It was a very soulful yawn, for she was trembling with sweet hypocrisy. She murmured: "I'll go with you."

JACKSON HILL CALL

He Is Said to Be One of South's Most Eloquent Young Preachers.

While no formal acceptance has been received by officers of the Jackson Hill Baptist church, information has been received by individual members from Dr. L. E. Bayton, of West Point, Miss., indicating that it is his purpose to accept the call of that church made him about ten days ago, and that his formal acceptance is being prepared.

Dr. Barton visited Atlanta and preached at the Jackson Hill church a few weeks ago, and the impression made on the congregation by his personality and power as a preacher, resulted in a unanimous call being extended just a week later.

Dr. Barton was born in Arkansas, educated at Union university, Jackson, Tenn., and was graduated in 1913 with the A. M. degree. He then attended the Southern Baptist Theological seminary. He has held pastorates in Tennessee, Arkansas, Virginia, Georgia and Mississippi, having for the past four years been pastor of the First Baptist church of West Point, Miss., which pastorate he will resign to come to Atlanta.

Dr. Barton will take charge of his new work about July 1. He is said to be probably the most eloquent of the younger preachers of the Southern Baptist convention, and is a member of almost every important advisory body of the Mississippi state convention. To him, it is said, is due a large share of the credit for the establishment of the educational commission, the most important step forward in the denominational work of Mississippi Baptists for many years.

CAPITAL CITY CLUB TAKES OVER BROOKHAVEN ESTATES; WHAT IT MEANS TO THE TIRED BUSINESS MAN NOW

View of the rear of the Capital City Country club from the opposite side of the half-mile lake, showing a splendid stretch of the lake. This is the view of the club house and grounds as seen from the main stretch of the golf course, which leads around the lake and up to the club house.

View of the lake and the golf course beyond as seen from the rear veranda of the Capital City Country club. The main stretch of the golf course is shown plainly on the undulating hills over the lake.

What was yesterday the Brookhaven club becomes today the Capital City Country club, by virtue of the lease which the Capital City club recently closed with the Brookhaven estates, owners of the Brookhaven property on Peachtree road.

The addition of this attractive feature makes of the Capital City club an institution without peer in the southern states.

The acquisition of the control of the Brookhaven club property is in the nature of something more than a mere added attraction to the Capital City club's attractive features, however. It represents another step in the progressive program which the club has been following ever since the ground was broken for its present handsome quarters at Peachtree and Harris street, two years ago.

This building in the heart of the business district of the city, cost the club in the neighborhood of $300,000. The single year during which the club has occupied its new home, declares Robert F. Maddox, president of the club, has been the most prosperous in the history of the club.

With this message of further prosperity, the club has taken a one-year lease on the Brookhaven club, with the option of renewal for two more years if the venture proves successful, as there is every reason to believe will be the case. At the end of three years, in case of renewal of the lease, the Capital City club has the right to buy the entire property, paying for the same in $100,000 of 5 per cent bonds.

Organized In 1910.

The Brookhaven Country club was organized in 1910 by Charles P. Glover and others interested in the development of the Brookhaven estates, a well known residence subdivision. The club, which originally began as one of the attractive features of the subdivision, soon became one of the most popular clubs in the city, especially among the younger set.

About a year ago, however, the club went into the hands of a receiver, and was bought in at public auction several months ago by the Brookhaven estates, who made the lease of the property to the Capital City club.

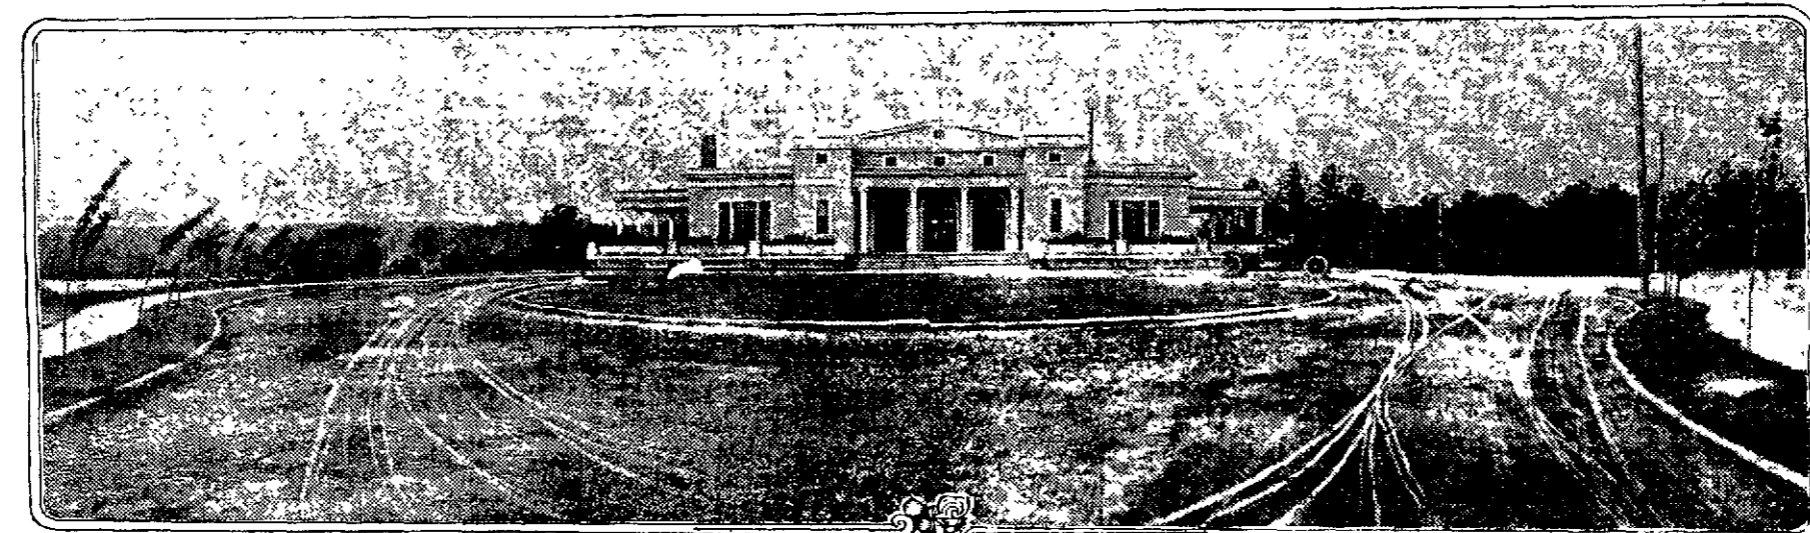

Coincident with the agreement of the members of the Capital City club to lease the Brookhaven club they agreed to increase their membership from 700 to 800 members.

The membership of the Capital City club has in the past consisted largely of stand, middle aged business men, but it is the plan of the club to include in the new membership a large percentage of younger men.

There are approximately 100 applications for membership in the Capital City club before the board of governors now, and the indications are that at the expiration of the ninety days in which applications are receivable the club will not only have its limit of 800 members but will have a long waiting list.

The Need Of Exercise.

The Capital City club's reinvigoration, however, is not to be taken to apply solely to the addition of younger members to its family. The real significance, says Mr. Maddox, is, perhaps, even larger than that, and consists of the encouragement to the older members to get out of doors and get plenty of good healthy exercise and fresh air.

Capital City Country club, formerly the Brookhaven club, as viewed from the approach. A point of the lake is shown at the extreme left of the picture—the lake extending for about a half mile through the valley back of and to the right of the club building.

"If the county club feature works as I expect it to," says Mr. Maddox, "it is going to work wonders in the rejuvenation of the older members who may feel more or less like the active days of youth are beginning to vanish. There is nothing that will produce that feeling quite so readily and completely as long years of the steady business grind without exercise. The country club is going to do a great deal toward taking twenty years of age off the shoulders of many of us."

The Capital City Country club, as the old Brookhaven club will now be called, nestles in a clump of green and shaded hills out north of the city, and is one of the prettiest and most attractive spots in the vicinity of Atlanta. And it is within an easy reach of both the residential and business portions of the city.

Beside the comfortable clubhouse, the grounds are greatly improved. There are long rolling stretches of greensward, beautiful shrubbery and graceful winding drives that almost compel one to get out and stir about.

And, no matter how a man's taste may run for out-of-door sports, the new asset of the Capital City club amply provides for his favorite pastime.

The Brookhaven lake, covering a score or more of acres, is not only the largest, but the prettiest and most sheet of water in Fulton county. The northern exposure of the clubhouse overlooks the lake.

Rambling into many quaint little dales and nooks of the Brookhaven hills, the lake forms an ideal place for canoeing, and its long reaches give splendid opportunity for boat racing. It is the best swimming resort in this part of Georgia. An arm of the lake, stretching away to the northward, cuts in half the seventh hole of the golf course, and affords an extra and interesting obstacle to golfers.

The Brookhaven lake is a favorite among Atlanta fishermen. It has been stocked twice, and its waters abound in fine fish.

The nine hole golf course is soon to be expanded to eighteen holes, making the course unrivalled by any in the southern states.

The golf course, with only its present nine holes, is one of the sportiest in the neighborhood of Atlanta. Beginning on the west side of the clubhouse, it sweeps over an ideal lay of ground, encircling the lake and ending on the east side of the clubhouse. The second hole, while but a bare 130 yards long, is regarded as one of the most difficult holes on any Atlanta course. The fifth hole, lying across a pair of rolling hills, is probably the prettiest stretch in the state.

The club also has fine tennis courts and clay pigeon traps for the use of such members as are fond of shooting. Trap shooting bids fair to be a great attraction at the Capital City

Country club. There is already the nucleus of a club which a club, formed by a number of men who have been shooting on the Brookhaven range and at the traps at Mr. Maddox's country home on Pace's Ferry road.

The Capital City club will install a first-class cafe in its country quarters, and the service will be, in the words of Mr. Maddox, "jam up." A good orchestra will furnish music for dancing and other social events.

No superintendent has been selected as yet for the country club, but R. O. Rankin, superintendent of the city quarters of the club, will have charge of the country club and the organization of its service until a superintendent has been placed in charge.

Work Begins At Once.

Work will begin almost immediately upon the improvement of the already beautiful grounds. The lawns and drives will be kept in perfect condition and much additional shrubbery will be set out, and the grounds otherwise beautified. The formulation of extensive plans for improvement may be taken as indicative of the faith that the country club feature will be a success.

In speaking of it, Mr. Maddox says: "The Capital City Country club, I believe, will be a success from the very beginning."

"It is a feature that is needed by the club, and the time for its introduction is ripe now as it has never been before."

"Healthful exercise and wholesome recreation has become recognized by business men the country over as one of the most valuable assets not only to personal welfare, but to the success of business. The business man with even ordinary insight recognizes not only his own need for exercise and fresh air to keep his own mind quick and bright, and to keep his productive powers in condition to accomplish their full capacity, but also that for the success of his business it is just as essential that his employees, also, have this advantage. 'All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy.' Dullness is not conducive to business or any other sort of success.

Value of Out of Doors.

"For years the value of being out of doors has been recognized and taken advantage of in the north and east. It has been recognized also in the south, but until comparatively recent years has been utilized to only a limited degree. The reason has been that the south had not yet recovered from the blow of the civil war. Our people's finances were depleted. Men had neither time nor money to indulge in out-of-door exercise, for it was an indulgence then. The day has come, though, when it is an imperative necessity, and the time is ripe for the introduction of facilities for getting this exercise."

"Every city in the country today is providing more playgrounds and parks for its citizens, and where in years gone by these parks were used almost exclusively by the rich, they are today the property of the poor and the working people, as they rightly should be. The country is better off for it. Every park means a better and more wholesome and more efficient citizenship."

"Other clubs and organizations in the city have golf courses, lakes, tennis courts and country club features, but already their membership is crowded. The Capital City club has for a long time felt the need of such a feature as the country club will afford, and I am glad to see them take advantage of this opportunity to add it."

BRITAIN IS SOBERER, BUT DRINK BILL HUGE

Nearly $900,000,000 Spent in a Year for Liquor by People of United Kingdom.

