DEFENSE BEGINS ITS SUR REBUTTAL; HOPES TO CONCLUDE QUICKLY

Solicitor Dorsey announced the close of the State's case against Leo M. Frank at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. There remained only the presentation of some documentary evidence by the State before the defense would be permitted to proceed on the sur-rebuttal.

Attorney Arnold estimated that the defense would be more than half an hour on the presentation of the sur-rebuttal in the event the cross-examination of witnesses was limited.

Judge L. B. Roun said he thought the amount of time allotted for the arguments would be practically limited, although he hardly regarded it as likely that either side would desire more than four or five hours. The State will open and close.

The strong probability Wednesday night was that Frank's fate would be in the hands of the jurors late Thursday or some time during Friday's session.

The close of the State's case was marked by a severe grilling of Detective J. V. Starnes by Attorney Rogers. The lawyer tried to make it appear that Starnes had kept Minola McKnight locked up and had given her the third degree until she finally had signed the affidavit incriminating Frank in order to obtain her release.

Dorsey put in evidence statements of Miss Edith Hall, Wade Campbell, Minola McKnight and other of the defense's witnesses who had sworn differently on the stand than they had at the Coroner's inquest or at his office.

The State finished the submission of its documentary evidence at 4:50 o'clock and the defense called for T. Y. Brent, who said he had heard Conductor Kenley, a State's witness, vilify Frank.

Harry Scott, Pinkerton detective, was recalled in an attack on Frank's own story, at the afternoon session Wednesday.

W. T. Dobbs, a member of the city fire department, directly contradicted W. M. Matthews, one of the defense's witnesses and motorman of the car on which Mary Phagan came to town April 26, in the course of his testimony.

Dobbs testified that he saw Matthews about three days after the crime and that Matthews told him that Mary Phagan had ridden with him that day, that she got off at Marietta and Forsyth streets, and that the Epps boy was with her.

Matthews testified when on the stand that the Phagan girl did not get off at Marietta and Forsyth streets, but rode on to Broad and Hunter streets, and that he did not see the Epps boy with her.

L. B. Kendrick, who was night watchman at the pencil factory before Newell Lee was engaged, testified that he had gone to the factory frequently on Saturday afternoons and on occasions had seen Jim Conley as well as other negroes hanging around on the first floor. Kendrick also said he had run a tape through the time clock since the murder, making a record upon it, and that it had required only three or four minutes to do it. The tape was placed in evidence.

Ivy Jones, a negro driver, testified to seeing Jim Conley between 1 and 2 o'clock the afternoon of the murder. He said that he walked with Conley toward Conley's home and left him at Hunter and Davis streets.

J. D. Reed, a lawyer, was called for the purpose of impeaching the testimony of W. T. Starnes, on the car on which Mary Phagan came to town. Reed said Hollie had told him that she had talked together as though they were sweethearts.

Progress in Attack on Frank's Character.

Solicitor Dorsey renewed his determined attack upon the character of Leo M. Frank Wednesday, and for the first time since the testimony of Jim Conley and the insurance man, Ashley Jones, was able to make a little progress in the introduction of this sort of testimony.

Having found the opening, the Solicitor made the most of his advantage, and before the noon recess had arrived ten witnesses, most of them young girls, had sworn that Frank was of a general character and that he had a general character of the same.

The most sensational bit of testimony involved one of the forswears.

U. S. Envoy Went to President's Room at Midnight and Focused Retraction.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 19.—The story of how President Huerta sent a "U. S. Envoy" to the United States Monday night demanding immediate recognition of Mexico by the United States was told today for the first time.

President Huerta, in replying to the demands of the United States, offering suggestions for the pacification of Mexico, rejected all President Wilson's proposals and declared that the Mexican people must be recognized by the United States within twelve hours.

The Mexican Ministers knew the contents of the note, having had a hand in its formation. Acting Foreign Minister Gamboa objected to the aggressive tone, but War Minister Blandino and Minister of the Interior Urbina thought that the tone of the note was no stronger than the occasion demanded.

Accordingly this note, which had all the qualifications of an international ultimatum, was transmitted to Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy, of the United States Embassy, Mr. O'Shaughnessy, and John Lind, the special envoy from President Wilson, left no time in breaking the news, and was handed to the press at the White House, and the tranquil threat of war unless the United States recognized Mexico.

"I must see President Huerta at once," declared Mr. Lind.

