

ROAD SUPERVISOR TO BE APPOINTED BY PRISON BOARD

After Long Deliberation, the Members Decide to Make Start With One Man January 1.

MORE MAY BE ADDED AS COUNTIES DEMAND

Sorely Hampered by Lack of Funds, Say Commissioners Davison and Rainey—Suggest Remedy.

A long stay toward was made yesterday in the construction of good roads in Georgia, when the prison commission decided to make a beginning in the direction of state supervision by the appointment of one road supervisor on January 1.

It shall be the duty of this supervisor, who shall be a civil engineer with special knowledge of road work, to assist and advise only such county authorities as express a desire for his services.

The term of office of the present force of inspectors will expire on January 1. Then, instead of five inspectors at present, the commission will appoint four inspectors and one road supervisor.

Intended Only for Beginners. All the commissioners are heartily agreed as to the importance of state supervision of road work and as to the great good that will be achieved by the appointment of the county commissioners in the construction of roads in this way and made the problem a difficult one to be solved.

As an supervisor cannot now supply the needs of all the counties, the purpose of the commission is largely for demonstration and education. The commission is confident that when the counties see the advantage that may be gained by state supervision, there will be a strong demand for them from throughout the state and that the legislature will furnish the funds necessary to keep the system going.

The Commission's Resolutions. The resolutions were adopted yesterday, the commissioners unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved: That the commission has under advisement the putting into effect section 1190 of volume 2 of the code of 1910, and the commission believing that it is now advisable to put said law into effect as speedily as possible, taking into consideration the resources available for the purpose and the demand for the services of road experts by the various counties;

Resolved: First, That the term of office of the present force of inspectors will end on January 1, 1914.

Second, That not more than four inspectors for a term of one year, and one supervisor who shall be a civil engineer or a road expert, and whose services shall be as at the present time of the counties desiring same in assisting them in the construction of roads and highways and bridges as provided in the code of 1910;

Third, That as our resources permit and the demands for their services require three additional supervisors and road experts be employed.

Resolved to be amended.

That they have great faith in the success of the plan and of their ability to demonstrate to the people by the appointment of a single road expert, the advantages of the system which was given out by the prison commission along with the resolutions.

The prison commission, after carefully considering the plan, and employing road experts and engineers to advise and assist in the construction of the state in laying out, construction and maintenance of the roads and bridges, today adopted a resolution approving the plan and provided for one supervisor and engineer beginning January 1, next.

On account of the small number of counties heard from that have expressed a desire for the services of an expert, we decided that at first one supervisor would be all that would be required. But we believe as the counties receive the benefits to be derived from the expert advice and assistance of these officers, that there can and will be employed and their services utilized.

"We firmly believe that this is a long step forward in the construction of good roads in Georgia."

Commissioner Davison. Concurrently with the announcement that the state prison commission would, on January 1, place a road expert at the disposal of the various counties, Chairman R. Davison, and Commissioner E. L. Rainey make a statement to the Constitution in which they officially outline their views regarding the extension of the commission's scope to include supervision of highway construction.

Commissioner Rainey. Messrs. Davison and Rainey, in this principle unequivocally, take the position that the funds at the disposal are now absolutely sufficient to place more than one man on road work, and show that at least one-fourth of the counties canvassed do not want such assistance in the least to start the work on on a small scale and develop it as a demonstration source. The commissioners submit statistics revealing sources of revenue and show that at least four supervisors and withdrawing inspectors would not only be sufficient, but would jeopardize the integrity of the system.

These commissioners do not favor the plan.

JURGED BY WILSON, HE'LL OUTRACE

At President's Request Clayton Gives Up Senatorial Ambitions—Gives Impetus to Underwood's Candidacy.

Washington, October 10.—(Special.)—President Wilson today told Representative Henry D. # The Why of the Morning Newspaper

¶Advertising results from any newspaper, whether for a jewelry store or a second-hand shop, are dependable, aside from the merit of the advertising itself, on quantity of actual circulation as represented by copies which go into the home; the extent to which its subscribers are the substantial portion of all good classes of people; its attractiveness as a newspaper which controls the amount of time its readers devote to it regularly which in turn regulates the likelihood of the advertising being read; its standing and influence with its readers who instinctively give the advertising the same credence as to the news and editorial columns.