London, May 17.—This country is steadily—or pretty steadily—growing more sober, but the sum that the nation spends on drink still is an astounding one. That is the gist of an uncommonly interesting survey of the situation by George B. Wilson, secretary of the United Kingdom alliance, who also points out how the brewers of Great Britain have pushed off on the consumer all the extra taxation which they incurred under Lloyd George's famous budget, and a huge sum besides.

According to Wilson, the sum spent on intoxicants in the United Kingdom in 1912 was $897,666,500, representing a decrease of $8,219,450, as compared with 1911, and that notwithstanding the astounding prosperity of the country. This might be thought only a "wave" considering that in the preceding two years the nation's drink bill went up, but the figures, going back to 1874, demonstrate clearly that temperance really is on the increase in these islands.

Today, it appears, the consumption per head of the population reduced to 1874, in regard to spirits is as follows: Beer, 27.36 gallons, spirits 5.44 pints, wine 3 pints. This is a high enough rate, in all conscience, but in 1874 the figures were beer, 32.10 gallons; spirits, 8 pints, wine, 3.28 pints, and in 1874 beer, 33.84 gallons, spirits, 10 pints, wine, 4.24 pints.

The average expenditure per head for liquor in 1910 was $17.50 and per family of five $88.50, as compared with $18 per head, and, roughly, $90 per family in 1911.

The compiler of this astonishing report shows that Great Britain's drink bill of nearly $900,000,000 is half as large again as the receipts of British railways, and a quarter as large again as the annual value of all private dwellings in Great Britain. It makes the sums that the United Kingdom spends on its army and navy seem insignificant, these being respectively, for land forces $128,245,000, and for the navy $214,490,000.

When Lloyd-George put the screws on the members of the British "beers" by means of increased taxation, there was loud squealing and most folk concluded that the brewers were doomed to the workhouse, but Wilson's report shows with what cunning the men of malt have made the consumer bear their added burdens, and multiplied them by a penny in addition. They have done this by the simple expedient of charging money for water. Says Wilson:

"During the financial year ended March 31 1909, for every 1,000 barrels on which beer duty was paid the brewers produced 1,006 bulk barrels, but immediately the duty of 1s per barrel was imposed in 1909 the quantity was lowered, and in that financial year the 1,000 standard barrels presented 1,023 bulk barrels, and the following year 1,015 bulk barrels, and by the year 1909 a 1000 standard barrels from 1,000 to 1,045. In the following year when the brewers' license duty amounted to about 3d a barrel was imposed, the quantity was again immediately lowered, and the year 1910-11 showed 1,040 standard barrels producing 1,068 bulk barrels. This lowering of gravity during the period has enabled the brewers to produce, free of duty in England and Wales, 13,000,000 more barrels of beer than they could have produced out of the same materials if the gravity of 1890-1909 had been maintained, and the retail price obtained from the public for this quantity was well over £30,000,000. The additional beer duty and brewers' license duty, on the other hand, did not during the twelve years exceed £19,000,000, leaving a large balance to the credit of 'additional taxation' account in the books of the licensed trade. The consumer has, therefore, paid the whole of the extra taxation on beer and a very large sum in addition."

As chance has it, this report is published simultaneously with one of an inquiry into the diet of the workers of Glasgow, and a comparison of the two gives one furiously to think. The Glasgow report shows that the most skillful manager cannot feed a family whose income is under $5 a week; accordingly, economists are asking how can the average family, many of which are not in receipt of more than $5 per week, spend nearly $90 a year on alcohol?

Horrible.

There was great excitement in the newspaper office. Reporters hunted through desks and strong men men investigated crevices and dark corners. A detail of police guarded the entrances to the editorial rooms. "What is the trouble?" we asked. "A split infinitive has escaped from one of the exchanges," replied the trembling editor.

FORTY YEARS "ON THE JOB" IS THE RECORD OF C. V. TUTWILER, OF ATLANTA POSTOFFICE of the Nixie department in the Atlanta postoffice, who forty years ago was the first carrier to deliver a letter in this city. The other two pictures are scenes at the big, busy postoffice, the proportions of which were undreamed of in the days when Mr. Tutwiler entered the postal service.

A few more weeks will mark the fortieth anniversary of the first delivery of the letter in the city of Atlanta, and also the fortieth anniversary of the postoffice service of C. V. Tutwiler of the Nixie department who delivered that letter.

On the first day of July 1873 Mr. Tutwiler entered the postal service as one of the first five letter carriers in this city and delivered the first letter of the service to Nunnally & Hallman, the predecessors in business of the present firm of Hightower & Hallman.

The postoffice at that time was located in the western wing of the old state capitol, which stood on the south side of Marietta street just west of the corner of Forsyth street. And the firm of Nunnally & Hallman, to whom Mr. Tutwiler delivered the letter, had its place on Peachtree street in the building now occupied by the beer saloon of J. Cohen, next to the Savoy theater.

Atlanta Forty Years Ago.

Incidentally that is one of the few buildings connected with those days which still stands. The entire character of the business part of the city has changed since then.

Mr. Tutwiler, in a reminiscent mood the other day gave an interesting description of the Atlanta of forty years ago.

"The old postoffice," said Mr. Tutwiler, "was in the old capitol building which stood on Marietta street adjoining what is now the building of the Beck & Gregg Hardware company."

"The courthouse stood on the hill where the present capitol building stands.

Where the new courthouse now stands was the old 'Martin Roost,' as they called it. It was the saloon where all the village gossips gathered. In the front yard were two enormous trees in which the martins swooped down like a cloud every night to roost, which gave the place its name. There was another name for that old saloon, too. Let's see—I believe it was called 'The Shades.'

"On the present site of the Atlanta National Bank building was the old John H. James bank, and just back of that extending back to the Georgia railroad, was the old circus ground."

"Nearly all of the property in that neighborhood, which is now so thoroughly built up, was at that time practically vacant. Between Wall, Pryor and Deatur streets and Central avenue, which was then known as Lloyd street, was the park.

"Ed Parsons I remember had a coal yard where the New Kimball house now stands.

Hotels Were Patriotic Then.

"There was an Kimball house then and hotels of such magnificence as the Georgian Terrace, the Ansley and Greenleaf were undreamed-of. The principal hotels then were very patriotic establishments in name at least. These were the National hotel on the site of the present Emory-Stetson building, the American hotel, at the southwest corner of Alabama and Pryor streets, and the United States hotel, at the southwest corner of these streets."

"The biggest building in town then would look like a midge beside the skyscrapers of today. This building looked full six stories from the southeast corner of Whitehall and Hunter streets, and was the marvel of its day. People came from all parts of the state to see this wonder.

"On the site of the present postoffice was the old First Baptist church, a big red brick building. I remember it had the tallest steeple in town."

"Billy Forsyth had a blacksmith shop just across the street from it where the Healy building is going up now. It faced on Walnut street, and it has not been so very many years since it was torn away."

"And right across Walnut street from Billy Forsyth's shop, on the site of the Grant building, J. C. Bridger had a coal yard."

Entered Service at Fifteen.

"I was 15 years old at the time I entered the postal service."

"I was running a contracting business in the old Confederate government storerooms, at the corner of Alabama street and Central avenue, and Judge James L. Dunning, who was then postmaster, used to pass there every day."

"One morning about the last of June, 1873, he stopped and told me that Atlanta had the necessary 20,000 inhabitants to entitle her to a carrier service and wanted to know if I wanted to take a carrier's place."

"A few days later I wrote to the postoffice and took the brief examination necessary—there was no civil service then—and entered July 1 upon my duties as a carrier of Uncle Sam's mails in Atlanta."

"There were but eleven men in the entire postal service in Atlanta then, and five of these were carriers."

"Besides myself there were Carriers

O. C. Fuller, Wyatt, W. A. Clarke and John C. Shelton.

Delivers Mail With Lantern.

"The five of us covered the entire city, our respective territories extending from the postoffice to the city limits in fan-shaped sections."

"My territory route included all the territory between Peachtree street, the city limits and back to Simpson street, and from there to the old Wachendorf nursery."

"It was altogether a man's job to be a mail carrier in those days, too, for each of us made two trips a day and carried several times as much mail as a carrier of today. We went to work at 3:30 o'clock in the morning and worked until we got done. Many a night I have delivered mail by lantern light."

"Mr. Tutwiler is one of the best known men in the postal service in Atlanta. His entire forty years of service has been uninterrupted, and he is the only man now working in the postoffice who was working there when the office was in the old capitol building on Marietta street."

"Through all national administrations Mr. Tutwiler has stayed in the service, and is now one of the most experienced men in the service, having worked in practically every department in the office."

Civil Service Board Secretary.

"During Mr. Tutwiler's postoffice career he has been with the following postmasters:

Dunning, Bard, Norcross, Conley, Camp and Myler, who were sent here as special agents until the appointment of Postmaster Wilson, who succeeded them. Roofree, Lewis, Fox, Smyth, Blodgett and the present postmaster, McKee.

"When the civil service feature was installed in the postal service, Mr. Tutwiler was made secretary of the civil service board, which position he held until the responsibilities of other post-office duties made it necessary for him to tender his resignation, upon which he was asked to remain on the board."

"Mr. Tutwiler is now with the Nixie department of the fourth division, which department has charge of all un-called-for mail."

Man Who Saw His Own Ghost :: And Found It Fast Asleep ::

London, May 17.—Ghosts are getting tired of wearing just flimsy draperies, which they find too nondescript to enable them to be recognized easily by former friends and relatives to whom they appear—and they are taking, instead, to sure-enough clothes such as they used to wear on earth. Incidentally, ghosts sleep. Perhaps you didn't know that.

Both of these two statements are made on the authority of Marvin Hume, who is one of the leading authorities in this country on affairs in the spirit world. Hume isn't a member of 'Julia's Bureau,' the famous psychic institute that was started by the late W. T. Stead, and claims still to be receiving messages from him, but he is a regular contributor to the official organ of the English spiritists, The International Psychic Gazette, and it was at the offices of that breezy periodical, in Bridewell Place, that he saw the writer yesterday. In response to a request for some details regarding his psychic experiences.

Hume, who looks rather ghostly himself, says that he has seen no end of spooks, including his own—and that all those he has encountered and communed with recently, only and wore the traditional flimsy, cloudy, transparent drapery.

"One ghost that I saw twice," said he, "was each time immaculately got up in his Sunday-go-to-meetings. Another wore a rough shooting suit, with a felt hat, and another was in workman's clothes. Ghost-stuff is admirable material, it makes up into any costume you want to copy."

Still, of course, the fabrication of any sort of clothes, even ghostly ones, takes time, and it was to save all bother, according to Hume, that spooks originally attired themselves in draperies only. They are human's said to have saved such in the days of humanity, also from time immemorial the proper clothing for ghosts has always been a sort of white, flimsy shroud, very easy to concoct."

It seems, however, that the ghosts found that they were not recognized by the old friends and kinsmen whom they haunted. Hume says that though walking and waiting are quite correct things for a ghost to do, they are not sufficiently evidential for identification as the wraiths of departed friends. "How," he asks, "are we to be sure that the apparition seen and heard is the actual double astral body, or ghost of the departed?"

The quite natural thing for an "ousted" double to do is to wander and haunt its home or the place of the disaster which turned it into a "wanderer." It would, naturally, appear in its own form, that is, the form of its body, and in order to secure recognition it would probably assume clothing made out of the same flimsy material as itself, the counterpart of what it happened to be wearing at the time of its decease.

Hume added with entire seriousness that the "substance" of ghosts varied as much as their costume—now that they have taken to orthodox dress.

"According to the nature of the person they are 'out of,'" said he, "so the stuff they are made of will be thick or thin. Some ghosts are almost as dense in substance as the bodies they inhabit, some are transparent, some so fine and so ethereal that you can hardly see them—you feel them, rather. With these it is more the perception of a presence of something wholly invisible yet occupying space."

It was with difficulty, at times, that he repressed a smile while Hume was telling about his ghostly acquaintances, especially when he described seeing his own ghost.

"The only time I ever saw it," said he, "it had 'gone out' without my knowledge, but I saw it 'come in' all right, folded up in a wee little cloud and fast asleep."

"The ghost of a man who visited me once," Hume added, "was sound asleep, I watched him wake, and was greatly amused at his annoyance upon finding himself where he was."

