Railway Mail Service to Resume Old Spirit, Says Its New Superintendent

"We Are Going to Eat Up That Holiday Mail," Says A. H. Stephens, Here From Washington, Guest at Smoker of Railway Mail Clerks—Efficiency the Aim, Says He, Enticing Workers

"A square deal" was promised the railway postal clerks Saturday evening by Alexander H. Stephens, general superintendent of the railway mail service, who stated that he had come south in an effort to get back into the service that sprang of loyalty which had been knocked out of it during the last four years by the "black squad" system.

Mr. Stephens made his talk at a smoker given in his honor at Irandra's club by the Railway Mail Association. He did not name it, but the former postmaster general, as the cause of the "black squad" system, was the subject, but when he hesitated, the name was suggested by the postmaster general, and he outlined the new policies which have been set on foot in the railway mail service by his administration, was applauded enthusiastically by the clerks present.

Among the number of speakers who shorted talking the visit to Atlanta of the new postmaster, Mr. H. Jones, who quoted interesting statistics showing that the Atlanta postoffice costs the government $30,000,000 a year to maintain, the remainder going to the post office.

Mr. Jones declared also that on last Tuesday evening record for the sale of stamps in the Atlanta office was broken. The number of stamps sold on that day was 25,000,000.

JUDGE NEWMAN'S FRIENDS TO TENDER HIM DINNER

Jurist Yields to Urgent Requests Not to Retire From Bench

An informal meeting of some of the friends of Judge William T. Newman was held on yesterday at the Capital city club in order to perfect details for the banquet to be tendered Judge Newman in celebration of his seventieth birthday.

Judge Newman has for more than thirty years filled the position of judge of the United States district court for the northern district of Georgia and by virtue of his recent birthday became automatically entitled to retirement from the bench at full pay.

Upon the urgent solicitation of many of the citizens residing in his district, including many of the members of the bar practicing before him, Judge Newman has decided to forego the privilege conferred by statute and will indefinitely continue to discharge the duties devolving upon his position.

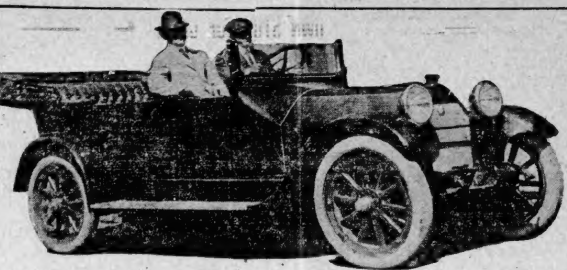

At a banquet to be held at the Capital city club on Saturday, October 11, at 7 o'clock P. M., at the Capital city club and the friends of the judge, including members of the local bar, will be invited to attend.

Elaborate arrangements are being made to insure the success of the banquet, the details of which have been carefully considered and placed in charge of various committees appointed by the meeting as follows:

FIRST "SHOW ME" CHALMERS CAR IS HERE

The first 1913 Model 24 Chalmers Six to reach Atlanta is shown in the picture. The handsome machine, while built in Michigan—not Wisconsin—has been christened the "Show Me" car. In the machine is C. Mr. Jamison is going to make his headquarters in Atlanta, having selected this city after looking over all of the big cities in the territory. The only city which ever gave Atlanta a "run for the money" according to the new manager, was Jacksonville, Fla., which, he says, is fast becoming an automobile center. While he is going to open a big division office here in the near future, Mr. Jamison is at present making his headquarters with John M. Smith, local agent for the Chalmers. Seated at the wheel of the "Show Me" car with Mr. Jamison is J. M. Brownlee, Jr., a well-known Atlanta automobile dealer.

Giants Will Win Say Federal Prisoners

In the opinion of a majority of the prisoners at the United States Federal penitentiary here the New York Giants will defeat the Athletics of Philadelphia in the coming world series. The prisoners are close followers of the national game and have their own league with names played each Saturday in the prison yard. The view of the majority, however, is not shared by the sporting editor of Good Words, the official newspaper of the penitentiary. He thinks the Athletics will outguess the New Yorkers. In the current issue of the paper the sporting editor writes:

"The followers of the game here are fast lining up for the world series, with a majority seeming to favor the Giants to win. This scribble picks the Athletics, as he believes they have more speed in their composition than the New Yorkers and are less liable to beak under the strain occasioned by a series of seven games for the championship of the world and the attendant thought of the long end of the gate money. The depressing factor will arrange to have the result of the game, with the batteries of each game and other important details, announced daily in the dining room at the supper hour."

GERMAN EXPERT PRAISES ATLANTA SEWAGE PLANTS

Dr. Karl Imhoff Says Effluent of Proctor Disposal Plant Is Best He Ever Saw

High praise was given yesterday by Dr. Karl Imhoff, of Essen, Germany, to Atlanta's new sewage disposal plants. Dr. Imhoff holds the patent for the Imhoff tank, which has been constructed in each of the city's three plants. It was through his generosity and upon the request of his friend, Dr. Rudolph Hering, of New York, that the patent was extended to Atlanta without royalty charge.

During the morning Dr. Imhoff visited the Proctor creek treatment and Zionsborough creek disposal plants in that order, finding the first in operation, the second idle because the flow into it has been diverted temporarily by the county construction forces, and the third in process of construction.

"This is the finest effluent I ever saw," said he, examining effluent which had passed through the Proctor creek plant. Inasmuch as he is a sanitary engineer whose name is known now in that science around the world, his praise for the plant placed Atlanta's disposal plant in an eminent position. He added that the effluent from the tanks at that science around the world, his praise for the plant placed Atlanta's disposal plant in an eminent position. He added that the effluent from the tanks at that science around the world, his praise for the plant placed Atlanta's disposal plant in an eminent position.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING BEST, SAYS J. B. SCHLOSS

Prominent Atlanta Advertising Man Contributes to 'News-papertod'

Julius B. Schloss, one of Atlanta's most prominent advertising men, has been generally honored by 'News-papertod' in its issue of September 25, 1913, an article from his pen headed, 'A National Advertising Campaign for a Clothing Manufacturer.'

The article is, in substance, a letter recently written by Mr. Schloss to the firm of clothing manufacturers, 'News-papertod' recognized the value to advertisers in general and secured the participation of the writer to publish it. PLAN OF MR. SCHLOSS. The first plan of Mr. Schloss is to organize a thoroughly competent advertising manager whose headquarters will be at the home office of the manufacturer, and who will act as one organizer for the firm and as one organizer for the firm in the large cities and if their advertising is not up to the standard, he must, in a diplomatic manner, show them how to improve it. Mr. Schloss stresses the value of newspaper advertising in general and declares it is in this form that brings the most effective results. In comparing the "machine" he suggests that the publisher locate the goods of the manufacturer in his newspaper ads and have the local ad writers correspond with and send written reports regularly to the advertising manager. It is in this manner he contemplates building up the "machine."

WOULD HELP MERCHANT. Mr. Schloss declares that this system would help the merchant to sell his goods as well as advertise the product of the maker. The firm, he says, by paying for a regular ad writer who takes care of the actual advertising matter, sells the goods and saves in mutual profit in the enterprise.

In conclusion Mr. Schloss says: NEWSPAPER ADS. "Your local newspaper advertising will eventually nationalize itself. To compete I shall call in our advertiser. You can cover say, New England or part of the south or any other section—even the entire country—according to the extent that you agree to the sale."

"Here's what I mean: Atlanta is a unit. Richmond is a unit. Memphis is a unit. New Orleans is a unit. The newspapers of our cities circulate throughout their tributary territory. The Atlanta papers cover Georgia and also go into the Carolinas, Florida and Alabama. The Memphis daily covers its territory and the papers in other cities have their own spheres. In the daily newspapers in the big cities, you also cover the hills."

"Dealers in the smaller towns will buy the big city papers and see that some good store in the big city is selling and featuring your clothing. That's a recommendation in many small town dealers will be likely, therefore, to buy your clothing here. And the small town consumer reads in the big city papers that you brand of clothes is sold at the big city store and if he has a tendency to influence him to patronize the dealer in his home town, who also handles your clothing, but what's most important is that the consumer in the big city will eventually get a dealer to wear your make of clothes—and will patronize the store where they are on sale."

SENATE RECOGNIZES WOMEN OF THE SOUTH

$400,000 Is Voted for a Home for the American Red Cross

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The services and sacrifices of the women of the United States north and south are to be commemorated by the erection in the city of Washington of a permanent home for the American Red Cross.

The action of the senate, in which it is believed the house will concur, marked the legislative bridging of the bloody chasm between the north and south and was the first time since the Civil war that the United States congress has passed on record an appropriation to the benefit of the south.