On a President's Room. Despite the fact that the special envoy had not been invited to the National Palace, before noon, Mr. Lind was in an official sense to Mr. Huerta. That was the important question.

Fans at Ball Game Fight Over When And How to Root

Goodloe Yancey, secretary of the State Prison Commission, and widely known throughout the State, was fined $5.75 by Recorder Pro Tem Preston Wednesday as the result of a quarrel at Antiknam at the ball game Tuesday, which culminated in a fight in the grandstand between Yancey and J. W. Ware, an agent for a drug sundries house, who lives at the Imperial Hotel.

In court Mr. Yancey, who is well along in years, declared that Ware had cast reflections on his ability to root.

"Ware, who was sitting two rows down in front of Yancey, said that the Commissioner had struck him first."

According to Policeman King, who separated the two, the difficulty arose when Ware declared that the Atlanta team should be placed in the cellar.

"Knicker" shouted the loyal Commissioner.

"You are too old to root," answered Ware. "Go way back and all down."

The two were served with charges and showed respect the game through.

OBJECTION TO CHARACTER ATTACK PUTS DEFENSE IN DILEMMATOUS POSITION

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The public, that is to say that section of the public reading to the end and wanting to be convinced according to the facts, should remember, in seeking to wince itself in considering the Frank case that as the story of Jim Conley was the climax of the trial case, so the statement of Leo Frank was the climax of the defense case.

It should be remembered that both statements are to be weighed carefully and manically—that conclusions are to be jumped at from neither.

The horror of the Conley story coupled with the unpeppery details, temporarily averted the public mind into a seeming apathy of opinion hostile to Frank—it carried his conviction to hundreds of miles through the sheer force of the sinister detail it contained.

By and by, however, the public mind rebounded in a way, and it began talking conk with itself. And there came a pause, followed by a striving back more or less to the normal.

That is the way it is with the public mind—always wanting to be just, and always more to be just. It given the opportunity, yet prone to be hurried along heedlessly in the beginning of terrible stories.

It is the responsibility of the crime that not infrequently distorts the public sense of proportion generally, and makes it unfair to make no less than to other persons concerned.

Had the public in the end is just, and it is true to itself. All it asks for all it needs—a chance to re-gain its balance, after having been knocked this way or that by a stunning and unparaphrased blow it was not able to ward off.

Leo Frank's remarkable statement to the jury Monday, certainly one of the most convincing and convincing far as a juror indication, so that ever fell from the lips of a defendant in Georgia, still is the direction of the defense in the trial, and it is not to warrant the public now rushing to the conclusion that it is the best.

Perfidious Will Come to Rest.

And so, as in the case of Conley, while the sentiment of the public swings heavily to the direction of the State following the Frank statement, it eventually will right itself somewhere midway between the two, and then turn to the rest of the evidence as fitting the one or the other.

A woman correspondent writes me:

"I have read your articles daily. Tell me, truly, are you for Frank or against him? I can not tell from what you say."

Now, in a way, I consider that something of a compliment. I am glad this correspondent does not know whether I am for or against Frank, for I am neither the one nor the other.

I merely "vict the courtroom daily" and gather me a morsel of other men's flowers; and I might but the story that binds them in mine own. When the storm signals have seemed fair for Frank, I have so said it down. When they have seemed ominous, I have so said that down. In all the ideas and conclusions I have transferred to print in the name of the Frank trial, the wish never has been for the thought—save in that I always have preferred, and always shall prefer, to see a man prove himself a gentleman rather than a scoundrel, if he can.

What I do hope to stand for, and what I can afford NOT to stand for, is justice and right, fair play and no special favors, decency and civilization, and the supremacy of the law of the land.

I assure my correspondent that I am neither for nor against Frank, but that I am for truth and right, and in my own way, and after my own fashion, I undertake to stand by my ideals.

Justice the Real End.

Frank Hooper promulgated a platform all can afford to mount and fight upon, when he said, before this case came on for trial:

"It is not so much a matter of finding and convicting Leo Frank, as it is a matter of finding and convicting the murderer of 'Little Mary Phagan'."

So long as you feel that what you are on are safe and solid ground; but once you get away from that standpoint, you begin groping and listening to the persuasive plea of your prejudices and your preconceived opinions, no matter what they may be.

When a man is on trial for his life, you don't have to be FOR or AGAINST him—but you DO have to be in favor of a fair trial for him.