Liquid Gold for China Decoration.

Gliding on china with gold, according to a writer in The Pharmaceutical Era, is done either by an adhesive varnish or by heat. The varnish is prepared by dissolving in hot, boiled linseed oil an equal weight of amber or copal. This is diluted with a proper quantity of oil of turpentine so as to be applied as thin as possible to the parts to be gilded. Let stand about 24 hours, then heat in an oven until it waxes almost to burn the fingers when handled. The heat softens the varnish, which is then ready to receive the gold leaf, which may be applied with a brush or plectrum of cotton, and the superfluous portions brushed off. Brush, when cold, interposing a piece of thin paper between the gold and the burner. Where burning is practiced the gold reduced to powder is mixed with powdered borax glass (anhydrous borax), moistened with a little raw water, and applied to the clean surface with a stone heated to about the temperature of an annealing oven. The gum burns off and the borax waxes almost to burn the fingers with great firmness to the surface.

To dissolve gold for gilding which has to be fired, triturate in a mortar some gold leaf and honey until reduced to very fine particles. Then dissolve the honey with hot water and mix with a little gum water for use, or dissolve gold in hit nitrohydrochloric acid, evaporate to dryness in a porcelain dish and dissolve in ether for use.

For gilding either glass or porcelain a solution of gold chloride in oil of turpentine or oil of lavender, containing a little bismuth subnitrate and chromium soap is used in these proportions: Oil of lavender, 400 parts, gold chloride, 100 parts, bismuth subnitrate, 5 parts, chromium soap, 50 parts. After application, the article is dried, and then burnt in a muffle furnace. The gilded parts require no further treatment.

Room for the Cat.

(From the Manchester Guardian.)

The doors of a certain new house had sprung horribly as is the way of the modern door made of unseasoned wood and left to shrink in use. The builder would not send the joiner to replace them. So the householder tried the ironical method and wrote:

"Dear Sir: The mice can run under most of our doors, but our cat cannot follow them. Will you please send a man at once to make room under the doors for the cat, and much obliged."

Next day the joiners came.

(From Judge.)

Miss Blank was receiving a call from a young man whose reputation for dullness and eccentricity was only equalled by his reputation for never knowing when to go home.

"The rest of the family had long since retired when the youth finally took his departure, and his hostess lost no time in seeking her own bed. When he reached the corner he began to rain, and he remembered that he had left his umbrella behind. Returning to the house he rang the bell several times, before he was heard. Finally a wraith came from an upper window demanding:

"Who is it?"

"I've called with dignity."

"Then walk blast you walk!" roared Miss Blank's parent hastily dropping the wash with a loud bang.

IT WILL BE SOME BUILDING

There are 548 manufacturers in Atlanta. The Chamber of Commerce proposes to establish a permanent exhibit building which will give the visitor to the city an adequate idea of the extent of Atlanta's manufacturing industry. If each manufacturer enters into the exhibit it will be a wonderful sight to see. And there is not the slightest reason why any of them should stay out. The plan upon which it is proposed to rent the space in the exhibit building will make it perfectly easy for each manufacturer to secure the necessary space to make proper showing of his products.

In Chattanooga there are 120 exhibitors in the building. They have a good exhibit and it has undoubtedly been of vast benefit to the city. Such an exhibit as Atlanta can, and doubtless will, put up however will prove to be a collection of manufactured goods of which the visitor to the city today has no conception.

NOTES OF THE CITY SALESMEN

A present merchant last week... The following story is absolutely true. It sounds so unreasonable that it is necessary to unimpeachable proof before it can be believed yet there is no doubt about it.

A lady ordered some goods from a retail store to be delivered at a certain hour. The goods were perishable and the clerk in the store positively guaranteed that they would be there on time. When the time for their delivery arrived there was no sign of them. It happened that there was a telephone connection between the lady's home and the store, but there was a woman in the store and another store run by the same firm. She knew that there was telephone connection and asked them to ring up the lady and see about her goods. The clerk who answered the phone listened to the story and replied, "Well, it's no business of mine. I didn't sell you the goods."

The man rang off and the lady thought so in this day and time would you believe it?

Brother Sam Jones delivered a very interesting talk before the association which will appear in this column next week for the benefit of all salesmen.

HOLT IS HUSTLING.

Selling Pickles by the Carload, He Keeps Plant Busy

Sales Manager G. F. Holt is after somebody's scalp. It is getting to be a habit with him to go out and get these carload orders for the goods which his firm puts up. That firm is the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company. (Maybe the quality of the goods has as much to do with it as Mr. Holt's salesmanship—who knows?)

There is a rumor that he is trying to send in the orders so thick and fast that he will keep President Hancock busy twenty-five hours a day to get them out. It will be an interesting race if this is true as they are both together on their jobs.

But however that may be Mr. Holt went to Rome the latter part of this week and came back with a carload order for pickles in his pocket on Friday night. Then Mr. Hancock got in his fine work and smiled across at Mr. Holt when he saw the car roll out for its destination on Saturday night. That is making some records.

Customers in the city last week reported to Fain & Stamps that prospects and conditions are first class all through the county and all are feeling very optimistic over the future business for the year.

C. S. Harles with the Consolidated Paper company is spending Sunday at his home at North S. C.

Chas. Edwards of Fain & Stamps remarked last week that he didn't know anything as he hadn't done any reporting. O. W. Stamps chimed in and said, "Well, he sure has had a month's business. It is his biggest May since he first started."

A. H. Branhorst (known as "Brandy") representing the Squire-Dinges company of Chicago, has been with Fain & Stamps this week pushing the sales of the celebrated Bill Quarles South Pole mustard.

He says that people seem to be taking to Jones brand pickles and preserves like hot cakes and that the salesman says they are "read easy" to sell. The force had to work two nights this week getting orders out in order to keep up with sales.

E. E. Shier with the Consolidated Paper company came in Friday from the West Point and Central roads. He reported the farmers all out at work and business in future shipments as particularly good.

The S. P. Richards company report that their new catalog is coming along nicely and that they are expecting it from the hands of the printer about July 1.

Dougherty Little Redwine company report that they expect to be busy for the next twenty-five days as they are running a special sale in order to reduce their stock as much as possible before moving to their new home. They will have to leave the old quarters on July 1.

R. L. Fox with Montag Bros. has been in the city for a short rest before leaving for a few days but will be out on the job again next week.

The John Deere Plow company report that they received a nice number of orders while the Retail Hardware Men's convention was on. Amongst the salesmen who were in to meet the members were J. M. Jeffries south Georgia, J. L. Riddick north Georgia, E. F. Gelselmann central Georgia, W. M. Shoemaker south Georgia, K. D. Mitchell, Athens, and L. W. Laudick special representative for the Syracuse Chilled Plow company of Syracuse, N. Y.

The E. L. Adams company report that they will lend all their wagons and auto trucks to the Retail Grocers for the big parade on Wednesday next.

Manager W. H. Steutz of the John Deere Plow company is in Knoxville, Tenn. for a visit at the company's branch house there.

Manager George H. Speed of the C. F. Sauer company's extract representative says that he will surely be in the parade next Wednesday.

M. J. Bernard of the Atlanta Paper company is spending the week end in Birmingham with H. Freisleben a leading salesman of the company.

W. P. Warlick of Fort Valley, Ga. was a visitor with the Grambling-Spaulding Co. this week and purchased a $1,000 opening bill paying cash.

ALF TRUITT TELLS OF GREENE CO. CROPS

Reports Agriculture There Is in Better Condition Than in the Past Twenty Years. Big Grain Crop.

Alf Truitt of the Ward Truitt company spent last Friday in Green County, Georgia. He returned to Atlanta Saturday morning and told a tale of crop conditions there which made the enthusiasm ring in his voice and creep out of his eyes at every word.

"Tell you, he said, 'there is the finest crop growing up in that section I have seen in the past twenty years. Do you know there were 100,000 bushels of wheat and oats out in that district yesterday?' It's a fact. Corn is 3 feet high and cotton is just the finest I ever saw anywhere. Of course the people are happy and every one states that there haven't been better prospects for a crop there in the past twenty-five years."

I went out in an old field just to get the feel of the heads in my hands once more like I used to in my old days. I never saw bigger and fuller heads in my life. I looked over acre after acre of grain that made me think I was in the famed golden west and the beauty of it all is that every crop is good."

Mr. Truitt is enthused over conditions all down the Georgia coast and he wants everybody to know what a splendid year there is in store for that section of the state.

On The Constitution Firing Line With the Commercial Travelers

In The Trenches

The Atlanta Paper company expressed themselves this week as very enthusiastic about the proposed permanent exhibit for Atlanta made goods, and stated that there was no manner of doubt but that they would take space there if the arrangements were any ways reasonable.

T. L. Landers, with the Gramling-Spalding company, came in for a day or two this week. He is suffering from rheumatism in his right arm, but is still on the job selling "Premium M-Brand" shoes. He states that prospects for business in his territory (central Alabama) are extra good this fall.

James R. Thornton, with the S. P. Richards company, came in for a week-end to get one or two more samples which were not ready when he left last week. He will start on an extended trip Monday. All the others are out and sending in surprisingly good business.

Hagan-Malone Co. were found on the last lap of their semi-annual inventory. Walter C. Barnwell stated that they were carrying the biggest stock of their history, and were doing it to be prepared for the record-breaking business which they feel confident is coming this fall.

The ins this week with Brown, Perryman & Greene Co. are J. F. Tate, C. D. Dickinson and J. O. Chambers.

W. W. Scott, Jr., a well-known Atlanta salesman, leaves this afternoon for a ten-day pleasure trip to New York.

The ins this week with Pain & Stamps are Bill Bailey, C. C. Edwards, J. C. Owens and S. E. Smith.

The Dixie Pickle & Preserving Co. report good orders from all their salesmen this week, and state that business is booming.

The Gate City hotel reports good results from the ad they are running in these columns. Numbers of traveling men have tried their meals and pronounced them A No. 1.

BRATTON'S LETTER TO THE MERCHANTS

Secretary Georgia Retail Merchants' Association Writes All Retailers Through The Constitution Firing Line.

Secretary John Bratton, of the Retail Merchants' association of Georgia, addresses the following letter to the merchants of Georgia through The Constitution Firing Line:

Everybody is boasting the Retail Merchants' convention to be held in Atlanta July 21, 22 and 23. "We are coming."

This is the greeting that is coming into the secretary, John Bratton, at the headquarters of the Retail Merchants' association of Georgia from all over the state.

This is to be a notable gathering of merchants, the most notable, perhaps, in the history of the state. Indications are that from 1,600 to 2,000 merchants will be here. They are coming from every section of the state. The Georgia legislature will be in session at that time, and they are present to witness the deliberations of the legislature and to influence it to listen to their pleas and give them the laws so much needed and which they are asking for.

Forces are at work to make this gathering of merchants a most interesting and profitable one. And while they do not come here with an eye single to pleasure, ample entertainment will be provided. In short, Atlanta never does things by halves, and will see to it that they have no dull moments. Of course, the prime cause of their coming will be for business of which there will be plenty, and it is hoped and confidently believed that this convention will mark a new era in mercantile affairs, and from hence forward improved conditions as relates to the retailers of Georgia will be seen.

Atlanta is indeed fortunate in securing this convention. There is no doubt that satisfactory arrangement will be made, and when perfected ample notice will be given through the press and other means. Everybody in Atlanta is on the job. Wholesalers, newspapers and all. Now that the convention is assured each interest is vying with the other in seeing which can do the most toward making the occasion a grand and glorious success in every particular. That such conditions prevail in Atlanta is gratifying and bodes well for ultimate results.

In the meantime let the merchants of the state get busy. If you haven't already decided to come do so at once. Be here, get in line with your brother merchant, stand shoulder to shoulder with him in the work before you, and thus help to bring about better mercantile conditions in Georgia.