At the last session of congress, when the senate was controlled by the Republican majority, an amendment to the omnibus public building bill providing for an appropriation of $400,000 to erect a suitable home for the American Red Cross was memorial to the "services and sacrifices of the boys and men of the Civil war" through the amendment of a committee, it was defeated by the senate.

At this session, however, the Democratic majority generally protested vigorously against the distribution of the appropriation to women and gave notice that never would they permit such a proposition to be made.

Senator Thomas, of Missouri, John Sharp Williams, Lea and others joined in the attack upon the appropriation. And it was introduced by Senator Williams reintroduced the lost amendment with only a slight change in the amount to $400,000.

At this session of congress Senator Williams reintroduced the lost amendment with only a slight change in the amount to $400,000. The bill was passed by the house and is now in the hands of the senate.

Anxiety Over the Future Caused Hesitation in Stocks During Week

In Relations With Foreign Markets, United States Is Fortified by the Favorable Trade Balance Growing Out of Heavy Exports

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Anxiety over the future caused hesitation and resultant weakness in the stock market during the week. This feeling had to do with the outlook for commerce and finance abroad and at home. The domestic outlook is now more than usually dependent on money market conditions elsewhere.

The action of the international exchange in response to the advance in the rate of interest discount bank loans has not failed to be looked for in New York in the immediate future. It is generally expected that the rate will be raised to 6 percent.

A trade reaction such as seems to have set in Germany carried with it the danger of unimproving world conditions. The market has been affected by the failure of money conditions to take in London, Berlin and Paris after the October settlement of the gold payment and the occasion of unusual...

Knowledge That the Tariff Law Was in Operation Caused Break

Chances of a Generous Increase in the Visible Supply of Wheat Was Responsible in Part for Bearish Feeling

(By Associated Press.) CHICAGO, Oct. 4.—Sentimental aspects of the operation of the tariff bill moved today to the wheat pit. The market, though steady at the close, was a 1/2 to 3/4 c. under last night's close.

Knowledge that the tariff law was actually in operation had considerable to do with depressing wheat. Speculators declared new buyers were kept out and that short sellers were encouraged.

Chances of a generous increase in the visible supply was responsible in part for bearish feeling in wheat. Bearish sentiment in Argentina, where wheat prices were high at this time, showed signs of improvement.

EVERYBODY'S COMING TO ATLANTA'S AUTO SHOW

Couldn't Want Rosler Prospects, Says K. T. McKinstry, After "Booster Trip"

From a "booster trip" for the Atlanta automobile show which carried him away up into Ohio in his car, K. T. McKinstry, manager of the Presto-Columbian Southern company, has returned to Atlanta with the report that everybody knows about it already and that everybody is coming to look it over.

Mr. McKinstry was gone nearly three weeks, had a fine time, spread show "legs" everywhere and gained glowing praise. He toured through North Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia and Ohio, establishing a record of twenty-six hours running time between Atlanta and Louisville, Ky., 416 miles. He never would have made that record had he not found a road dry roads all the way.

Advertisements for the Atlanta automobile show dates, November 8 to 15, and a lot of other information about what will be seen at the show, were printed all over the body of his car at Mr. McKinstry's order before he left Atlanta. He says that folks "begin up" everywhere he stopped long enough for them to read the signs.

Robert N. Reed, chairman of the automobile show committee representing the Atlanta Automobile and Accessory association, stated yesterday that preparations for the show are moving along in the best sort of style.

State Fairs and the Advantages They Offer

It is a slight worth seeing to visit the packing plant of the Naves-Spillers company. These people ship hundreds of loads of poultry and eggs to the east every year, and hearing all of the poultry handled through this packing plant shows more or less a cross of thoroughbred blood in them. No one can realize what a big difference there is in a dressed carcass or in the size and color of an egg produced even from one cross of thoroughbred blood and see what a big difference it makes between this and the ordinary scrub. To watch and inspect this large number of fowls killed and packed in a single day is a wonderful plant is a school within itself and many lessons can be learned by the average grower or those who to this plant, also the one at Moravia, Tenn. and today the farmers of Tennessee for a plus and byproduct amount to more than $20,000,000 annually. It is simply because the people are forced to raise it for this make money, but money has been so easily made throughout the country that it is being raised in a way that is not profitable. The hundreds of farmers and merchants who are able to and could well afford to add high class live stock to their community and give the poor man an opportunity to poultry in every amount of money the benefits of these animals and poultry by crossing the south for the growing of grain and spruce and other products. Men of this class who will take up this work will be doing a great work for our country and in time to come they would be richly rewarded and their investment pay as well as profit as any other work they could spend. With the opportunities we have through in the south for the growing of grain and spruce and other products. Men of this class who will take up this work will be doing a great work for our country and in time to come they would be richly rewarded and their investment pay as well as profit as any other work they could spend.

Our state should by all means make a liberal appropriation for the state fair, and in case of a rainy day like Nashville last year there would be something to fall back on to pay the expenses. The only way possible to realize something that will bring better results is to do a work that in dollars and cents and of value to the country in the south for the growing of grain and spruce and other products. Men of this class who will take up this work will be doing a great work for our country and in time to come they would be richly rewarded and their investment pay as well as profit as any other work they could spend.

The public exhibitions at the fair at Nashville are interesting and entertaining, and they have a world of free attractions, good races, good music and something to entertain the farmers and crowds that attend this fair. They bring and leave in the city of Nashville thousands of dollars every year that would never come to town if it was not for this state fair. A BETTER HOME

DOES your home give you all the comfort and satisfaction you would LIKE? THERE'S a big difference in homes. Some have a cozy, inviting atmosphere which makes men want to hurry back. Others are pleasant enough, but they lack something. THOSE little touches that make houses cozy and "home-like" are not hard to attain. They are not the expensive things. A new chair with the right atmosphere here, a new dresser, a newavenport, a new sideboard, a new china cabinet, a new table—just a few things and your home is transformed. All these and lots of other good things can be had at Ed Matthews & Co. from 15 to 25 per cent cheaper than in the high rent districts. JUST pay our store a visit and see how easy it is to buy furniture of us. Our Liberal Credit System is at your service. THE HOME OF THE HOOSIER KITCHEN CABINET.

AT THE THEATRES

An Old Favorite, Al H. Wilson, Comes to the Atlanta in "A Rolling Stone" for One Night, Monday—"North of '53," the Frozen Arctic in Movies, at the Atlanta Latter Part of Week

Al H. Wilson, the German "Chauffeur" talent and the only present-day exponent of the kind of stage drama that is the masterpiece of a generation ago by Fritz Bremer will be the strong attraction at the Atlanta Monday night.

"NORTH OF '53" AT THE ATLANTA. AL H. WILSON IN "A ROLLING STONE" AT THE ATLANTA.

"ONE DAY" AT THE LYRIC.

Big New York Success, "A Son of Solomon," Headlines Forsyth-Saguel to "Three Weeks" Comes to Lyric in Elinor Glyn's Dramatized Novel, "One Day" - Bijou Shows "The Messenger Boy"

Some of the best known acts in vaudeville have been selected for the program that will be offered at the Forsyth this week. In the entire program there is not an act that has failed to stand the test exacted by Keith managers before a number can be presented in one of the exclusive houses of the circuit.

The headliner will be a dramatic comedy sketch, "A Son of Solomon," composed by the greatest dramatist that ever been offered in vaudeville. It will be presented by a thoroughly trained company with special effects and will be something entirely away from the usual run of vaudeville. The story is of intense gripping interest and the comedy that will awake the humor in most any soul. Another feature of the program that will be a splendid dramatic one will be James Thornton, one of the greatest comedians the world has ever known, and commencing to be the best monologist ever in vaudeville.

"One Day" Elinor Glyn's novel, the most interesting of its sort that has been presented on any stage. Eddie Girard and J. J. Gardner, "One Day" at the Lyric.

"The principal theme of the play is the story of a young man who is in New York "One Day" created a veritable sensation. The play is in four acts and is a beautiful and interesting and entertaining dialogue, smart situation and picturesque romance. One of the principal scenes takes place at a party given by the hero's mother in New York from Liverpool. It is on this line that Paul, the young prince of Scotch descent, sees and falls madly in love with "One Day" a young western girl who is returning to the states. The infatuation is mutual and for the short space of one day they let their love lead them to be declared to our stagegoers.

Miss Faye Cunick, a young actress of note, will be seen in the role of One Day's beautiful young heroine, while Mr. Victor Southward, a young and handsome player who has achieved success in his own chosen profession, will play the part of Paul.

Studebaker Wins Cup. A Studebaker "25" secured from the trophy in the recent Studebaker run, with a perfect record and without adjustment or repair in the 240 miles of rough going. The full complement of parts included twenty-three other cars.