Then, when everything has been done in order and according to the best teaching of a thousand years of Anglo-Saxon civilization, even as important as the law, will provide for another

MRS. GODDIE IN MAILS AS DUAL SLAYER

Wounds of Millen Bride, Shot by Divorced Wife, Fatal—Prisoner Laughs Over Crime.

MILLEN, Aug. 25.—Ignorant of the fact that her husband had been fatally shot, Mrs. Florence R. Godbee, third wife of Judge W. R. Godbee, is dead from wounds inflicted by Mrs. Edna Perkins Godbee, divorced second wife of the slain Jenkins County Judge. Mrs. Godbee died in a hospital here at 10:45 o'clock Tuesday night, just a few hours after Judge Godbee's body had been buried with Masonic honors at Warmersville, his former home.

Mrs. Edna Perkins Godbee, who was arrested Monday just after she had shot down her former husband and his young wife, remains a prisoner in the Atlanta County Jail, where she is held in the jail cell in the building in the Atlanta County Jail in September, when she will face two charges of murder. According to attorneys she will waive preliminary hearing and not seek bail.

Laugh Over Tragedy.

Mrs. Godbee was arrested and jailed within 15 minutes after the tragedy. After the shooting she calmly walked by Judge Godbee's dead body and started toward home, she had walked a short distance she was overtaken by Sheriff M. G. Johnson, who took her to the jail. She had walked a short distance about the shooting. She said she had to kill both, but wanted to kill Mrs. Johnson first. She was shot three times in the back, one ball going through the right lung, one lodging in the left lung and the third piercing the lower stomach through a hip.

Back of the tragedy is a long list of marital troubles ending in Mrs. Edna's divorce from her husband, who she had married in 1910. She was divorced in 1912. She had a child, a girl, named Mary Phagan, who she had raised as her own. She had a child, a girl, named Mary Phagan, who she had raised as her own. # EFFORT TO PROVE IMMORALITY BLOCKED Important testimony was given late Tuesday by George Kenley, a street car motorman, and M. E. McCoy, a painter of Bolton, both of whom swore they knew Mary Phagan and saw her at about noon on the day of the tragedy. It is the contention of the defense that Mary Phagan did not leave her street car until 11:45 and could not, therefore, have preceded Monteen Boyer, who went to Frank's office at 11:45 o'clock into the factory.

Kenley thought it important. McCoy said that he saw the girl not more than three or four minutes after he had had his information in his possession all of the three and a half months during which the authorities have been searching for someone who saw the girl just before she entered the factory. He said he had looked at his watch only a short time before.

BOY KILLED IN FALL OFF BICYCLE

William Davis, of Decatur, Pupil in Atlanta High School, Has Skull Fractured.

William Davis, 15-year-old son of J. Davis, of Decatur, and a pupil in the Atlanta High School, was killed Wednesday morning at 6:30 o'clock when he fell from his bicycle while riding along Dekalb avenue in Decatur.

The accident occurred within a hundred yards of the home of Dr. J. J. Phillips, who was summoned immediately by a boy named Hicks, who was riding with young Davis.

Dr. Phillips arrived within ten minutes after the boy plunged from the wheel, but young Davis was dead. The boy was carried to the home of his father, on College avenue, and later was taken to the morgue of P. J. Bloomfield, in Atlanta.

It is not known what caused young Davis to fall from his wheel. He and young Hicks, who are chums, got out their wheels shortly after daylight Wednesday morning, and, although Mikewood and Oakhurst, turning into Decatur at Dekalb avenue, were riding along Dekalb avenue, they had gone but a short distance when the front wheel of young Davis' machine lurched sideways, the boy tried to steady the bicycle, then suddenly threw up his hands and plunged head first to the hard pavement. He groaned and turned over once, and then lay still.

Young Hicks, badly frightened when his companion failed to arise, called some men who happened to come along at that time, and then hurried to the home of Dr. Phillips. The boy's skull was fractured and his face was severely bruised.

Young Davis' father is a banker and also owns manufacturing interests in Dallas, Ga. He recently moved to Decatur, and his family will be known here.

The boy has been attending the Atlanta High School for the past year or two, and was well known among his associates. He is survived by his parents, two sisters, Mrs. G. G. G. and Mrs. T. D. Hill, and one brother, James.

DORSEY BATTLES TO HAVE DOCTORS PROVE TESTIMONY OF HARRIS

By a ruling of Judge Roan Wednesday permitting the State to bolster up Dr. H. F. Harris' expert testimony the Frank trial was lengthened considerably.