¶The hour of the day or night at which a newspaper is published is of less importance than these things, but whatever advantages there may be in that are in favor of one delivered in the morning.

¶It has from 2:30 o'clock at night, the approximate hour at which morning papers are printed, until 6 o'clock to reach the door-step of subscribers in advance of their rising.

¶With mail editions printed as early, in some cases, as with The Constitution for instance, as 10 o'clock at night, it has from five to ten hours in which to travel with night trains to outside points for breakfast-table reading. Afternoon papers can cover only a small area on the day of publication.

¶A morning newspaper reaches the family circle at the beginning of the day's activities; when the minds of all who read it are clear and fresh and responsive to impressions from the printed page whether news or advertising. Good salesmen make their most important calls in the morning before their prospects' minds are tired and their sensibilities dulled.

¶It is generally accepted, because nearly all men read a newspaper before going to work, that the morning newspaper is superior for advertising addressed to them.

¶Even more generally women, to whom the majority of advertising is addressed, whether their household work is done by servants or not, have more leisure for reading between the time the morning meal is over, the children off to school, the day's routine determined, and noon than at any other period of the day.

¶Any fair investigation will substantiate this. Recently The Constitution tested the extent to which women read it and learned, as a part of the result, not only that 96 per cent of the women in the homes where the paper is delivered read it regularly, but of these, 73 per cent do so in the morning hours, 8 per cent in the afternoon and 21 per cent irregularly as to time. Of those who read it before noon, 27 per cent do so about 7 o'clock, 38 per cent about 8 o'clock, 27 per cent about 9 o'clock and 8 per cent after 9 o'clock.

¶In the same investigation it was learned also that of those who receive an evening paper in addition to The Constitution, 83 per cent read the evening paper no more regularly or thoroughly.

¶A morning newspaper, constructed after and not during the hurly-burly of the active business day, is complete, accurate, well edited and dependable. In that sense it is more conservative than its afternoon contemporaries. The advertising columns inevitably borrow some portion of the credence which those superiorities give it as a newspaper, and advertising results are correspondingly increased.

¶Contrary to a lingering belief, based upon conditions which have passed away, morning newspapers are at no disadvantage in relation to circulation among working people. The general acceptance of the eight-hour day enables the wage-earner to work less hours, as a rule, than his employers. They now report for duty at 7:30 or 8 o'clock. They arise at 6 o'clock or earlier, with ample leisure to read the morning newspaper.

¶The afternoon paper sometimes bases its claims of superiority as an advertising medium upon the theory of the family circle around the library table with the evening paper passing in whole or in part from father to mother, from mother to daughter and son until it had been digested column by column by every member of the family.

¶The family circle in that sense is not the institution it used to be. More than ever before, especially in the cities, people are seeking entertainment and recreation after working hours. Recently an Atlanta newspaper made the plausible statement that ten per cent of the people were now engaged professionally in entertaining the other nine-tenths.

¶There are something like 5,000 automobiles on the city streets or country roads practically every night, each providing pleasure for from three to five persons.

¶It used to take from $1 to $2 to see a play with a choice of two or three theaters. Nowadays a nickel or a dime secures admission into one of a dozen moving-picture play-houses, where a thoroughly pleasing and for the most part wholesome entertainment may be had. They are all packed afternoon and night.

¶The streets of Atlanta are busy with people in the morning but in the afternoon and evening they can scarcely accommodate the crowds that throng them.

¶Baseball, golf, tennis, card-playing, dancing, musical concerts, lectures, week-day evening church services, social visiting, the parks—in fact, practically all activities of a recreatory nature are in direct competition with the afternoon newspaper at the time of its publication and delivery. Consequently, it has its own natural handicaps as an advertising medium.

¶This is said not in depreciation of the evening newspaper, for most of them are good mediums because they have true merits as such, apart from the mere fact of publication in the afternoon from which no special advantage accrues to them.

¶The Constitution's 45,000 Daily and 48,000 Sunday circulation, its full representation with the substantial people of all classes, its excellence as a newspaper according to the best journalistic standards, its incomparable influence with its readers, supplemented by the fact that it is a morning newspaper---the only morning newspaper in Atlanta---are combined to make it a fine medium for all advertising purposes for which any newspaper anywhere is adaptable.