"North of '53" is a comedy and melodrama of million pictures will be shown for the first time in this city at the Atlanta theatre, October 3, 8, 10 and 11, with daily matinee. These pictures were loaned to Mr. Henry B. Doble, of New York, and are being presented by Mr. J. H. Brown, Jr., the man who has successfully presented the Italian African hunt pictures.

"North of '53" covers a scope of country in which few people are familiar with Mr. Brown's pictures show that far northern land of grandeur in summer and of ice and snow in winter. While the action is in the upper end of the continent and includes every detail of the country of the white people, among which is the Upper River and Northwestern railroad, which is the consideration of the greatest achievement accomplished by man.

Another feature was the wonderful endurance shown by the hardy little Alaskan dogs, which were used a great deal to draw the sleds containing material used in constructing bridges.

"The Messenger Boy" Bijou. The picture of the Jewell Keller company is being demonstrated in a most satisfactory manner these days at the Bijou, where crowded houses are being secured. The sixth week, which was brought to close Saturday night, was one of the most successful of the week.

At the opening of the play, Grit and his partner, Two-Penny, are shown in their improvised home, a big coat hanging from the ceiling that is stuck away on the wall of the New York docks. Grit, a newspaper, who sells papers for a living is driven away from his stand on the bridge by a gang of toughs. He is rescued by Grit and his partner, Two-Penny, and becomes their little queen. One afternoon during one of their many trips to the market in search of food, Grit is discovered by Colonel Worry, a rich banker, as the long lost child of his daughter, and she bids farewell to Grit and Two-Penny and goes to live with Colonel Worry, and Two-Penny is a position as valet to the colonel. Grit, as a messenger boy, is sent to the colonel's home and is recognized by Grit as her former friend. It is here that Grit is recognized by the colonel as the missing heir of millions. He is sent away to school and he returns to claim the hand of Grit. The villain of the play is unmasked, and as in all good dramas, his just deserts.

Monday night will be lady's free night, when any lady accompanied by an escort holding a paid 20-cent ticket, will be admitted free. Provided the ticket has been purchased before a 6 o'clock Monday evening. There will be daily matinees at 2:00 and night performances at 8:00.

He has just returned from New Orleans where he secured many new manuscripts before professional stamp and bill collectors. He states he has been deluged with letters offering him various Confederate postage stamps when the value of one piece is worth 100.

COUNCIL WILL DECLARE CHARTER RESULT MONDAY. Results of the recent charter election will be officially declared by the general council at the meeting Monday afternoon. The record shows a defeat, but two charter amendments recommended by the legislature to the voters as separate and independent propositions were accepted. These were in addition to the charter of the municipal government and the trial of the powers of the city council.

RACING KING TO USE TIRE CHAINS. Something altogether new in equipping a car for racing is to put chains on it. Louis Diabrow is to put them on the Jax-Lynch and the Lincoln 20. He says he thinks he can make better time on turns with the Wood chairs he will mount.

The crew company, whose racing team Diabrow is the head will equip it with and use both Wood chairs.

Here Is the New Store As It Appears Today

A Modern Building Planned for Public Service

All Its Advantages, Comforts and Conveniences We Want You to Share

Service

There is a fine, old-fashioned country inn up in one of the eastern states, in which hangs the following legend:

"Stranger within these gates, who's thou art, No limitation to thy freedom fear; Come when thou wilt, and when thou wilt depart, Since for thy pleasure—and service—all are gathered here."

We want to make this apply in a big, broad and helpful way to the new store. Especially would we have it noted for its spirit of hospitality.

Friends Old and New

Right at the beginning let us say: The store will never grow too old or too large to forget courtesy, kindness and consideration due to its first friends—those who have made progress possible for us—nor shall it be wanting in constant and cheerful service to its new friends.

We Want You to Turn Instinctively to Us for Service

The test of all great books is whether we can go back to them with the same fervor and devotion.

So it is with a store. It must prove itself ready to meet the tests of each new day without disappointments.

This new store is ready to take care of your wants. There is plenty of room for people to move about without knocking elbows.

And it is large enough to hold the goods people want. All your delving into, and drawing from, will not impoverish it. Only enrich and strangely nourish it, as each day new life comes through the inflow of new goods which are brought to take the place of those going out.

Thus the mainspring of this big clock-working business is STEADFASTNESS TO A FIXED PURPOSE—to be ready, at any hour of the day, with service that means satisfaction to all.

Improved Methods

Storekeeping methods have been improved, in every phase of the business—from the systems that prevail in the accounting room, on down through each department, to the delivery of packages.

There are scores of new features, which naturally will be overlooked in the telling. We have tried to miss nothing that experience and endless study have suggested for the betterment of our storekeeping plans for service to you.

Service!

Completeness. Skill in the art of gathering goods. The study of the people's wants, and in bringing together, from the best sources of the world, the newest and best merchandise—AT THE RIGHT PRICES.

Policy

GOOD STORE POLICY IS LIKE THE ODORS OF THE GARDEN. It is easy for a violet to smell sweet, or for a carnation to share with you its incomparable fragrance. The flowers can't help it. They live up to their nature.

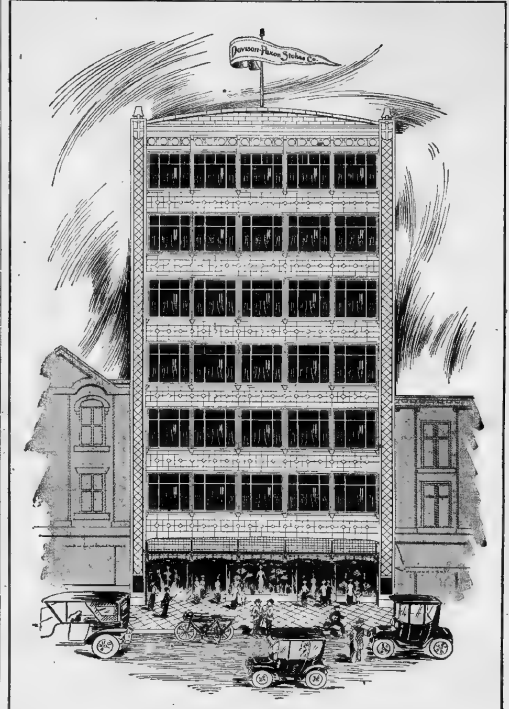

"Nature Will Out"

Just as good storekeeping methods, right principles and good merchandise will out. They carry their own message with an eloquence of appeal that none can approach.

This Is What the New Store Stands For

These little editorials on Policy and Service are merely to bring you into fresh sympathy with the broadened atmosphere of the institution which was built for you to share.

Davison-Paxon-Stokes Co.

A Few Facts About Special Features

Approaching the front of the store, you will be impressed with the size and arrangement, the general attractiveness provided by our new display windows. Constantly will they present an artistic and comprehensive exhibition of the newest styles, and also values which will pay you well to consider.

We believe you will be delighted with the beautiful interior and its systematic arrangement. At every turn improvements present themselves. Handsome new furnishings and fixtures of the most improved type have been specially constructed and installed, after careful planning, to best meet, in each case, the true object of their purpose, present, in original manner, the most of utility as well as features of great decorative value.

Observe, too, how the additional space provided by the new building permits of much greater freedom; broad, spacious aisles, more convenient displays, the assembling of more thorough and complete lines of merchandise.

Five large, roomy passenger elevators, of the safest class known, in charge of courteous manipulators, are located at the left side of the building, and one passenger elevator at the right side. The stairway in the center, main aisle, makes the downstairs section easily accessible to those who prefer to walk.

Summing it up briefly, we would say: This is a modern conception of a store as it should really be.

The Most Convenient Trunk In the World

Is a Rountree Wardrobe Trunk. It stands on end and is really a portable wardrobe. You hang clothes in it and they are in as perfect a condition at the end of your trip as they were when packed.

One side of the trunk contains a full set of garment hangers attached to a special carrier which slides easily in and out. The last skirt or suit is as easily reached as the first. On the opposite side are a number of drawers of various sizes, for waists, shoes, ties, stockings, etc.

Every inch of this trunk is made of the materials by skilled workmen in our factory. It's a trunk built to be handed about; built to take all the punishment that baggage "managers" can inflict on helpless luggage.

If you would take a groovy assortment of waists, skirts, suits, etc., with you and keep them in good condition, readily accessible at all times, you will do well to invest in a Rountree Wardrobe Trunk. Any one that you select will serve you satisfactorily for many years.

Walkaway for Alabama Team

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Oct. 4.—Three touchdowns in the first four minutes of play indicates very well the walkaway for Alabama in today's game against Birmingham college. The game was called in the third quarter with the score standing 11 to 0 in favor of the crimson squad, and a variety of reasons were given for the call.