The defense took the attitude that all of their medical experts were called only for the purpose of rebutting the testimony of Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the State Board of Health, who will give evidence in the history of the Frank case.

A lively argument over the State's proposal to call three or four prominent physicians to confront the testimony of the defense's medical experts marked the opening of the Frank trial Wednesday.

Luther Bossert and Reuben Arnold vigorously fought the introduction of witnesses for this purpose in the State's rebuttal.

DECOY INTO CHARACTER ATTACK PUTS DEFENSE IN A NORMAL POSITION

By JAMES R. NEVIN.

The public, that is to say, set aside the notion of their being willing to be fair and impartial in the conviction according to the facts, should remember, in reaching to a decision in considering the Frank case, that the story of the Conley story, the trial, the State's case, the statement of Leo Frank was the climax of the defense's case.

It should be remembered that both the State and the defense are to be judged not only on the merits of their case, but also on the manner in which they present it.

The horror of the Conley story, coupled with the unspeakable details, temporarily swept the public mind into a seeming mold of opinion which led to a conviction in a court of law, and it is in this mold that the defense has been carried out, through the sheer force of the evidence.

By and by, however, the public mind, reborn in a way, and it begins to take counsel with itself. And this came a pause, followed by a swing back more or less to the normal.

That is the way it is with the public mind—always wanting to be just, and always sure to be just, if given time and opportunity, yet prone every now and then to be misled by the beginning of a crime story.

If it is the immediate horror of the crime that not infrequently detours the public's sense of proportion primarily, and makes it unfair to itself, no less than to other persons concerned.

But the public in the end is just, and it is true to itself. All it needs is a fair chance to regain its balance, after having been knocked this way or that by a stunning and unanticipated blow. It is able to wait and when delivered, Leo Frank's remarkable statement to the jury Monday, certainly one of the most surprising statements, so far as serious indications go, that ever fell from the lips of a defendant in Georgia, will be not sufficient, and should not be sufficient, within itself to warrant the public now in reaching to the conclusion that he is innocent.

Publicism Will Come to Rest.

And so, as in the case of Conley, with the sentiment, the public has swung back in the direction of the defense following the Frank statement, it eventually will right itself, neither midway between the two parties, and thus looks to the rest of the evidence as being the one or the other.

A woman correspondent writes me:

I have read your article daily, and I am sure you are for Frank and against him! I can not tell from whom you say.

Now, in a way, I consider that something of a compliment. I am glad this correspondent does not know whether I can form or act as a witness for I am neither the one nor the other.

I usually visit the courtroom daily, and gather me a bouquet of other men's flowers, and laugh, but the news that Leo Frank has been sentenced to die, when the storm begins, has seemed fair to Frank. I have no more to say down.

When the news comes, I have transferred to paper in respect of the Frank trial, the wish never has been father to the thought—more in that I always have preferred, and always shall prefer, to see a man prove himself a gentleman rather than a scoundrel, if he can.

What I do hope to stand for, and try to stand for, and what none of us can afford NOT to stand for, is justice and right, fair play, and no special favors, decay and decline, and the supremacy of the law of the land.

I assure my correspondent that I am neither for nor against Frank, but that I am for truth and right, and in my own way, and after my own fashion, I undertake to stand by my ideals.

Justice the Real End.

Frank Hooper pronounced a platform all can understand to me, and right upon, when he said, before the main camp on trial:

"It is not so much a matter of finding and convicting Leo Frank as it is a matter of finding and convicting the murderers of little Mary Phagan!"

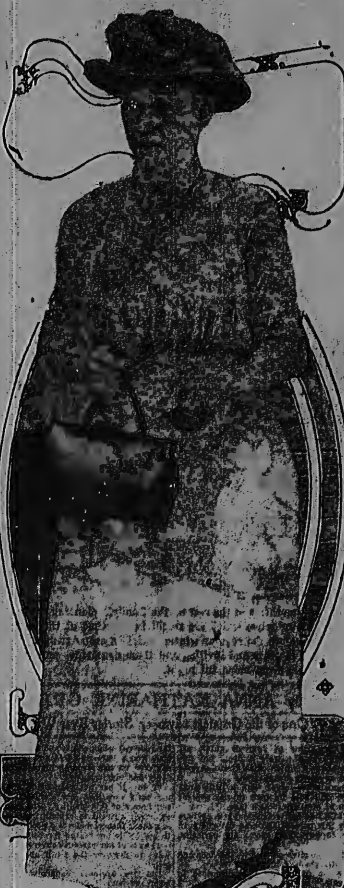

So long as you feel that way about it, you are on safe and solid ground; but once you get away from that standpoint, you begin groping and listening to the persuasive pleas of your attorneys and your preconceived opinions, no matter what they may be.