As secretary of the Retail Merchants' association of Georgia for the past ten years, I have had ample opportunity to become acquainted with conditions as related to the retail merchant during that period, and up to the present time. They are indeed appalling. I watched the retail merchant gradually awaken from his R. Van Winkle sleep, until at last he has become fully aroused to the situation and the needs of the hour. That he has at last buckled on his armor and got into the thick of the fighting, is more than pleasing to me. With the coming of this convention we feel encouraged more than ever before and we unhesitatingly say that the prospects of success in the work we have been doing for the mercantile interests of the state are brighter than ever before. At the coming convention, July 21, 22 and 23 we hope to see and shake the hand of every merchant in the state, or at least his representative.

We would have it understood that every merchant in Georgia is requested and urged to be here, irrespective of whatever he is a member of our association or not. When you have decided, kindly notify me at the association headquarters, 1124-25 Candler building, Atlanta, so that ample provisions may be made for you.

Come, be one among us to help do the things that we are sure of success, our efforts, and so that when the convention is over we can say "We have kept the faith, we have whipped the fight."

JOHN BRATTON, Secretary, Retail Merchants' association of Georgia, Atlanta, May 31, 1913.

MARTIN BALDWIN IS MOVED TO NEW YORK

The many friends of Martin Baldwin, who has lived in Atlanta practically all his life, will be glad to learn of his advancement with the Underwood Typewriter company. He has accepted a much better position with the Underwood company and will reside in New York city after the first of July. His promotion taking him to the home office. Mr. Baldwin has traveled on the road as a typewriter salesman practically all his life, making Atlanta his headquarters, and has made good with every firm that he has accepted a position with. After attending to his business closely without vacation for several years, he has decided to spend one month of recreation with relatives and friends throughout middle Georgia before leaving for New York city.

Fain & Stamps enjoyed a brief visit Saturday morning from Mrs. Paul Uphaw, of Little Rock, Ark. Mrs. Uphaw, before her marriage, was Miss Pearl Smith, and was employed by the firm. O. W. Stamps says she is the best business woman he ever met, and that it looks like old times to see her around again.

T. P. A. JOYNTINGS

By W. M. Jenkins, State Press Chairman, T. P. A.

All aboard for Richmond!

One week from today the delegates for the T. P. A. convention will be leaving in order to be there on the morning of the 9th.

Ye blind guides that strain at a gnat and swallow a camel. "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess." And of bribery and graft.

If $100,000 can be raised on short notice for an entertainment (which is well and good), why is it that half that amount (which would be better) could not be raised for establishing a home on the co-operative plan for working girls? Such a home would be on a business plan, would be self-dependent, and would not only pay a living wage, but would make each girl, so long as she was honestly identified with the institution, a sharer in its dividends.

We believe that any girl earning less than $15 a week at any employment could do better by entering into private employment and do housework.

Which fares the best, the house-girl employed at a wage of $4 per week, and board, off after 2 p. m. for the balance of the day, or the shop, mill, factory or store girl at $6 and $7 a week, pay your own car fare and board yourself?

It is thoughtless to allude to denizens of the underworld as "famous men" without giving due consideration to the fact that there are a thousand influences tending to drag women down in a land where everything should help to lift her up.

Sociability and eating go together. We talked as we eat and exchange opinions which go hand in hand for fellowship and friendship. The banquet recently given by the ladies of Park Street Methodist church in beautiful West End will do more to build up the institution in every respect, including financial, and put it on a firm, sound basis than any other one thing. Thanks to these loyal ladies for their invitation. May their church grow in strength, beauty, love and friendship until it becomes noted the world over.

The T. P. A.'s believe that tipping is an evil. Say, traveling men, why don't you quit it? In the name of all that you believe in and all that is right, quit it!

Send us $11 for membership in the T. P. A. and get a $5,000 accident insurance policy.

You can not always tell who your true friends are. True friends, we mean. When adversity comes they are the last to turn away, then you can trust them.

Some of our friends are ready to do everything in the world for us, but the very thing we would have them do, and that is to be true and faithful while we are passing through the fiery furnace of tribulation. Don't hide, but come around once in a while.

The T. P. A.'s firmly believe in open parks and public amusements, feeling, as we do, that it keeps people away from vice.

Doing right is the only consolation

CHAMBER PARTY HAD GOOD TRIP

Result of Chattanooga Visit Will Doubtless Mean Permanent Exhibit in Atlanta. Much Enthusiasm Shown.

The special excursion of the chamber of commerce to Chattanooga last Thursday was a big success from every standpoint. There were sixty-five members of the chamber who went, and they returned to the city enthusiastic boosters for a similar permanent exhibit for Atlanta to that which Chattanooga has.

The Chattanooga exhibit is voted by every manufacturer in that city to be a big success. It was found to be a bigger thing than the Atlantans had expected. Occupying a building, 50 by 110 feet and four stories high, every inch of space is used, and it is all utilized to the best possible advantage. The exhibit is only four years old, yet it has already had to double its space once. The space rentals have amply paid for all expenses, including interest on the original bonds and also to provide a sinking fund to pay off the original debt. And this is done without levying an exorbitant price on the manufacturers for space rental, the rates being exceedingly low.

Atlanta, with her 548 manufacturers, should be able to support and exhibit double the size of the Chattanooga one. There are about 120 exhibitors in Chattanooga, and at least double this number would doubtless use the exhibit in Atlanta, as soon as it is established. The party which went to Chattanooga was composed of the following:

W. M. Jenkins, State Press Chairman, T. P. A.; J. P. Cannon, Ralph T. Jones, William T. Lowenstein, Paul P. Reese, W. O. Steele, W. A. Brower, Royston Cabantes, E. K. Ward, E. A. Massa, C. M. Kennedy, D. Goldin, James Duffy, M. W. Savage, J. R. Meredith, E. L. Proctor, Charles D. McKinney, E. M. Foote, M. H. Manheim, W. E. Martin, J. M. VanHartling, St. Valdes, C. V. Strickland, Francis Kamper, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Fisher, Mrs. George Dolvin, Mrs. P. G. Johnson, Miss Mary Doliver, R. J. Sheffield, F. D. McMillan, W. D. Haddaway, R. H. Barnwell, M. A. Rose, Ten Eyck Brown, T. Z. Catcart, W. R. Ryan, R. S. Hayes, W. D. Hoyt, E. L. Harding, Dr. W. L. Gilbert, E. L. Gardner, C. E. Seiple, J. H. Andrews, Fred Roy, R. W. Rowe, C. W. Russell, W. T. Winn, J. H. Eyrley, George Holt, M. R. Miles, W. E. Williams, R. Bartlett, Fred Houser and C. E. Helmer.

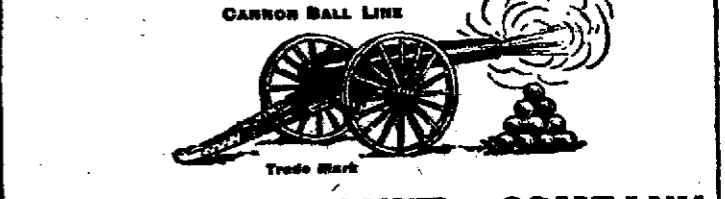

It was very much regretted that Brooks Morgan, chairman of the arrangements committee, could not go, he being detained in this city by court business.

Pagan-Malone Co. announces that the latest addition to their roster is W. W. Scott, Jr. Mr. Scott is a popular and well known salesman in the territory and has had many years' experience in this line. He will cover the southeast Georgia territory for his new connection, and ought to make some new records with them.

one has for living.

N.K. SMITH
THE PROFIT OF KENNESAW MOUNTAIN

"TIME WAS— LONG AGO"

Newnan, Ga., was driving home from his farm in a buggy. It was a bright clear, pretty day, and all nature seemed rejoicing. He had to make a certain grade crossing that he had been accustomed to making for the past twenty years. He was careful, he did not drink, and yet it got him at last. He looked up the track and neither saw nor heard trains. He started across, and before his buggy had time to clear the track, a train, running fast and fast, dashed into him, and, breaking nearly every bone in his body, killed him instantly. No doubt that same grade crossing is there to-day, just the same as it was then, always ready to deal death to anyone who may have to pass that way.

Has Covets county done anything to eliminate this grade crossing that in a moment took one of her best citizens? Has the West Point railroad done anything to make a dangerous place safe? Isn't it strange to note the freaks of mankind and the curious narrowness of his ideas? If this same man had been murdered in cold blood, Newnan could and would have raised and paid $1,000 to convict the murderer. It would have been raised in half a day. And if some man had stolen $100 from this same railroad, the officers of the road would have cheerfully spent $1,000 to get the thief and convict him. Yet it is the height of improbability to think that either the citizens or the railroad have made any move at all to remove this grade crossing, the doing of which would probably cost about one-half of the above named sum. Certainly not any more. It is just as dangerous today as it was the moment it killed Mr. Smith. It is just as likely to be the death of anyone at any moment as it was then. This case is merely used as an illustration of a condition that exists throughout the country. Every county in Georgia has a grade railroad crossing, the public roads, these conditions could be remedied. They should be remedied, and if ever Georgia has a real legislature, it may be done. But it is more than likely that this question will have to be handled by the grand juries and the separate counties, if any results are expected.

WHAT THE WILD WAVES ARE SAYING

HONESTY!
Business has changed. Years ago what is now regarded as sharp practice was perfectly legitimate. The best business is that which is twice blessed. It makes money for you and the other fellow, too. The hog eats and eats and eats until he is fat enough--then he is killed. The hoglike business man grabs all the profit for himself until the traders made, and then they kill him by ostracising him. In the English public schools they have a term, "Send to Coventry." When a boy is sent to Coventry by his mates it means that none of them will speak to him or have anything to do with him at all. It is one of the worst punishments that the ingenuity of young barbarians ever devised. The business man who does not conduct his business on absolutely fair and honest lines will soon find that his peers have "sent him to Coventry." That is HIS finish.

A FEW ITEMS ABOUT LEONARD W. BROWN

Some Interesting Facts About a Man Who Deals in Headgear, Gloves and Umbrellas.

When an effort was made to discover the age of Leonard W. Brown, the genial wholesale hat man, the interviewer ran against an unexpected stumbling block. Mr. Brown declined to be explicit. Possibly the reason for this lies in the fact that he is a bachelor, though he will always tell you that he is "married to his business." However that may be, the only data that could be discovered on this important question was that he was born in Alabama and came to Atlanta "since the war."

However that may be, Mr. Brown is a graduate of the Atlanta high schools. His very first job was as shipping clerk in a wholesale grocery house, but this wasn't really a regular job--just a kind of a little doper in the workaday world before he was really ready to choose his proper line of business. When he really did start to work he went first into the wholesale clothing

An impression of Leonard W. Brown, business. He was first in the stock room, and then had a period of four or five years on the road. Since that time, he has modestly described himself as an "office-man."

Fifteen years ago he went into what he describes as "the best business in the world." This is the hat business, and the company that was founded in the name. It was known for the first twelve years of its existence as "Atkins, McKeidley & Brown & Co." Three years ago they made the simple change to "Brown, Perryman & Greene Co." the form in which it is known today.

Mr. Brown is one of the best business men that Atlanta has, and at the same time he is one of the most unpretentious of men. He attends strictly to business and sees that the big concern of which he is head is always in the forefront of the game, but nevertheless he is not hard to approach, like some big executives, and he is always ready to give courteous and cordial treatment to the man who approaches him reasonably.

He lives, eats, sleeps and dreams "Hats, Caps, Gloves and Umbrellas," and consequently has made a success of his business and has come to be an authority on these goods.

All in all, Leonard W. Brown is a fine fellow, a good man to approach and a man whom it is an incentive to good work and right living to know.

W. H. Eckford, in Mississippi for the M. C. Kiser Co., reports good business conditions particularly promising there.

W. E. Rumph, the South Carolina man for the Warren Manufacturing company, came in Saturday to spend the week-end.

J. D. Schroeder, with the Atlanta Paper company, is in from Mississippi. He is circumventing around with his machine, as usual, and the young ladies are all happy.

W. S. Gaston, with Fain & Stamps, is spending Saturday and Sunday with his parents at Carrollton, Ga.

E. E. Shyer, with the Consolidated Paper company, was talking of what a pleasure it is for a traveling man to call on some of his trade and how he looks forward to the time when he will make a certain territory because of some particular customer he has there. He mentioned John Quarles of Quarles & Son, leading merchants of Rome, Ga., as a good example.