Several times the tackle was called upon to advance the ball and here he had a chance to slip in his first long run he used the stiff arm to great advantage, gaining twenty yards for a firstman, and always succeeded in driving the ball.

Atlanta Stars Select Giants To Win Games

Are Pulling for the Athletics, but at the Same Time Think National Leaguers Will Win Out

Three prominent Atlanta professional ball players have given The Journal an interview on the world's series and how they think the Athletics will win.

"My heart is with Mack's men. My judgment tells me Mack's pitchers are going to put it over them. Mack will not let Mack's pitchers be at least twice in what ought to be the most important of the series."

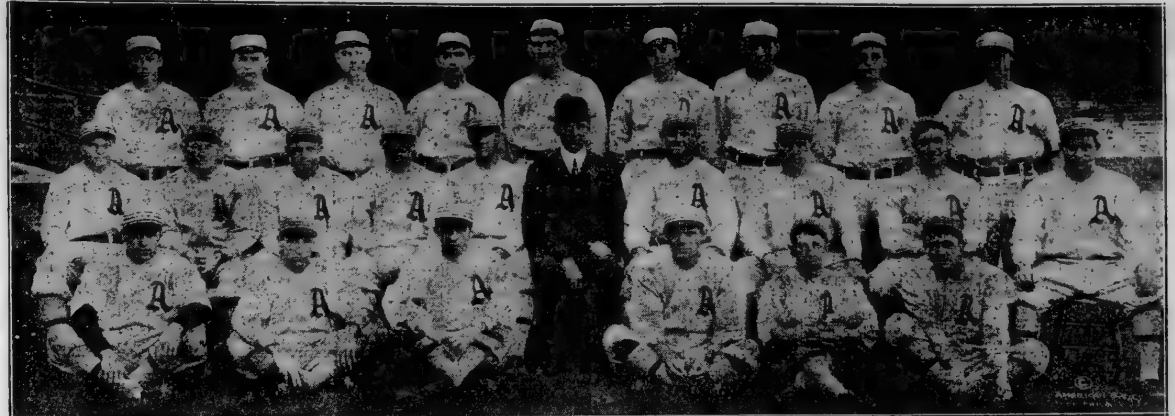

The Giants have speed and better pitchers on their team than the Athletics. The Athletics have speed and better pitchers on their team than the Athletics.

FEATURES OF PAST BATTLES FOR THE WORLD'S HONORS

The largest attendance at any one game was 38,281, when the Athletics opened at the Polo grounds October 14th, 1911. Matheuson winning from Bender 3-1; the smallest attendance, last game of 1908 series, played at Detroit October 14, 4,210.

The fastest game was played at Detroit October 14, 1908. Mordecai Brown winning from Donovan 2-0 in one hour and twenty-five minutes.

The slowest game was played by the White Sox and Cubs, October 13, 1906, at West Side park. Required two hours and forty minutes for Walsh and White to win by four from Reulbach, Greaser and Overall in nine innings.

No series has opened as early as the Boston-Pittsburg series of 1903, which started on the first of October. The latest game ever played was between the giants and Athletics, played October 26, 1911, at New York.

There have been ten games where the attendance was less than the crowd at the Atlanta-Mobile game of September 5, 1913. Detroit falling under this mark five times; Boston three times, and Pittsburg and Philadelphia once each.

The opening game of the 1908 series was played before 16,812 people at Detroit, 1,888 less than the Atlanta crowd of September 5.

The only seriesless game was the Detroit-Chicago game of October 14, 1909. The Athletics won the 1910 championship with only twelve players. Coombs and Bender doing all the pitching.

Every game of the 1905 series was a shut-out. Matheuson winning the first, third and fifth games and McGinnity the fourth for New York. Bender won the only game for Philadelphia, leading McGinnity 3-0.

Jiggs Donahue's single was the only hit made off Reulbach in the second game, 1905, allowing only two hits, one base on balls, and striking out twelve.

Denny Murphy leads in doubles with six. Leach in triples with 4, Fred Clarke, Frank Baker and Pat Dougherty in home runs with 2 each.

The best pitched game was by Ed Walsh in 1905, when he beat the Cubs 3-0, allowing only two hits, one base on balls, and striking out twelve.

Schulze, Sheppard, Stoutland and Tinker have played most games—21. Schulze has been at bat most—18, and has also made the most hits—25.

Chance has stolen the most bases, with 10; Hans Wagner a close second with 9. Ty Cobb has only 4 in 17 games.

Skinnfeldt best sacrifice hitter with seven. Denny Murphy leads in doubles with six. Leach in triples with 4, Fred Clarke, Frank Baker and Pat Dougherty in home runs with 2 each.

ELEVEN CITIES HAVE WON WORLD'S SERIES

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Twenty-one cities have the pennant winners of the country fought for the world's championship on the diamond.

The world's series will pass its twenty-fifth birthday, however, with the forthcoming contest between the giants and Athletics. It first came into being in New York in 1884, when Providence, winner of the National League pennant, crossed bat with the victorious Metropolitan—New York's standard bearers—of the old American association.

There were lapses in 1891 and 1893 and a big gap from 1897 to 1902, inclusive, and still another lapse in 1904 when no more games were played, but from 1884 to the present, having these interruptions, the post-season fight for the apex of the baseball world has been an established custom.

The flag has flown in ten states during this short generation. Once it strayed west of the Mississippi river and breezed from a stupa-still in the St. Louis park of the American association.

It stayed there but one year, and season, came back to Detroit and never since has crossed the Father of Waters.

A flag without a home, it has floated over seven cities. Providence, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Detroit, New York, Louisville, Boston, Cleveland, Baltimore, Pittsburg and Philadelphia—all have sent forth, from time to time, clubs that have fought victorious battles for the trophy. One hundred and thirty-four games have stanned these teams in various premier baseball players of the world in no uncertain manner. Nearly three-fourths of the games have gone to the victors. The contests have been closer than they were in the halcyon days of the past.

Ninety-seven of the 131 games have been won by the teams which captured the trophy. Thirty-seven have gone to the losers. Fifteen times a National league club has won the flag; once the old American association captured it, five times it has floated over an American league park. In fact, the American league clubs have been its keeper five times out of nine years in which the American and National league clubs have played for it. For the past three years it has been over an American league park.

The table which follows traces the flight of the flag from season to season over the country.

Table titled 'RESULTS OF WORLD SERIES TO DATE' showing the date, year, winner, and loser for each series from 1884 to 1913.

YOUNG CUBAN, SICK HERE, LONGS FOR HOME

Georgia Libby Circle of King's Daughters Seeks Funds to Send Him to Cuba

Contributions are asked by the Georgia Libby Circle of the King's Daughters for a fund to defray the expense of sending Gabriel Guizarro, a Cuban, young man who has been a patient in this hospital for over a year, and is convalescing with diabetes.

Guizarro, who is just twenty-three years old, is a graduate of Xavier College. He received his education there through the generosity of a friend of Bishop Candler. After finishing college, he secured a position in the clerical department of the Western and Atlantic railroad company, where he held until illness forced him to quit work.

His case was reported to the ladies of the Georgia Libby Circle of the King's Daughters, and for eight months ago they set a room for him at the Grady hospital. To defray this expense they held numerous sales and dinners for which came from the merchants in the city, and for which the ladies are most grateful. In addition the young man at the railroad company established out of their salaries to help the Cuban receive the necessary medical care, and the hospital at the Grady hospital has done all he could for the young man.

As Guizarro's case was pronounced inoperable the King's Daughters were compelled to move him from the Grady hospital. A room was found for him at 107 Capitol avenue, and there he is given every attention. All of this he gives every attention. All of this he gives every attention.

It is not an effort to bear and at the same time keep up their other work in the city. For this reason they ask help from any one who would like to assist in sending the Cuban home.

Contributions may be sent either to the treasurer, Mrs. W. C. Ballard, 106 West Fryer street, or to Mrs. J. J. Jones, leader of the Georgia Libby Circle of the King's Daughters, 107 Capitol avenue. Mrs. Jones's telephone number is 5124. Should any one desire further information as to the condition of the young man.

Tumulty in Rubber Neck Car Heard His Own Virtues Landed

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Secretary Tumulty was chucking today over his experience in a sightseeing automobile. He loudly denigrated the "rubber neck" tourist who had seen the president in the White House grounds, and he had a good deal to say about the "rubber neck" tourist who had seen the president in the White House grounds.

Secretary Tumulty blushed uneasily when he spoke of the "rubber neck" tourist who had seen the president in the White House grounds, and he had a good deal to say about the "rubber neck" tourist who had seen the president in the White House grounds.

Going By Herself on 2000 Mile Horseback Ride

Miss Betty Thorpe and the horse she will ride in 2000 mile vacation jaunt.