When a man is on trial for his life, you don't have to be FOR or AGAINST him—but you DO have to be in favor of a fair trial for him.

Then, when everything has been done in order and according to the best teachings of a thousand years of Anglo-Saxon civilization, even as imperfect as that yet be, the verdict finally recorded under the law will provide you a sheet anchor against error and wrong, and you then will be as right as human ingenuity and philosophy can make you right.

And after that, you should worry, I guess!

Since the Frank statement was delivered, and notwithstanding the first impression, it made upon the public, the State has succeeded in recovering a good deal of ground, against the case; and it probably is true today that it stands about as firm as it ever did. If not firmer.

It is conceded that the State lost heavily from a legal standpoint when the defense held its ground on Tuesday and to admit any evidence tending to break down Frank's character in specific instances not directly connected with the murder of little Mary Phagan.

When one comes to consider the matter of public opinion, however, it may be that the defense in this case was better than that of a Frank victory, at least, and that it might have been better to let the State go ahead and prove what it could, if it could prove anything.

The Solicitor General has said all along that he was prepared to establish his allegations of gross immorality against Frank; and when Frank denied it, that challenge by focusing his general character to issue, the public was inclined to applaud and to say that was fair and square proof.

If the State was "four-flaming"—which Dorey solemnly admitted that she was—and the defense appeared to call its hand, the public was honest enough to grant Frank the right to do that, and to approve his dare to the State.

Effect is Disorganizing.

When, however, the defense is permitted to enter the case, and Dorey is then shut out on the threshold of an attempt to make good on his position, the effect naturally is somewhat disorganizing even to those who believe Frank not guilty.

The State stands now in the position of having said, unequivocally, that it COULD make good its charges, and then, after having been challenged to do so, of being stopped from proceeding.

In all fairness to the State—and to the defense, too, for that matter—this recent relative handling of Leo Frank made a brave showing of good character—so seemed to challenge the State to do its worst, if it could. And now the State is shut off, upon the defense's own motion, from undertaking to make good its VERY THING THE DEFENSE HAS VEHEMENTLY PROTESTED IT COULD NOT DO!

There is not much difference, as I see it, in having the impression spread by the State COULD make good, given an opportunity, and that it DID make good, when given an opportunity.

ATLANTA-MADE GOODS EXHIBIT ASSURED

Manufacturers Propose to Lease Top Floors of Chamber of Commerce Building.

The success of the proposed Atlanta Manufacturers' Exposition was practically assured at the luncheon given to a number of manufacturers by the Chamber of Commerce at the Hotel Ansonia. About 50 manufacturers were present at the luncheon and the majority of them added their names to the 41 who had previously signed for space.

In the absence of Brooks Morgan, chairman of the exposition committee, V. H. Krieshaber took charge of the meeting. He explained the proposition of renting the top four floors of the new Chamber of Commerce Building as a permanent exposition of Atlanta-made goods, and outlined the plan of the exhibit.

He stated that a competent man would be in charge to explain the exhibits to visitors and get prospective buyers in touch with the manufacturers. He also told of the various plans for advertising the exhibit.

Ans. O. Chandler told of the many manufacturers' exhibits he had visited in various sections of the country, and heartily endorsed one for Atlanta. He urged better co-operation between the members of the Chamber of Commerce.

W. L. Moore, president of the Chamber of Commerce, spoke of the objections that had been raised because of the three-year term of contract in leasing space and the price charged. He explained the necessity of the stipulated terms and outlined the plan by which the new building was made possible.

A resolution introduced before the City Council by Alderman Nutting, providing for the leasing of space by the city for an exhibit with special reference to the schools and other large public improvements, was read. This resolution has been adopted and space has been arranged for.

The final speaker was O. T. Campbell, president of the Retail Grocers' Association, who stated that the grocers and butchers of Atlanta were behind the exhibit and intend to push Atlanta food products on all occasions. Wednesday has been made a special day for home products.

Some 40 guests and manufacturers were present.