John Silvey & Co. were found busy this week taking stock. It was the semi-annual inventory of their stocks, and they reported everything running smoothly.

W. B. Carlton, of the Capital City Tobacco company, came in Wednesday after a ten-day trip in south Georgia. He remarked that the weather was particularly hot there, and that business had also been particularly good.

E. H. Hagan, with J. D. Fraser company, came back this week from a trip in south Georgia, where he has evidently established some records for feed sales. He states that of all the feeds he ever sold he finds that the best sellers are McGrain and Alfalfa. He states that every customer is sure to repeat orders, and that consequently a salesman feels that every time he makes a new sales he is adding to his future business--which is nice.

The JUNE BRIDE

The BRIDAL NUMBER

"Of white satin and lace shall the wedding gown be." So said Dame Fashion ages ago, and so it happens that each new gown is simply an old idea with new lines, a new touch here and another there, giving individuality to each new model.

The gown illustrated shows the draped satin skirt over which is effectively draped a lace tunic. The bodice is also trimmed with this lace, and the satin girdle is fastened with a cluster of orange blossoms. A small cluster of blossoms is also caught along the frill on each sleeve. The veil is caught nicely over the forehead with a spray of orange blossoms.

EDM

The Trousseau of the Parisian Bride

At the Mairie office one of the pretty pink-eyed brides wore a skirt and Eton jacket of light blue charmeuse embellished by a gay little waistcoat of crease striped white satin. Following closely upon her was another bride in a dull-hued sprigged silk made into a loose square bolero and a narrow skirt trimmed about the hem with a three-leaf frill of white mousseline matching a chic little blouse. After the civil wedding the bride goes quietly to her own home and continues her preparations for the religious wedding. This custom whether the family is Catholic or Protestant takes place in church in fact it never is solemnized elsewhere. The dress is close relative to that of the bride, but is deemed excellent value at the wedding. In the tulle suit there are no feathers.

The tulle suit is always white. The wedding party includes from eight to ten bridesmaids never a matter of honor. Several flower girls, the bridesmaids, and the bride wear the same style of dress. The bride wears a long-sleeved gown of tulle or silk with a frill of white mousseline and small flowers. They never carry large bouquets. Big baskets of exotics are carried by the flower girls—small sisters or cousins of the pair to be married—who wear chignon or mousseline frocks in the color scheme of the wedding. Both the church and the house are beautifully decorated with flowers and foliage.

Not is the bride in France ordered with an immense bunch of flowers. She carries a few lilies of the valley, orange blossoms or white orchids and on her gown of very satin (if she is a brunette) and of pearl-colored satin (if she is a blonde) there is no lace. If a very young and slender girl she may wear white chignon hand-embroidered with a very lace-trimmed. She may however wear the wedding veil of old time which was worn by her mother and her grandmothers perhaps secured by pearls—the only jewels which she would dream of wearing at the altar. Even though the gift of the bridegroom is a laced common with the other sets—were diamonds she would wear it before her marriage.

In France no bride goes to the altar décolleté. Her gown has a rump of tulle or net and usually a little collar and its sleeves cover the wrists.

FIGURIA DE LA VALLIERE.

Frocks Which the Bride Is Sure to Need

THE INDISPENSABLE SEPARATE WAIST AND SKIRT
A dainty lugene waist of fine voile with the yoke daintily hand-embroidered in blue. The oddly-shaped frill is finished with Valenciennes lace and the touch of blue is repeated in the crystal buttons. The skirt may be either of voile, of crepe or of tulle and is plaited front and back.

THE BRIDE'S AFTERNOON GOWN
A charming costume if it would be delightful either for a letter or a garden party. It is of white voile embroidered in pink roses. The collar and cuffs are of white silk, but the grade is a deep rose-colored tulle. The hat is of pink net, with an edging of white straw round the brim. Small frills of the net are arranged round the crown with here and there a white rose.

If you are fastidious that all of your undermuslins should match very well and good—but the diversity of styles this season makes a variety commendable too. For instance although crepe de chine and chiffon lingerie is adorable you may only want two such fine sets. The dainty prints and light blue batiste undermuslins may fascinate you to a degree of wanting a set or two exquisitely fine French lingerie may be your ideal and you may be content with several American made sets to balance the expenditure for the luxurious.

Too much attention cannot be given to the getting of corsets for the present silhouette depends upon correct corsets for its beauty. Be sure that your corsets give you long straight hip lines but the low (or natural) bust. If you are slender you will probably adopt the uncorseted effect figure which is given by Ericot or rubber corsets—this silhouette is especially suitable for the gracefully draped evening and dinner gowns. Above I said two or three sets but you should have at least three pairs—two for utility wear and another for dress.

Handkerchiefs are not too small a detail to require your getting less than two dozen of them.

Gloves are very important too. A dozen pair of various long and short white kidskin gloves will be a moderate supply. Besides you will need three pair of white washable chamousette gloves two pair of natural lambs and probably a few colored kidskin gloves to match various gowns.

Shoes are vital this season because the ceremony a picturesque lawn or modest home affair you will surely want to wear white. If it is to be a little runnaway or just to the person's of a lion that's another story—and then the traveling gown will be appropriate. The bridal gown whether of exquisite white satin silk crepe or sheer batiste is fashioned with simplicity as its key. Not—it is possible if you adopt Mariette Armand's court train model an artistically draped. Callot mode Douillet's—his draped style or Lee's new ankle length gown. The light stock and long sleeves are no longer considered necessary because the dainty and soft lines given by low undated and pointed necks and the gracefulness of short sleeves have broken down that long standing mode that almost became a rule.

The bridal veil should be draped according to its wear. If she wears a low Psyche knot then it should be mounted on Greek bands. If the Manilla fashion is most becoming it should be worn and the cap worn by Faust's (Marianne or the Oriental turban) style are considered correct as the implied draped veil mounted on a band of orange blossoms.

The traveling suit should be of blue serge or wool poplin. But a silk faille a cotton ratine and a linen suit are needed too.

Two evening gowns one dinner gown two silk or crepe afternoon dresses three lingerie dresses four morning dresses of white crepe and linen will be quite sufficient.

Besides a tailored traveling hat he trousseau requires a feather trimmed dress hat a flower adorned chatelaine a tailored hat and an outing hat.

HER DINNER GOWN
The flaring plaited tunic of white chiffon is the attractive feature of this evening gown of violet liberty satin. The bodice is outlined around the yoke with a trimming of rhinestones and the grade, which is slightly raised in front, is of satin several shades deeper in color than the dress.

BRIDAL LINGERIE
Two handkerchiefs either plain hemstitched or embroidered will make a handsome set cover with the addition of lace insertion edging and ribbon. Take one handkerchief and cut in two pieces the other handkerchief cut in two pieces the same way. Then take one of these pieces and cut in halves again. There are now three large triangles and two small ones. Take two of the large pieces for the bottom with the other large piece at top. Place a small piece at each side in front.

All these pieces are put together by a double row of insertion turning a straight oblong piece when finished. If cut as indicated one can readily see how they are to be pieced together. Edge the top and bottom with beading to run ribbon through being wider at the bottom than at the top. Put a double row of insertion down each side at the front the side which buttons over also having a ruffle of lace. Edge the neck with a ruffle of lace. The straps for the arms are made from bands of beading or embroidery edged with lace. This corset cover may be increased in size simply by adding extra rows of insertion and beading.

WHEN SHE GOES ON HER HONEYMOON
For the traveling suit a fine blue serge is one of the best selections one can make. It is here shown trimmed with black and white striped silk. The jacket does not fit in closely at the waist in the back, but hangs straight and is belted with black satin fastening with a silver buckle.

What She Should Have in Her Trousseau

By Marion Morris

ALTHOUGH the getting of her trousseau is always a fascinating task the planning of a trousseau is a great joy. And this pleasure is not increased by the fact that the bride who can only afford an inexpensive trousseau is just as happy. When she is planning her dainty line of white lawn as is the girl who is going home out of town of lilies.

The bride of the last generation of which I speak for each that the dresses became past, here they are the opportunity of getting a reasonable amount of wear out of them. Mothers in those days had a fastidious idea that they might be criticized if the daughters were not amply supplied. But as those brides are the mothers of today experience has taught them that it is absurd to get their daughters more gowns than they will need for the season. At present the evolution of sufficient gowns last for eight months or a year.

The lingerie question can be answered in the same extravagant way as in days of yore for no woman can ever have too many dainty undermuslins.

When planning a trousseau one naturally starts with lingerie for its styles are not so fickle and if there is plenty of time the bride to be frequently likes to make some of these dainties herself. And right here I want to remind you that it is very foolish for you to sew and embroider like a fiend and wear yourself out for the sake of a trousseau when undermuslins—hand as well as machine made—can now be purchased so satisfactorily at moderate prices.

Even though your lingerie expenditure may be quite limited I think that you should have—

Six nightgowns six lingerie petticoats, three silk petticoats six combination—or six drawers and six chemises or corset covers six vest chemises six tulle underdresses, three chiffon or net camisoles, six brassieres, two or three pairs of corsets, six pairs of cotton or silk

WHEN SENDING THE WEDDING GIFT

When sending the wedding gift, it is best to avoid anything that is too large or too small. A gift should be something that is useful and practical. A good gift is one that is needed by the bride and groom. A gift should be something that is of good quality and is a pleasure to receive. A gift should be something that is of good value and is a pleasure to receive. A gift should be something that is of good value and is a pleasure to receive.