SPOKANE, Wash.—Two thousand miles horseback. Yes, that's some trip for a girl, especially when a large part of the journey is through wild and unsettled sections of the country. I expect to reach Chicago in about two months. I realize that this is "some ride" for a girl, but still it is not impossible. It has not been attempted, that I know of, since the days of the pioneers, and if they could do it, why not I? All I need is courage and the determination to get there. I have both.

My reason for the trip I have always wanted to do it because I think it a delightful and adventurous way of seeing the country—the real country away from hotels and railroads.

CHINA STUDIES U. S. FORESTRY METHODS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—China, who recently followed the example of the Chinese republic, has spent some time here investigating the work of the forest service, declared that the forest service would be of value to the newly created department of agriculture and forestry in China. "In the matter of forest conservation," he said, "the United States profit much by looking upon the disaster which has befallen the forests of your country. Now we wish to profit by the improved methods which you have discovered and applied."

MEAT SHORTAGE FOUND IN CANNED OYSTERS

Packers Make Insufficient Allowance for Loss of Weight in Processing

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Shortage of 10 to 15 per cent of drained oyster meat was discovered by the national board of food and drug inspection in its examination of samples of oysters put during the season of 1912-1913. This shortage was found, says an official statement in one of all sizes except smoking select and extra select oysters. The officials express the opinion that this was "not intentional, but due rather to the fact that packers made insufficient allowance for loss of weight of oysters through processing."

GOTHAM GUN-MAN SAID TO BE GIRL'S SLAYER

Tiny Maiden of New York Killed, and Police Are on Gun-Man's Trail

(By Associated Press.) NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The battered body of a little girl—killed by a blow on the head—lay on the floor morgue today while the police of the greater city sought Joseph De Palma, a notorious Italian gunman, as her slayer. The child's body was brought to the morgue last night by an undertaker, who told a tale of having been coerced at pistol's point to go to the gunman's flat and remove the body. In the flat he saw a blond woman weeping. When she was gone and with her the gunman.

(The theory) was advanced that the child had been kidnapped and was being held for ransom. There is no police record, however, of a child of that description being missing.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Allison M'Farland of New York, acquitted at Newark, N. J., of wife murder and who was married to Miss Florence Frontley of Philadelphia, for the love of whom the prosecution at murder trial convicted M'Farland, saw his wife, who in Buffalo at the home of Kenneth O'Mara, of 11 Taft Place, has been pardoned from federal prison at Atlanta after serving only one-third of sentence of eighteen months for counterfeiting at New York.

Tells of Catching Early Trains, of Contending With Porters, Waiters and Bell Hops, of the Peculiarities of Customers, of Failures, Successes and Joys

"When I'm in Atlanta for a week-end and am to get out Monday morning, I rise and breakfast at 7 o'clock and am at the passenger station by 7:10 having my trunk checked. The trunks have been left over Sunday at the baggage room. If I am just passing through Atlanta, and if I am getting out with new samples, the trunks have been sent down to the station from the store the night before or very early on the morning of my departure.

"Then, grip in hand, I board the train for my first stop. My first duty on arriving is to have my trunks taken at once to the sample room, either at the hotel or elsewhere. I open up my samples representing about 600 different articles of merchandise, and display them as attractively as possible. Then I'm off to get merchants to come and look at my offerings.

"Then, of course, meet with many success, such as: 'I've already bought, prices are too high.' 'I'll look over what you've got but I tell you now I won't buy anything.' 'Are you next time you are here and I'll give you a big order.' 'Very traveler run up against these things. He looks them as a matter of course. Here's to the Dealer--- May He Deal Fair!

Last Sunday a New York department store advertised a big anniversary sale to begin Monday. It was O'Neill Adams Co.

Monday they sold upward of THREE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS' worth of merchandise—a record!

In Tuesday's Times the firm arose and in about thirty inches of well-chosen space said its very best THANK YOU.

They said Thank You not only to the people who had bought the goods, to the clerks and helpers who had done the work, but also—

They said Thank You to the MANUFACTURERS who had supplied the merchandise—the MANUFACTURERS who had stood close by, right back of them, replenishing the stocks as the steady onslaught of buying swept them away.

You don't see that every day. The MANUFACTURER isn't looking for bouquets. He's after business. But when business comes by the way of bouquets, he smiles and likes it.

It was a graceful and sensible thing of O'Neill Adams Co. to make their manners to the manufacturer. It was a recognition of the importance of his relation to the great game of Supply and Demand.

The MANUFACTURER is the man behind the scenes who makes possible the brilliant action out in front.

If he is CLOSE BY, where you can put your hands on what you need from him, the game goes gloriously. If he is remote, the play is handicapped and profits are clipped.

When you get this far in reading this bulletin, will you please kindly go right to the bottom thereof, and read the names of those of us who sign it? Then come back and read on.

We are ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS. We want to talk about ten minutes' worth to you SOUTHERN DEALERS.

A few months ago the Atlanta Merchants and Manufacturers Association flooded the merchants of the South with a pamphlet.

The first paragraph of it ran like this—read it, it only looks like poetry; it's really common horse-sense:

If you keep a store in Hometown, And you stock it up with stuff, Bought in far and distant places, Just the local trade to bluff; If you skip the near-by market, And you travel far to buy, Is it fair to scold the natives If the same plan they should try?

Then there was another paragraph that went along, about like this: If you pay out extra dollars For big freights and travel, too; If you spend your local money In a section far from you; If you boost the far-off market By bestowing there your trade, Can you kick when local patrons Follow out the plan you've laid?

Here, Brother Dealer, is where we get right down to brass tacks. There has never been so much sentiment as there is this good Sunday for ATLANTA-MADE stuff. The movement to popularize Atlanta products is more than a sentiment—it is an ACTUAL FACT.

The women folks are talking it. The schools are touching on it incidentally and the children are absorbing the idea. The consumer is getting hold of the idea that his loyalty is involved—which it certainly is. The spirit of the sentiment is crystallizing into a growing demand for ATLANTA-MADE wares.

The question is, will YOU DEALERS see in time the advantage that awaits you if you handle OUR products? We are proposing to carry on a campaign of education, not only to the present crop of consumers, but to the coming-ones. We will stand right back of you in every effort to swell the demand for our product. We can demonstrate to you beyond the shadow of a doubt that we have the STUFF. We have made good all over the South and in many other sections of the country.

We can do it in a bigger way than ever—WITH YOUR HELP. Tell you what: We can't go into all the details of what we, as individual firms, want you to know about our particular line—our Shoes, our Shirts, our Vehicles, our Bread, our Farm Tools, our Mattresses, our Stoves, our Stock Feed—

But you study about what we've said, and let's get together on the supply-and-demand proposition. Write us. Phone us. Come by the office. Let's make it a mutual-benefit plan. What do you say?

The month of September showed a big increase of business over last September. The sales of the Capital City Tobacco Company. "In fact this was such a big month for us that we have had our biggest month in November."

Mr. H. L. Singer and Joe Brown of the H. L. Singer company returned through Atlanta, Ga. and spent last Sunday in that city.

Mr. H. L. Singer of the McCord-Stewart company has been away from the store two days last week on account of illness. He is now well again and will be back at the office Monday.

Mr. B. Lewis of the Capital City Tobacco Company, who has been working the trade in North Georgia, writes that he has had some success in the change as has come in the business feeling in Georgia in the last thirty days. Everywhere an optimistic feeling is in the air.

"Our September business showed a most healthy increase this year over last year," said Donald McKie, of the H. L. Singer company.

CITY FARMERS

endent, makes his farm yield richly and convinces him of the state's agricultural needs. In fact, convictions are forced upon everyone whose residence is the city, but whose avocation is farming. Miss Bessie Wynn, the vaudeville actress whose voice is incidental to her growing, spoke upon a recent visit to Atlanta of the city farm which she has in the excellent state of Michigan, and of the efficacy of farming as an aid to beauty. Her vacations are spent in some such greenham gown and sunbonnet as she is here seen wearing. Neither mountains nor seashore, she protests, could prove a better aid to health.

Farming Is Given as Beauty Recipe

Her directions for beauty are a farm near the city, where eight hours of every week shall be spent, and where one shall engage in active work instead

W. J. Telson digging potatoes

THINK of rest, recreation, and the pleasure of a speaking acquaintance with nature, for the city man who takes to farming there is also hope as he contemplates the thought of bagging the crop and looking forward to next year's rich yield. But city farmers of Atlanta resent the suggestion that their acres give poor return for the laborer's labor. A hobby is a hobby, and it is as out of place to speak of the slow speed of a neighbor's automobile as of the triviality of his "pet farm."