LEO FRANK SKETCHED AS HE TOLD HIS OWN STORY TO JURY

During the greater part of his story Frank was so calm and dignified as an accountant discussing an audit.

In telling of his dealings with the police and Chief of Detectives Lanford, Frank waxed sarcastic in a quiet yet bitter way. But he never lost his emotion or lost his poise.

At times Frank would lose his air of complete repression and his face for a moment would take on an aspect of deep feeling. He would, however, quickly resume his normal expression of stoicism.

WITNESSES GIVE DALTON GOOD REPUTATION

Once Bad Man, but He Has Reformed, Old Acquaintances Testify for State.

It was signed in his presence.

He said that he had told Solicitor Dorsey that the negro woman was being held illegally, but that the Solicitor had replied that it was necessary sometimes to do things of this nature in order to get the information wanted. He told of going to the police station and finding Minnie crying and hysterical in her cell.

The attorney for the colored woman said that he had not been permitted to enter the room where his client was being interrogated by the detectives and Ray Pickett and Arthur Brown, the latter two men being employees of the Brock & Clegg Manufacturing Company. He was present, he said, when part of the notes were being read by O. C. Peabody, but was not there when the affidavit was signed.

The defendant's affidavit told of alleged conversations at the Bell home of a nature very incriminating to Frank. The defendant's affidavit also told of the statements in the affidavit to a Georgian reporter the night that she was liberated.

Indirect Evidence Against Frank Is Ruled Out.

A crushing blow was dealt the State by the refusal of Judge Roan to admit, either in the defense or in the prosecution's case or after the State had taken up the case, any evidence bearing upon the specific acts charged against the factory superintendent.

The ruling was a sweeping victory for the defense. It gave Frank a case which had been added materially, day by day by the defendants own statements, an added strength and heightened the prospects in Frank's favor.

Solicitor Dorsey tried first to cross-examine Daisy Hopkins, one of the defense's witnesses, as to conversations she was supposed to have had in regard to incidents at the pencil factory in which she and a man un-identified except as her "foreman" was involved. Frank's name was not mentioned in the indicated conversa-

The conversation was about a "foreman."

The Hopkins woman denied again that she ever had made visits to the factory for improper purposes or that she had had the conversations referred to by the Solicitor.

Dorsey encountered the same stone wall when he tried to draw testimony against the moral character of Frank from his own witnesses. From W. F. Merck and J. P. Floyd the Solicitor had expected to obtain a recital of the series of happenings which she said had been related to her.

Merck, however, had mysteriously disappeared from the courthouse when his name was called, and Floyd was not permitted to go into the details of the testimony the Solicitor had hoped to bring out.

The Solicitor thereafter confined his efforts to belittling up the character of the following five who were called by the prosecution: Dr. O. C. Mitchell, P. J. Keardley, Clarence Johnson, John Punks, R. E. Henscheidt, of Atlanta, and J. C. Crum, of Macon, the latter two presidents and vice-president of the State Board of Health.

Solicitor Dorsey asked that Daisy Hopkins be returned to the stand so that he might continue his examination of her.

The witness took the stand.

Q. You say you knew nothing of the cot in the basement of the National Pencil Factory?—A. No.

Q. How you acquainted with A. R. Floyd, of Helton, Ga.?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you known him for a long time?—A. Yes.

that he had ever introduced Dalton to the factory superintendent.

Why Roberts was asked: Q. Has Jim Conley been in your custody during this trial?—A. Yes.

Q. Has he ever asked for newspapers?—A. Yes.

Dorsey interrupted.

"Your honor," he said, "I think the witness, Jim Conley, ought to have the privilege of denying or affirming that before he can be impeached."

"Conley said that he could only read certain words," said Arnold, "but probably Mr. Dorsey is right. I will have to call Jim Conley back again. Mr. Roberts will be back in a minute and we will close."

Daisy Hopkins Is Recalled by Dorsey.

The witness was excused and Dorsey made the announcement that five jurors of the following five would be called by the prosecution: Dr. O. C. Mitchell, P. J. Keardley, Clarence Johnson, John Punks, R. E. Henscheidt, of Atlanta, and J. C. Crum, of Macon, the latter two presidents and vice-president of the State Board of Health.

Solicitor Dorsey asked that Daisy Hopkins be returned to the stand so that he might continue his examination of her.

The witness took the stand.

ter P. Merck one Saturday afternoon on Whitehall street.—A. I met him on Peachtree.