Handkerchiefs for the Bride

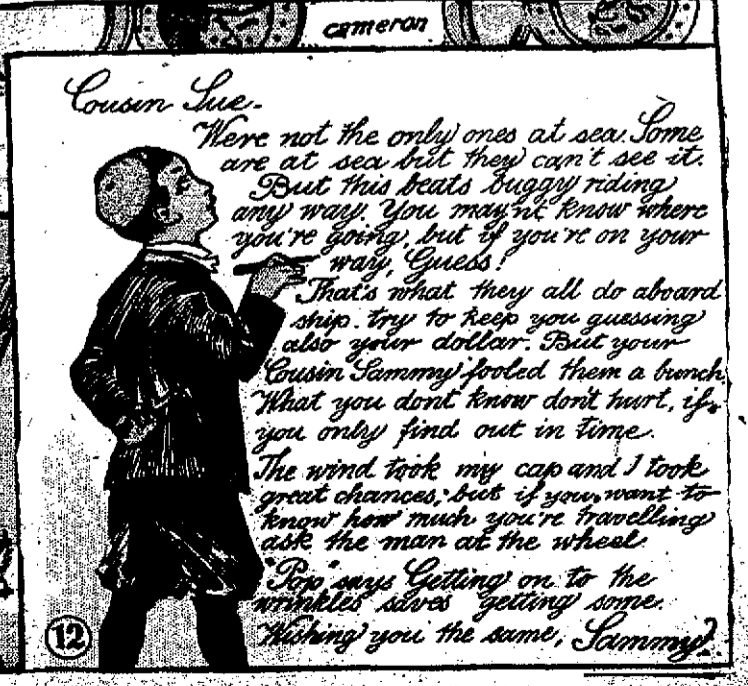

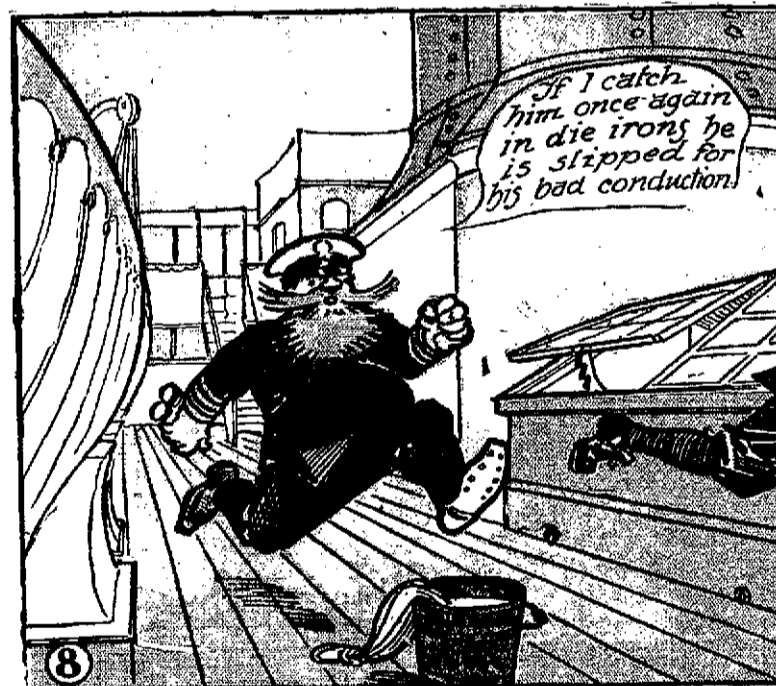

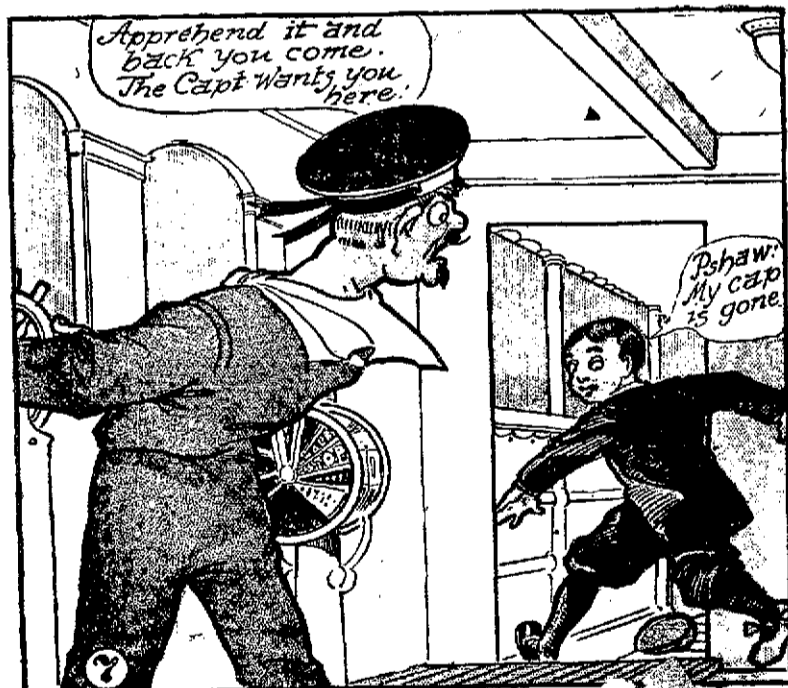

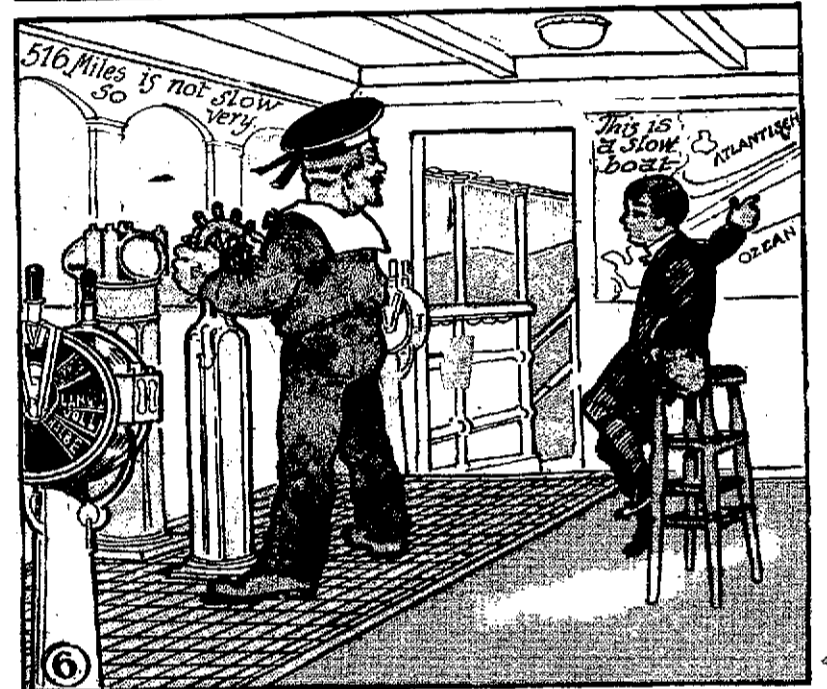

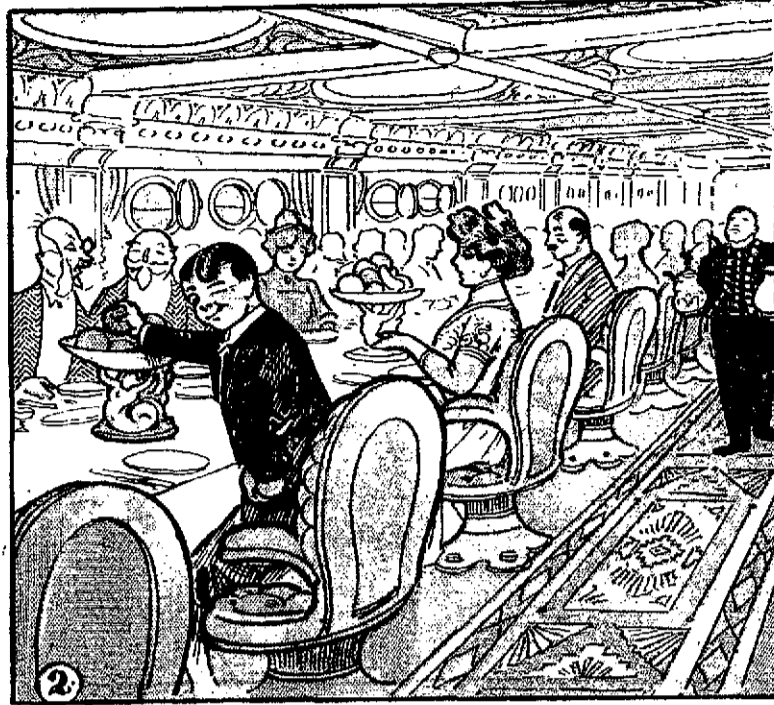

Handkerchiefs for the bride should be of fine quality and be a pleasure to receive. A good handkerchief is one that is of good quality and is a pleasure to receive. A good handkerchief is one that is of good quality and is a pleasure to receive. A good handkerchief is one that is of good quality and is a pleasure to receive.