Councilman J. R. Nutting has chosen upon his farm at East Lake the latest agricultural mode of Georgia. This farm, which lies across the river from the golf course of the Atlanta Athletic club, is fair and pleasing. It is a farm of rich and productive acres, and has none of the air of a hobby or a diversion, thought of lightly and used to occupy idle hours. Tip on the other hand, it bears proof of earnest tillage which has borne a profitable yield. The richness of this soil stems from Mr. Nutting's discovery that dynamiting of land is a wonderful encouragement to the growth of crops. His method is to sink charges of dynamite at intervals, and to break the earth to a depth of three feet. With this preparation, plants are enabled to send their roots farther into the ground, and the soil to retain moisture even through a dry season.

Agricultural Hope of State of Georgia

"Undoubtedly," says Mr. Nutting, "the agricultural hope of Georgia lies in the dynamiting of land, the planting of alfalfa, and an increase in dairying and cattle raising. I have experimented with the effect of dynamite in breaking the earth, and I find that it is a preparation for planting which no plowing can equal. Next in importance is the growing of alfalfa. From a small lot which I raised last year I secured five cuttings, and next year I shall plant three additional acres in alfalfa, and next year I probably shall increase this crop. Alfalfa revolutionized Kenna, made it the richest state in the Union. And it can do almost as much for Georgia. All this Mr. Nutting learned from his farm, which is near enough to the edge of the city to be called urban. Like other city farmers, he visits his country acres only once or twice within a week. But he has perfected a system which, followed faithfully by a superin-

most urban in Atlanta. It is entirely within the city, and is faced upon this hand and that by paved streets, car lines, and other artificialities of the city. But it consists in eight acres, and five of this number are under cultivation. He grows grains, garden produce, and hay; but the most interesting are the root-on ears which once kept until Thanksgiving. The year in question followed an oppressive summer with a mild winter, and until the day of Thanksgiving no frost had whitened the roots. The thought occurred to Mr. Yarbrough that, perhaps, if he pulled corn by the roots, the ears would keep green into the winter; and he determined upon the experiment. He dug deep around each of the stalks, brought up as much of the roots as possible, and hung the corn within a store house. As the winter advanced the ears remained green, just as when the stalks were pulled from the ground; and upon the arrival of Thanksgiving he had green corn to serve along with turkey and the other usual accompaniments of the day.

Orchard Grass Shoulder High

But his farming, despite the small number of acres under cultivation, is as serious as all city farming assuredly is. He makes a specialty of forage, and has grown clover which reached as high as his hips and orchard grass which attained the height of his shoulders. He makes it a rule to require two crops each year from each of the five acres which he tills. He begins in the winter by (Continued on Back Page.)

MISS BESSIE WYNN the Vaudeville actress who gives farming as a beauty recipe

CHANDLER'S FASHION PARADE

BY O. HENRY

Illustrated With a Drawing by Dom J. Lavin, the Famous American Artist

Mrs. POWERS CHANDLER was pressing his evening suit in his bed room. One iron was heating on a small gas stove; the other was being pushed vigorously back and forth to make the desirable crease that would be later on extending in straight lines from Mr. Chandler's waist to the bottom of his best suit. So much of the hero's toilet may be trusted to his confidence, that even his view of himself as he descended the steps of his lodging house was immediately noted, calm, assured, handsome—in appearance the typical New York young gentleman, getting out, slightly bored, to inaugurate the pleasures of the evening.

Chandler's honorarium was $13 per week. He was employed by the architect as a designer for a considered and honest believed—though he would not have dared to admit it in New York—that the Madison building, a superior in design to the great cathedrals of Milan.

Out of each week's earnings (Chandler sat aside at the end of each ten weeks with the extra—based on general)—was coming from the bargain counter of stingy old Fuller's Time. He arranged himself in the results of millions and millions of dollars. He was a miser, and he showed, and there died with rattle and rattle, with a dollar and a dime for a few hours, play the wealthy idler to be considered usual, a bottle bearing a respectable label, coming in a neat, smoke, cab fare and the ordinary.

The one delectable evening coming from each dull seventy was to Chandler a source of pleasure. To the society bird comes but one debut; it stands alone sweet in his memory, and he has white-washed, but to Chandler each ten weeks brought a new excitement, thrilling, as new as the first had been. To sit among bon vivants, to receive the compliments of the music, to look upon the beauties of such a parade and to be looked upon by them—was to Chandler's first dance and short-sleeved little compared with this.

Up Broadway Chandler moved with the vespertine dress parade for his evening he was exhibiting as well as a passer. For the next thirty minutes he was a perfect cavalier and dined at a table with a man who lived an idle life. He would not care to do that, but he had a man who lived an idle life. He would not care to do that, but he had a man who lived an idle life. He would not care to do that, but he had a man who lived an idle life. "My dear Mrs. Marian," he exclaimed, "Work! Think of dressing every day, for dinner, of making half a dozen calls in an afternoon!"

appreciation of it would add to his own triumph and pleasure. "I think," he said to her, with frank gravity, "that your feet need a longer rest than you suppose. Now, when you can give it that and at the same time do me a favor, I was on my way to dine at my lovely self when you came tumbling around the corner. You come with me and we'll have a glass of champagne very nicely, I am sure."

The girl looked quickly up into Chandler's eyes, pleasant contentment. Her eyes twinkled once very brightly, and then she smiled innocently.

"But we don't know each other. It wouldn't be right, would it?" she said, doubtfully.

"There's nothing wrong about it," said the young man, candidly. "I'll introduce myself—permit me. My name is Chandler, and my business is to introduce myself to you as possible. I will have to lean on your door, whichever you prefer."

"My dear madam," said the girl, with a glance at Chandler's feet and attire. "Never mind that," said Chandler cheerfully. "I'm sure you look more perfect than any girl I have ever seen in the most elaborate dress to-day."

Chandler looked at the girl and found her smiling at him with a merry and kind. She was inexpensively dressed in a plain black dress which suggested a sort of uniform such as shop girls wear. Her glasses were brown hair showed its coils beneath a cheap hat of black straw whose next blackest. You will have to lean on your arm—so—and walk slowly. It is a little bit glad that you slipped on the ice."

Then it was that the Madness of Manhattan, the Frumpy Funs and Feathers, the Basilus of Brag, the Provincial Plague of Pose seized upon Mr. Chandler. He was on Broadway, surrounded by pomp and style, and there were eyes to look at him. On the stage of that comedy he had assumed to play the one-act farce of the party, and all his good angels had not the power to prevail upon him from acting it.

So he began to prate to Miss Marian of clubs, of teas, of golf and of yachting, living at Larchmont. He could see that she was vastly impressed by this vague talk, and he adored his pose by random instances upon this concern for the welfare of the whole people.

FAITH

Copyright 1913 By William J. Bryan

FAITH exerts a controlling influence over our lives. If it is absent, the world is a chaotic mass of confusion. It is the light that guides us through the darkest night, the anchor that holds us fast when the storms of adversity are raging around us. Without faith, we are like a ship without a rudder, drifting aimlessly on the sea of life. Faith is the power that enables us to overcome our fears, to conquer our doubts, and to achieve our highest aspirations. It is the secret of the success of the great men of the world, the power that has built up the greatest empires and the most magnificent civilizations. Without faith, we are lost. With faith, we are victorious.

LONG LIVE QUEEN OF BABIES!

Special Correspondence.

ST. LOUIS CITY, Ia.—Hail to the queen of babies! Let everybody salute this dainty miss of humanity for the time being—wears the regal crown of baby perfection—Catherine Coor, of Ottawa, Ia.

Baby Catherine is the nearest perfect specimen of babyhood so far produced in the world! She lacks just three tenths of one per cent of being absolutely perfect!

Since this "better baby" movement has been given widespread publicity and great attention, there have been hundreds of baby fairs in which babies were judged and the nearest perfect awarded prizes.

State after state found nearly perfect babies only to learn that other baby fairs unearthed still nearer perfect infants.

The "better babies" contest was the one held at Ottawa, Ia. last week. It was held at the Ottawa Fair, the South Dakota State Fair, the South Dakota State Fair, and the Minnesota State Fair.

We know that a grain of wheat planted in the ground will, under the influence of the sunshine and rain, send forth a blade, and then a stalk, and then the full head, because there is behind the grain of wheat a force irresistible and constantly at work.

There is behind moral and political truth a force equally irresistible and always operating, and just as we may expect the harvest in due season, we may be sure of the triumph of the cause of the oppressed, if it rests upon a growing idea, and that idea, you will grow with it.

FORT PEACE ATLANTA'S STRANGEST DWELLING

F. D. McMillan and His Dwelling at 20 West Fifteenth Street.

By Angus Perkerson

No house in any other city is like the dwelling of F. D. McMillan, at 20 West Fifteenth street. It seems at first a castle, protected by a strong wall, through which appear the mouths of cannon.