Q. Did you tell him that afternoon that you were going to the National Pencil Factory?—A. No. I told him I had just left the factory.

Q. Did he make an engagement with you to go to the factory?—A. No.

"Your honor," he said, "I think the witness, Jim Conley, ought to have the privilege of denying or affirming that before he can be impeached."

"Conley said that he could only read certain words," said Arnold, "but probably Mr. Dorsey is right. I will have to call Jim Conley back again. Mr. Roberts will be back in a minute and we will close."

Daisy Hopkins Is Recalled by Dorsey.

The witness was excused and Dorsey made the announcement that five jurors of the following five would be called by the prosecution: Dr. O. C. Mitchell, P. J. testimony," said Judge Roan. "You can not bring any new circumstantial charges against this defendant. If it is against someone else, it is irrelevant."

"Your honor," said Dorsey, "I want to ask a question to let the jury hear that you rule it out."

"Not as object," said Rosser. "That's just why the jury was sent out."

"I'll let you assume that you ask the court to Dorsey."

"Why, your honor," replied Dorsey, "I put me in the position of not even trying to prove what we have indicated we would."

"I can not permit the question," said Judge Roan.

"Very well," said Dorsey, adding, in undertone, "That shuts me off that whole line of argument."

Dorsey continued the examination: Q. Didn't you meet Merck during the afternoon after working hours and tell him you were going to the pencil factory?—A. No.

Q. Didn't he come to see you that night?—A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you had seen him at the factory that afternoon?—A. No.

Man Say Woman's Character Is Bad.

Mrs. Hopkins was excused, and J. P. Floyd, of Helton, Ga., was called. Dorsey questioned him.

Q. Do you know Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how many husbands she has?—A. Two.

Rosser: "I object, your honor. I don't care if she has three hundred husbands."

The objection was sustained.

Q. Would you believe her under oath?—A. I would.

Q. Did you ever hear her say anything about a cot in the basement of the pencil factory?—A. Yes.

The witness was excused.

Goddard, brother of C. M. Goddard, who was asked to stand a few months ago by Elmer P. Darden, was the next witness called in rebuttal. Goddard resides near Redan. Dorsey questioned him.

jected shortly. An indictment is nothing against one's character."

Dorsey "Dalton denied any knowledge of an indictment. This is a bond forfeiture."

Good, Says J. T. Hearl.

Glen Smith, superintendent of the Nunnally-McRae Company, testified that Daisy Hopkins' character was bad and that he would not believe her on oath.

Q. Did you know C. B. Dalton since 1895?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you hear about him being indicted for selling whiskey in 1914?—A. Yes.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Do you remember a machinist named Charles Lee?—A. Yes, he was working there.

Q. Were you hurt there?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. On the second floor, the office floor.

Q. Just where were you hurt?—A. On a metal machine. I hurt the forefinger of my left hand.

Mashed Finger Did Keep Blood Off Floor.

Q. How were you hurt?—A. This fellow Lee had put the metal on the machine. It dropped off. I picked it up and in putting it back I mashed my finger.

Q. What did you do then?—A. There was some cotton waste there, which I put around my hand.

Q. Did any blood drop near the leader's dressing room?—A. None.

Q. How long after this accident did you work?—A. I quit then.

Q. What did you do then?—A. I went to the office to get it dressed, then went to the Atlanta Hospital.

Rosser took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. How badly were you hurt?—A. Not very bad.

Q. You had pretty badly?—A. Yes, but I had my hand in the cotton waste.

A. You didn't notice whether any blood was on the floor or not?—A. Yes; none of it dropped except at the machine where I was working.

FRANK'S STATEMENT IS BEST PLEASURE PRESENTED IN HIS DEFENSE SO FAR

By JAMES B. MEVIN.

So far, unquestionably, in my way of thinking Leo Frank himself has made the best and most appealing plea in behalf of Leo Frank. His statement in the trial thereof was as clear, calm, as dignified, as dispassionate and as convincing as any statement I ever heard from the witness stand, and I have heard hundreds.

Impressively Delivered. The fact remains that it was most impressively delivered, and carried with it every emphasis of apparent truth and straightforwardness. It is my opinion now that the State has in Frank's statement the hardest thing to get away from that yet has been handed to it. If it contradicts the State at all, the State has been able to furnish abundant evidence to the contrary. It makes more necessary than ever before the complete exposure of the State's efforts to break down Frank's good name.