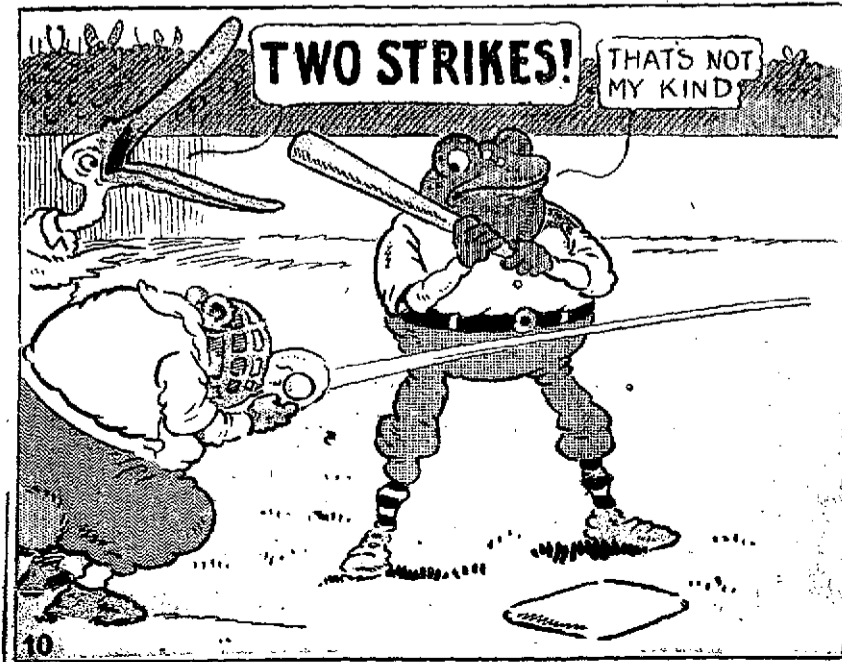

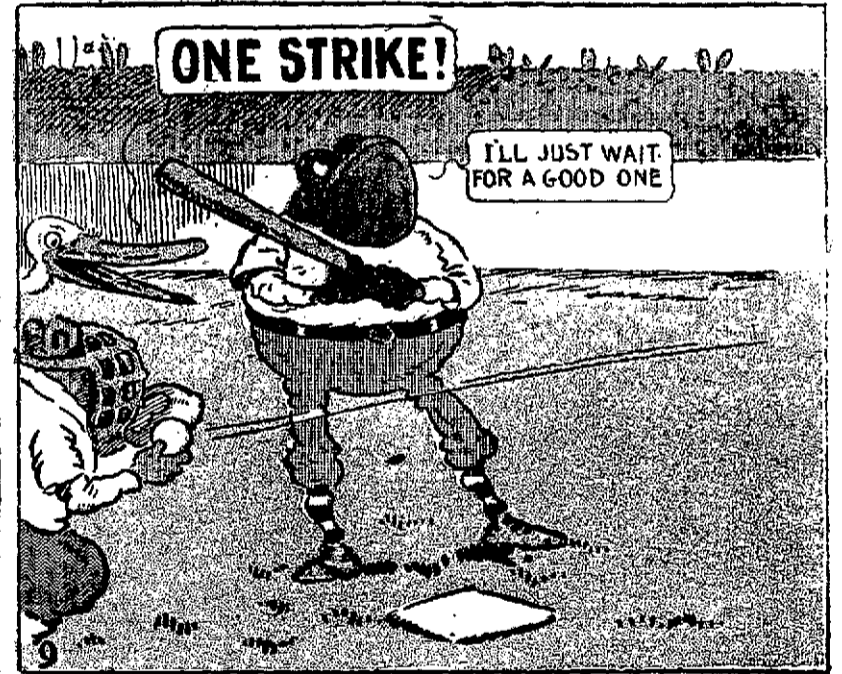

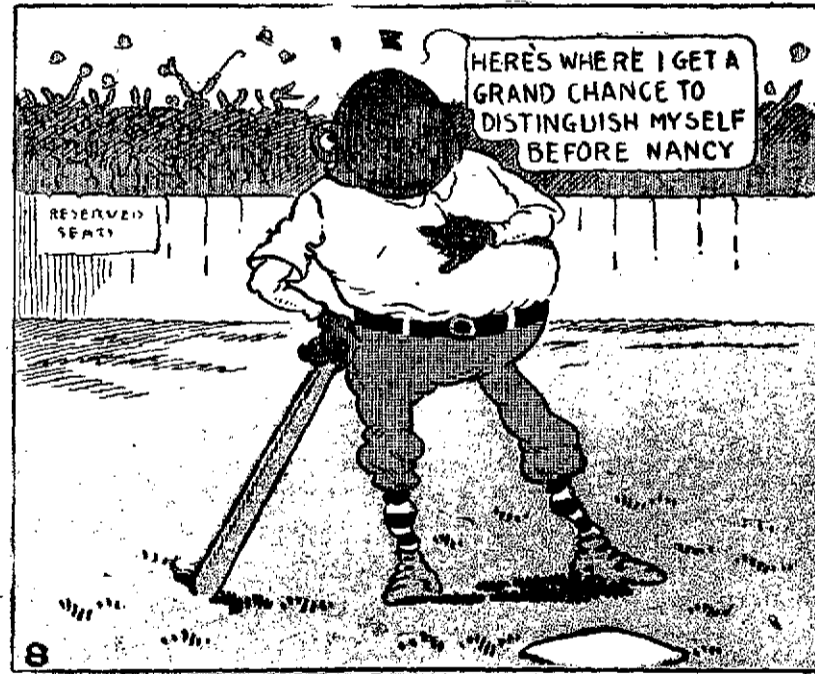

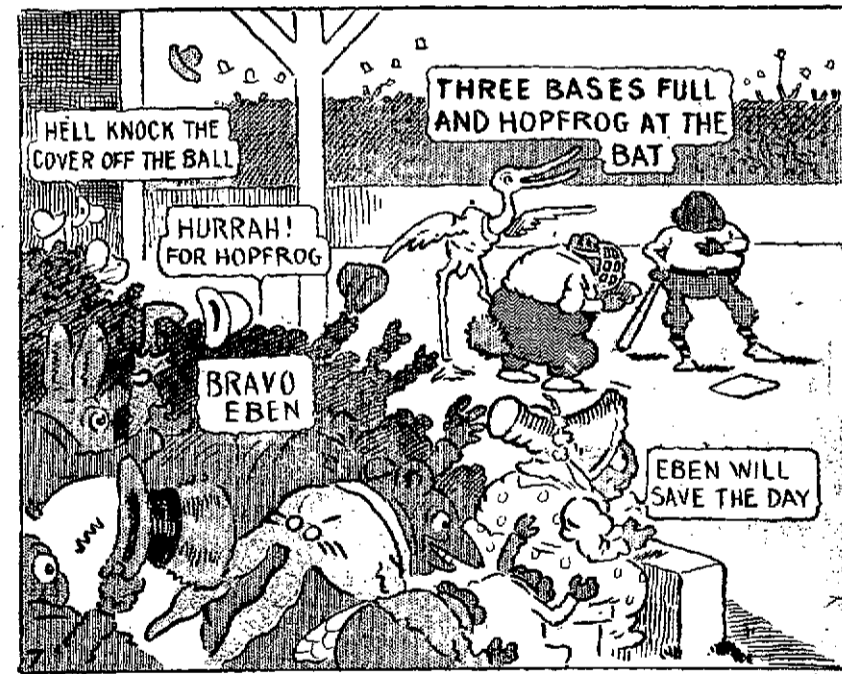

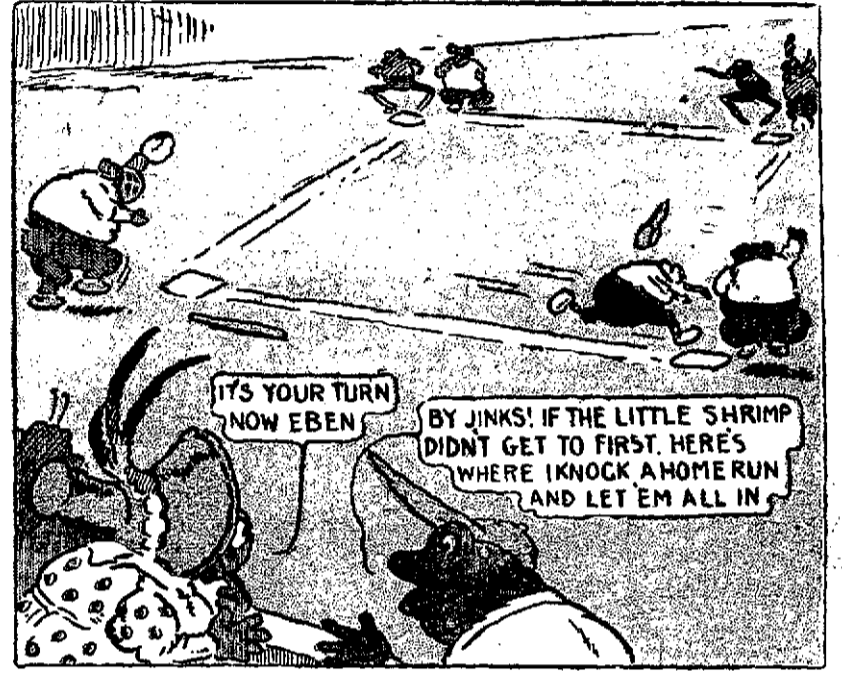

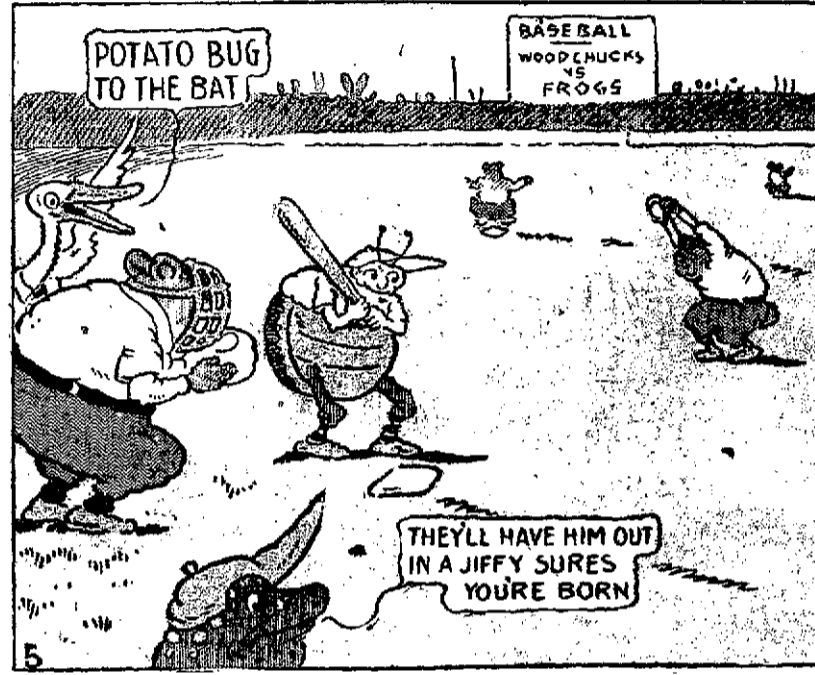

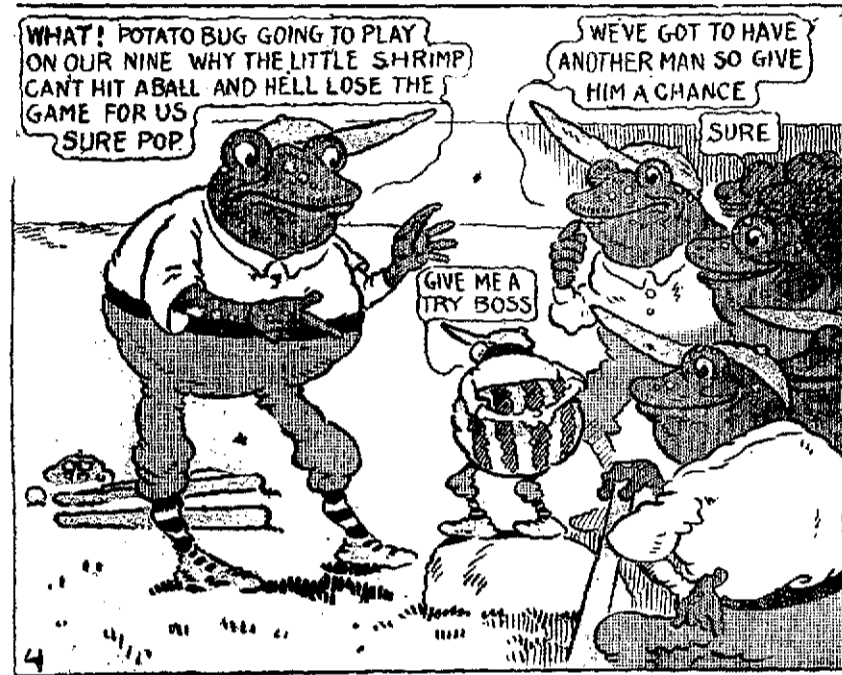

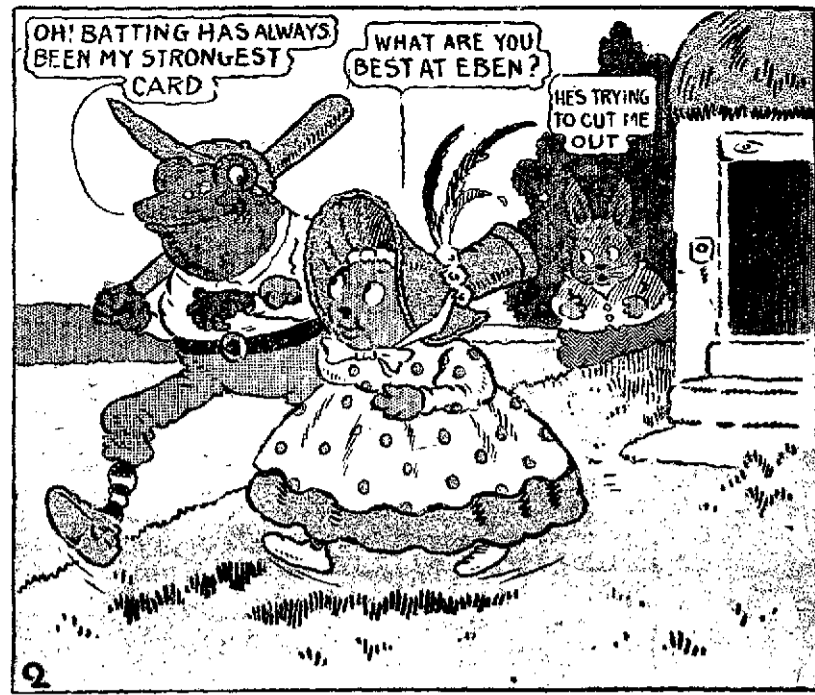

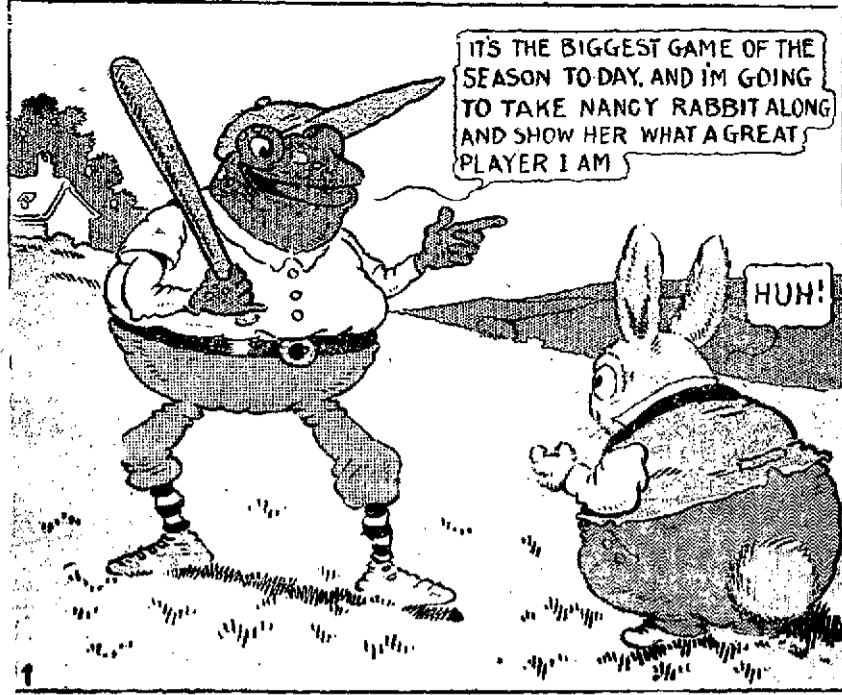

A WHISPER TO THE ENGAGED GIRL

A whisper to the engaged girl is to be careful of her trousseau. A good trousseau is one that is of good quality and is a pleasure to receive. A good trousseau is one that is of good quality and is a pleasure to receive. A good trousseau is one that is of good quality and is a pleasure to receive.

DESIGN FOR NIGHT GOWN

One could not choose a more delicate pattern for decorating the night gown than this simple pattern of tiny leaves and delicate flowers. To do it is something which can be transferred to any undergarment, making the complete outfit in one floral pattern. Use soft white ball floss for working the embroidery, using but one strand of floss if you wish to preserve the central line in each leaf. If, however, you prefer the satin all over stitch, use the double floss. It does the work more quickly, but it is less beautiful than the more carefully worked patterns with care in preserving the natural contour of leaf or flower. Work the flowers in satin stitch. By using the long and short stitch in these miniature flower petals, with single floss, you will be able to work the petals from base to point, giving an almost realistic appearance with the natural "cup" in each petal. If one cares to use a color, it could be worked in floral tints; the washable floss which does not fade when carefully laundered, can be used. Here is a splendid pattern for pale blue flowers, delicate green leaves, and blue silken ribbons. As this pattern will be transferred to sheer material, be sure to make the ribbon eyelets very solid. Split them from end to end with sharp scissors, then whip the edges closely and finish the ends to prevent the eyelets ripping with the stress of ribbons. To make the buttonhole edge quite firm, using double floss for the purpose.