The wall is twenty-two feet high, and extends for 145 feet along Fifteenth street. As the masonry rises upward, the top of the wall is partly hidden by vines, and seems to reach toward the clouds. Just above his head are the mouths of vines, which extend the length of the wall. Further upward is another row, and near the top projects a thin line, threatening Fifteenth street and a part of Peachtree.

But the menace is only a pretense, for the great masonry of a kindly person who hides his wood will under a rugged brusqueness. In reality the cannon are harmless pipes, which appear in appearance, but bonded for no more dangerous missiles than roses.

Through the mouths of these roses Mr. McMillan means to spray his vines; and, in the spring and summer, he intends that roses shall hang down from the wall to greet whoever stops to observe or to bid "Fort Peace."

The cannon, rather than the wall, are his dwelling's gentle name. The wall, indeed, is as thick as any wall for actual defense. The stone is heavy granite, and the mortar of rock are piled one upon another until they have changed into a remaining wall to a fortress, which has a medieval air.

This remnant of granite is but a block from Peachtree street, where other houses are built in modern style, and other surroundings are present day. It seems as if the wall were intended for England in the days of border warfare, but by some was set down in this year's sandy soil.

THE BUILDER'S WHIM.
The house is really an architectural macabre, it is a whim which comes from the builder's purpose to do as he pleases, and to be original. He loathes man's opinion, and while he is not a reader of Emerson, he believes with that sage in the need of originality. If what you do seems new to others and excites their ridicule, the effect is unpleasant, but if it is the banner of another, it is more serious than disgust at your own thing.

For this reason he built a house which is contrary to all architectural rules. It is surrounded by a wall which has done a quarrelsome job in the heart of the city. The main floor is a country place, and the upper part is a castle. The sides are of red clay, the floor is sanded, but the rear wall is the object of interest. It has been built from a formation of solid rock, jagged and broken, giving to the house the appearance of a cave that has penetrated far into the earth. The cool air, the shaded light and the quiet bear out this effect. No other house ever had such an entrance.

Mr. McMillan lights two electric globes in the rear, and they shine upon the wall of broken rock. The sides here and there glitter, and trenches are in bloom. No painting could give better effect. But he intends a further improvement.

AN ALPINE RESIDENCE.
The greatest feat in all history was to his mind, the crossing of the Alps in the bitter winter by Marshal MacDonald with 16,000 Frenchmen to attack the enemy camped in Italy. He speaks the emotion of this undertaking, as though it had of his hot above the street makes the observatory equal in height to the fourth or perhaps the twelfth story of the Cathedral building. At least, engineers have given him this estimate, and upon the topmost part of the house all creation seems to be under foot.

When he chose his lot he thought of its "exaltation," its remoteness from the streets and the humdrum, its possibility of seclusion and, yet, of convenience; its view over the city and into the hills.

Fifteenth street, at that time, had not been cut through, and the lot was mostly the plateau of a hill. When the street was made the sidewalk was twenty feet lower than the lot, and others began to plan for him how he should grade in order to place his dwelling even with the street and upon a level with his neighbors.

"And all the while," he explains, "I meant to get as high into the air as I could, and there to build me a country home in the city."

"I had no architect, because I knew that I would borrow from him, and I wanted no one's notions but my own. I intended to build a house suited me, not someone else."

"Half the world lives a lifetime without ever doing what it wants to. Men and women become so used to imitation or so afraid of ridicule that they live out their lives borrowing ideas and expressions and habits, which before had been borrowed."

DREW HIS OWN PLANS.
"I drew my own plans; I had this high wall built just as I wanted it. I designed the house to please myself, and I live here in my way."

Almost as different as the house itself is the owner, almost as rugged upon first sight, and wholly as whimsical and kindly upon nearer approach.

The wall and the cannon mouths, through which roses are to bloom, are but a part of his fanciful plans. The wall was built for seclusion, the rows of cannon which are to shelter roses are a pretty sentiment; his next plans have to do with art. In the side of the wall is a small entrance, which is for temporary use, and is to be supplanted later on by a double door opening from Fifteenth street. But as yet this large door, which is to carry out the medieval effect, has not been hung, although space has been cut in the wall and is now boarded over.

Entered by the small door into a grove, to which is now reserved the main floor of the house, and is chilly, even upon a summer day. The sides are of red clay, the floor is sanded, but the rear wall is the object of interest. It has been built from a formation of solid rock, jagged and broken, giving to the house the appearance of a cave that has penetrated far into the earth. The cool air, the shaded light and the quiet bear out this effect. No other house ever had such an entrance.

Mr. McMillan lights two electric globes in the rear, and they shine upon the wall of broken rock. The sides here and there glitter, and trenches are in bloom. No painting could give better effect. But he intends a further improvement.

Upon the next floor, which is level with the earth, but separated from the dwelling itself, he intended to build a swimming pool. But before this floor was completed an account was printed of the drowning of a little child, and his wife began to fear that the pool would be the cause of an accident. So he changed his plans and made it a music room.

the yard, which is a tangle of vines and trees and is the country in the midst of the city; and by a path one approaches the porch, which is level with the top of the stone wall, through which the three rows of cannon project.

The house within follows the general plan of an old-fashioned country home, but in details it is "different." The old-fashioned hallway gives easy entrance and exit to and from all rooms, it admits the fresh air, it is the "intended" manner of hallway.

He also has his ideas of the height of steps. The architect usually plans them six or seven inches high.

"Nowly about that?" asks Mr. McMillan. "Such steps are too high. They make climbing up stairs a hard task. I have mine only three inches, and the other day three old ladies were here, and walked from the first floor to the top without a grunt."

On top is the observatory. From there the eye can distinguish a water tower in Marietta, and ranges of hills on every hand. A recollection of Mr. McMillan is to stand upon the roof of his dwelling, high above the city, and look round him with field glasses.

He finds that one can then feel farther from men and nearer to God.

But the greater part of his time is spent in his garden, which is built entirely from the street and has the air of being remote from cities. He is there trying a subirrigation system which has never before been attempted in Georgia. He believes that if the farmers in the country would follow the system which he has begun in the city their crops would double in yield.

As a young man, Mr. McMillan tried the old methods of farming, but changed to the business of a machinist, established a shop in Atlanta in 1883 for an eastern company and entered into business later as a partner in the Avery & McMillan Machinery company. But now he is sixty-five years old; he has retired from business and devotes his labors to the country home which he has built within the city.

TO BLOSSOM WITH ROSES.
This dwelling, when completed, will have twenty rooms, and will blossom with roses and green plants. It is different from any other dwelling ever built, but it is far from being complete. The march of Marshal MacDonald and his 16,000 troops over the Alps is yet to be pictured, the three rows of cannon are to become flower pots, and lesser plants are to be finished.

But there is one room which will remain as it is. This room is reserved for Mr. McMillan for his papers and for occasional conferences upon business. Once it was said that he allowed no woman to enter this room, and that it was a pompous military funeral with a glittering escort of soldiers.

There are probably a dozen other ways that Frederick William Taylor could be described, but to call him the greatest catch-as-catch-can always be careful about women entering a room in which he keeps papers of value. The instinct of women is to dust and sweep everything, and they're apt to sweep away the most valuable papers on earth when they get into the midst of housecleaning.

"But it is strange how the story of that room has traveled, wherever a lady comes here she is mildly interested in the rest of the house. But I can see all along that she has her eye on that room. And before long she's going to ask if she can't see inside. I always tell each one that she can, but that no other woman can ever have the same privilege."

Over this little witticism he chuckles with satisfaction. His eyes twinkle. It is plain that no part of his strange dwelling is more whimsical than the himself.

There he lives with his wife and his niece, content that he has built a house which is "different," and which appeals no other man's plans, and determined to make it as much more different as God will allow.

An Anomalous Man

BY A. E. FERGUSON.
An anomalous man, broadly speaking, is one who is not what he seems. Consequently there doesn't seem to be any impropriety in dubbing a man an anomaly who:

Never went to school in his life until he became a member of the faculty of a big university.

Has at no time been connected with a military organization or served in any capacity as a soldier or sailor, army or navy, and yet is entitled to receive the salute of honor from every officer and soldier of the armies of at least four of the biggest nations of the earth.

And who, though a private citizen, should be described, but to call him the greatest catch-as-catch-can always be careful about women entering a room in which he keeps papers of value. The instinct of women is to dust and sweep everything, and they're apt to sweep away the most valuable papers on earth when they get into the midst of housecleaning.

"But it is strange how the story of that room has traveled, wherever a lady comes here she is mildly

Released as a nurseryman by his father, Taylor learned to call trees and plants by their first names before he knew the names of the presidents of the United States. He studied hard in the practical, as well as the scientific, side of his profession. He was called to the University of Nebraska as professor of agriculture and horticulture and was a pioneer in the organization of farmers' institutes in his state.