TO TRANSFER THIS DESIGN.

Put a cake of soap (laundry will do) in a pint of hot water, stir vigorously and remove the soap. Saturate this Design with the soap and water mixture, then remove the excess moisture by partially drying the saturated Design or by applying a sheet of blotting paper. Place the material of fabric to which the design is to be transferred on a hard, flat surface and lay the Design, face down, upon the material. Cover with a dry sheet of thick paper or two folds of newspaper, and with the help of a tablespoon rub, pressing hard, until the Design is entirely transferred, being careful to rub from, rather than toward you. When rubbing, you can see if enough pressure is being applied by lifting a corner of the Design to note how well it is taking. Do not wet the material nor rub the face of the Design with damp fingers. To remove the Design lines after the article is completed, wash in warm water, with soap. The entire process is very simple and with a little care you can easily make perfect transfers to any kind of goods.

PATENT PENDING.

ODES AND ENDS

Our Hint Department For Busy Housewives

WHEN making "thickening" for sauces, gravies, etc., use half flour and half cornstarch. Much better.

BEFORE cooking a ham take off a thin "shaving," also the rind, and see how much nicer flavored your ham will be.

AN ounce of coarse salt dropped in the trap of the kitchen sink will prevent the drain pipe from freezing over night.

A TABLESPOONFUL of washing soda and a cup of vinegar poured down the sink will clean out the most stubborn of clogged pipes.

TO keep milk sweet put a teaspoonful of horseradish in a pan of milk. This will keep it sweet several hours longer than without it.

PICKLED cauliflower is so good that every housewife ought to have some put away for a rainy day. It is good, too, on bright days, first, last and all the time, as the political cheerers say.

TO clean black chip hats, rubbing with sweet oil is an excellent way; but be careful not to use too much, and then rub with a piece of black velvet till all the oil is removed.

TRY tacking cheesecloth on the pantry window. This admits air that is sifted free of smoke and soot before it comes into the pantry.

TO get best results quickly in making French dressing, put the oil, pepper and salt in a bottle, add the vinegar a little at a time, shaking vigorously, and a fine emulsion is soon obtained.

FOR a cure for squeaking boots and shoes insert an awl carefully between the layers of leather in the sole and, with the machine oil can oil the sole through the little opening thus produced.

A FELT hat may be cleaned by sponging it thoroughly with ammonia and water. A thick cloth wrung out of cold water should then be placed over the hat, which should be ironed with a moderately hot iron until dry.

THE ingenious woman can always discover some new way to serve oysters. Have you ever tried serving them chopped up in the gravy of a particular juicy porthouse steak? They are as good as mushrooms.

TRY stuffing tomatoes that are to be baked with corn fresh cut from the raw roasting ears. A generous piece of butter should be placed on each tomato. Corn without butter is like a stock company with the leading man out of the cast.

A HOME MADE tooth powder is made of seven ounces of precipitated chalk, three ounces of bicarbonate of soda, two ounces of powdered castile soap and thirty drops each of oils of wintergreen and sassafras. Sift all together and keep in a glass preserve jar. The powder is both cleansing and brightens the enamel of the teeth.

POLISH for stained wood floors is made of eight ounces of yellow beeswax, two quarts of spirits of turpentine and one quart of Venetian turpentine. Cut the wax in small bits and pour the spirits over it. When dissolved, as will soon happen, bottle. Dust the floors well before using the polish and apply it with a soft cloth.

INDIAN meal is very good for cleaning matting. Sprinkle the meal over the floor and then have it thoroughly swept out. Benzoin and French chalk will remove grease from matting. Cover the spot thickly with chalk and moisten by sprinkling the benzoin on it. When the benzoin has evaporated brush off the chalk and the spot will have disappeared.

GARDEN POINTERS For The Early Planters.

BY J. McLAGEN.

The gardener cannot accomplish much in the actual growing of plants during this month, in fact, out-of-door work is almost at a standstill, though when the snow is not troublesome a great deal of progress can be made early in the month with pruning that was not done in the fall. Grapes, currants, gooseberries and shrubs should receive attention. But, remember not to prune during hard frosts.

If the snow lies heavy on the ground do not worry about your garden, for it provides a useful and welcome matting. In fact, it is the best kind of a mulch and helps the bulbs and everything else that is living over the winter. Do not bother about removing the snow from beds and do not worry if you have to throw the snow over them when clearing the walks.

It is much better to have the snow there than the bare ground. Bare ground lets off the moisture in the sunshine and in the wind. It is an entirely different matter when the evergreens and fine shrubs which hold the snow in their branches are considered.

The weight of the snow will cause the branches to bend over and if it remains any time the original upright position is never regained. Therefore the wise gardener will brush the snow off all evergreens after a heavy storm.

Most work of the done in the window garden during March. The Christmas azalea and poinsettia will respond to careful treatment and reward you with blossoms next year. Never allow the plants to become dried out even after the blossoms have faded. In the spring they can be repotted in rich soil and carefully watered during the summer.

The Christmas bulbs, too, will repay any attention given them at this season. Keep the plants in a light, cool place, not only till the spent flower stems wither, but so long as they have leaves. Green light and water, the leaves will rebuild the bulbs. By the first of April they can be removed from the pots and without breaking the earth ball be placed in the garden. In June take them up and with the earth cleaned from them they may be stored up till October or November, when they can be again put into the garden to make a fine outdoor showing for the following spring.

Old fuchsias may be brought out of the cellar where they were stored last fall and put into the light. When they put on new growth they can be repotted.

The home gardener can now make cuttings for the outdoor flower garden, geraniums and heliotrope as well as fuchsias will bloom early in the summer if started right. In geraniums select the half ripe wood for slips; this is neither too tough for the rainy season nor is it full of sap that it will rot when put into the ground. Fuchsias send forth many new shoots when brought again into the light, and these make the most satisfactory cuttings.

They will thrive best if planted in a six-inch pot which has been specially prepared for them. Fill it half full of small bits of charcoal, on top lay some moss, and over this put the sand mixed with charcoal dust. Plant the cuttings close together and keep them moist and warm, make the earth firm around them and never allow the plants to dry out. This is the secret of successfully growing plants from slips.

The seedsmen's catalogues are ready this month and it is well to send for as many as possible, for you have time now to study them carefully, making selections for spring sowing, and can become acquainted with the season's novelties. It is well to try a few of these, both in flowers and vegetables, but do not trust your entire garden to them.

Place your reliance upon the old-time favorites or such recent species as have proven themselves worthy under your special conditions. Every gardener, though, should try some novelties each year, and once in a while a variety that surpasses everything grown before will be found. All the standard varieties of today were once novelties themselves.

Now is the time to make the plan of your garden. A plot which is planned before planting is more nearly complete than one which has been planted bit or miss. Planning enables one to arrange for much better succession now than there will be later on, and the ultimate result of work done now is economy of time, money and effort. Draw the plan on a rather large scale, so that each row in the vegetable garden can be marked and a full space left for writing the names of the various flowers. In planning for vegetables it is best to have the space to be cultivated longer than it is wide. This saves time in turning at the ends of rows.

In arranging the flower garden remember that the trees about the house have no leaves now and the foliage may not be thick when the seeds are put in, but before the flowers have grown and blossomed the trees will be in full leaf, preventing the flowers from reaching maturity.

Almost all flowers require full sunlight at least part of the day, the morning sun being more advantageous than the afternoon.

Two New Soups

CREAM of Rice—Having cut about a pound of loin of veal into small pieces put the meat into a stew pan with three pints of milk, together with three-quarters of a cupful of well washed rice. Add a small onion and season with pepper and salt. Let this simmer gently until the meat is very tender and the rice is a pulp. Then strain the whole through a fine sieve, return it to the saucepan, place it on the front of the fire until it comes to a boil, then move to the side of the fire again and stir in the yolks of two eggs that have been beaten up in lemon juice (of one lemon) and strained. The soup is now ready for the table and should be served at once with small croutons of bread that have been fried to a delicate brown in butter.

Soup Espanol—Parisian.—This delightful soup owes its designation to the fact that it was at one time and perhaps is still a great favorite in the Spanish colony of Paris. To make it begin by chopping up four large onions and frying them in a little butter. Add to them while frying a small quantity of sugar, and when the onions are quite brown put them into a saucepan with two quarts of broth that has been gently warmed. Put in also a little parsley and a bay leaf and boil for eight minutes. Butter very lightly some thin slices of toast and sprinkle them with pepper. Place them in a tureen, arrange the toast layers and pour the soup over them, serving immediately.

THINGS TO MAKE

BY EDNA EGAN.

THE latest idea in neckwear is the wide frill, wide at the top and graduated to a point at the bottom, just as we have been wearing for some time past, with the addition of a colored revers embroidered in white, or vice versa—the background white and the decorations worked out in delicate colors. I saw an exquisite little accessory in this model carried out in pale coral pink and white. The frill of fine lawn was edged with Irish crochet lace about one and one-half inches wide and the revers was pink scalloped on the edge and embroidered in white.

Eight dollars and fifty cents would buy this pretty article, but it was so simple any girl could fashion it for herself at less than $2.

The bit of lawn costs next to nothing, and a yard of edging at a dollar will be sufficient for trimming. The dainty embroidery on the revers would be out of the question unless one were skilled in such stitching, but an embroidered handkerchief, say at $1.50, if cut diagonally, would provide revers for two frills. There you are, all ready for adding, and without the least bit of trouble.

No wonder the girl with ideas and deft fingers can dress on next to nothing at all.

The frill is gathered, of course, and the revers laid on plain. Half a yard of baby Irish insertion will come to about 50 cents, and this holds the frill.

Another exquisite novelty suitable for the elderly woman is a scarf of finest lawn, pure white, buttonhole scalloped on the edges. At first sight the scarf looks like a bureau cover, but not after one has seen the ends. These are appliqued with lawn in a delicate color embroidered in white, the background also embroidered in satin stitch and English eyelet, with here and there motifs of fine lace.

I can imagine how much this lovely scarf would be appreciated as a gift, and $25 is really only a reasonable price for it, but it could be made for much less if one can sew nicely and is willing to be patient.

The scalloping is simple, while for decorating the ends the handkerchief before mentioned (also the bought lace and embroidery motifs) could be brought into service with extremely good effects. All these are handwrought, therefore worthy of their place in the beautiful whole.

To go back to the first jabot, if this is made at home it will then be possible to have handkerchief and frill to match both in color and decoration, an impossibility when the jabot is bought ready to wear.

The Robespierre collar is the popular shape just now, the collar stiff and starched, ending under a jabot of net-plaited and rather square at the ends. The collar comes separately as well, and the handkerchief idea would seem to hold good here also. With two or three handkerchiefs in different colors and designs one could make changes to harmonize with the dress or suit worn, using a white or newer, still, a pale tan collar for every jabot, and, of course, a handkerchief to match should peep from the coat pocket.

FASHIONDOM

CRYSTAL buttons are great favorites and are used lavishly on evening gowns.

Ribbons with hemstitched edges and others with splashing coin dots are among the new offerings.

Nothing is smarter for the tailored suit than a black material with a distinct line of white woven through it.

The collar will be a highly important item of dress during this season. Coats, gowns and mantles all have large collars.

Plaited girdles of handsome messaline or fancy ribbons are used to cover the waist lines of the new frocks, while fancy suede and patent leather belts promise to be in strong evidence.

Raincoats or sponge is very likely to be modish again, either in itself or a combination, and to the woman who pinned for a suit or frock of this fabric last year this will no doubt be welcome news.

Sleeves continue to be of a long and narrow description, in some cases cut in a bell shape over the hands; nevertheless, one occasionally meets with the sleeves reaching only halfway down the arms, in which case they are more ample, and have gauntlet cuffs in proportion.