He taught agriculture in this country, Europe and Asia. He imported from Russia a new kind of oat which has become a staple with American farmers, and from Italy he was instrumental in getting the macaroni wheat. He taught Russians, Germans, French, Portuguese, Italians, Japanese and others how to grow things in their own countries, and received grateful acknowledgments from the kings and queens and kaisers and emperors in the form of presents and decorations. In fact when Taylor is all dressed up he looks like a Christmas tree—there is so much gilt lace and medals hanging on him.

Between times he found time to manage big irrigation projects in the west and southwest and get a firm seat at the very top of the crowd of scientific and practical farmers who are making seven or eight blades of grass grow in the same spot that there wasn't a bit of grass before.

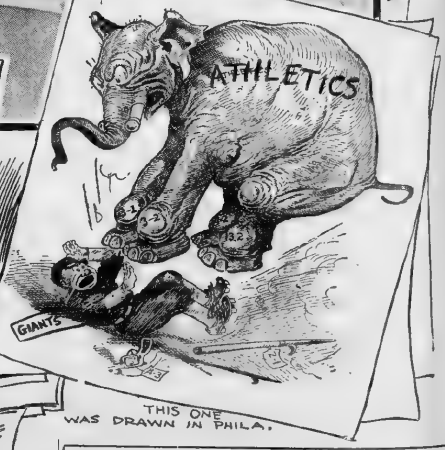

THE CREATION OF THE CARTOON

A MACAULEY CARTOON THAT NEEDED NO CAPTION

A HUMOROUS CARTOON BY MCCUTCHEON

CARTOONIST BREWERTON

THIS ONE WAS DRAWN IN PHILA.

BY ALBERT W. BREWERTON.

CARTOONS have been called the "king" of art, but you must remember that along its various times very expressive. Cartoons, or picture ideas, are the most universal language, reaching more people and giving more potent and carrying power to an idea.

The good done by good cartoons would be hard to estimate. They move as well as instruct and amuse thousands of people every day.

One cause, perhaps, is that there is no such thing as a real school for cartoonists. Many imagine that save in their making of a great cartoon. The amateur thinks no one in his own inappropriately proportioned drawing a similarity to the raised exaggeration or caricature of the cartoonist. There should never be a distortion of drawing without a careful purpose.

It is becoming more and more necessary every year for cartoonists to draw well. Of course the ideas are the soul of the cartoon, but a good idea may be ruined in its execution.

TOO MUCH TEXT

One great disadvantage to a cartoon is text. Many—far too many—cartoons contain too much text. It is rare to find a cartoon which is able to stand by itself without text, without even a label.

white without words. It is a general good rule to say, "Leave out everything you can." Modern art is elimination, and the cartoon should express its ultimate simplicity.

One of the great virtues of Boardman Robinson's or Robert Minor's cartoons is their full sweep, the black laid on boldly and all unnecessary detail omitted.

But Bernhard Gillam, one of the great pioneer cartoonists of America, had many shortcomings as an artist, yet was a brilliant cartoonist, nevertheless.

C. C. Bush, another late veteran, was already well into his career when he dropped his newspaper work to go abroad and study for several years. And the brilliant work which he returned to do showed the wisdom of his course.

I have heard the following recipe given for the making of a cartoonist.

GETTING THE IDEA

Getting your idea is "another thing again" for which there is no system. You should be constantly on the alert and, as a cartoonist once said, "The rule 'Leave your business at the office' does not fit a cartoonist," as he had often sat up in bed in the dead of night to make a rough note of an idea that he feared he might forget.

However, a serious cartoonist is often most timely and paramount in importance. But it is well to avoid as much as possible the gloomy and melancholy side of life. A cartoonist might adopt for a motto that once popular little ditty, "Always Leave Them Smiling When You Say Good-by."

Well, after you have found your subject, you walk round and round and pull on the ink breathlessly, "not" until the idea pops into your head. This exercise of chasing an idea" is said to be almost as good as playing golf. Then you generally put your idea into a rough sketch for submission to the editor for his official "O. K." which it does not always receive.

After that you settle down and outline your cartoon in pencil, and have about congratulating yourself that the worst excitement of the day is over and now all will be peace and plain sailing, when, hark, approach the engraver, demanding a copy ever going to be ready. Plate closes in two and three-fifths seconds.

SPILLING THE INK

So you throw in your high gear, and pull on the ink breathlessly, for newspapers and the material which goes into their making must be handed on schedule time.

The actual drawing of a cartoon is often the part that can have the least time and attention, and then when you have finished your work, you have always the pleasure of looking forward to the fancy of the cold-blooded engraver, who never stops to make a new cut if the rout or accidentally cuts off the legs of a figure or the eyes of a face; and also what the stereotypers can do to an etching is something to cause another outbreak.

After that, perhaps, it is time to stroll homeward for a little much-needed rest and refreshment, but with your mind still intent on the idea for the day to come, when you meet a dear (?) friend, who says, "Ose, what a cack you have! Nothing to do until tomorrow!" It's a

RETURN OF THE HOOPSKIRT

Hoops are here! Not coming, not threatened—as they have been for season after season by alarmists in the sartorial line—but actually here. And they are vouched for by Paris, and by the very cream of the Paris dressmakers, who are turning out these new hoop skirts by the score for society and the stage.

But the new hoop skirts do not flare out at the feet as those in the attics did. The hoop, oddly enough, is located midway between hip and knee at the edge of the tunic, the skirt below clinging to the ankles as closely as ever it did. Sometimes the tunic is very abbreviated, falling only a little below the hip, and again it may reach almost to the knee, but invariably there is the distending hoop which gives the gown its new outline. Illustrated is a new combination gown with a hoop tunic. The gown is of bright navy blue crepe de chine and has a graceful bodice and a very narrow, clinging skirt which exaggerates by contrast the extended lines of the tunic. This tunic is of pleated blue chiffon, and for all the oddity of the unbalanced gown, as it first meets the eye, there is an undeniable satisfaction and chic about this new addition to autumn fashions. Long gloves of white embroidered on the wrist and a pair of blue machine embroidered complete a really charming costume.

VELVET AND CLOTH THREE-PIECE SUITS

Jacqueline Hope Paris

There is no more convenient or satisfactory costume than the three-piece suit for afternoon wear. The dress which one is suitably dressed for the street, and yet may wear at home about the tea table, welcome in the three-piece suit. May it be made of any fabric or color.

A line of decorative stitching surrounds the collar-vest and armholes. The unadorned skirt is given the oriental touch by the center upward draping in the front. The graceful coat rather swishes the figure and yet has decidedly good lines. It is of copper-colored velvet in ribbed weave. The copper shade of the coat is purposely combined with the black of the skirt to form the contrast so popular this season. The entire is bordered with narrow bands of black and the three-quarter sleeves are edged with the same. The pretty yoke of the coat is applied along the shoulders, which is not at all out of place. The same quantity of black is used for the skirt, which has a close rim of black velvet. A black sash runs from the center of the back.

The model wearing the wide satin sash with the stevediff front life is of the most delicate in golden brown. The sash is of the same material as the skirt and is fastened with a row of buttons. The sash is of the same material as the skirt and is fastened with a row of buttons. The sash is of the same material as the skirt and is fastened with a row of buttons.

obtained by crossing two strips of black velvet and bisected-cherished silk. The wine shades are to be very much used, and when combined with black velvet their richness is incomparable. A black velvet shell hat faces back from the brim and is faced under the face in bisected-colored satin. A tippet of black fox encircles the throat of the figure. If possible, have a dress and coat designed on the three-piece plan. It is practical and answers the call for beauty and style.

French Fashion Notes
PARIS, Sept. 25
FOR some weeks there has been an interesting drama enacted on the stage of fashion, and Dame is Mode has sponsored the premiere of an infinite variety of artistic manifestations. The most exquisite broadness, lace, fur, velvet, chiffon, jeweled trimmings and metal nois are used in extravagant profusion to create a new costume.

French Fashion Notes
The use of steel for a becoming more general, and many smart Parisiennes are wearing small collarettes of shunk fur combined with fox dried rose, purple and a hat bow of the same material. A smartly decorated hat designed for the debutante is a sailor shape of old-blue beaver trimmed with an inch-wide band of moire ribbon of the same color, tied in a small bow at the side, and a single tulle veil which encircles the waist and the two ends are knotted at the back.

The normal waist line dominates in the suits, but some models have belts arranged to produce a long or short waisted effect. Skirts continue narrow at the bottom, and in many designs the sheen has moved to the back. The fall comes from below the hips and terminates at the knee. Pearl de poche, broadcloth, wool pique and fancy weaves are fashionable materials in great and substantial and stand with copper and mahogany and chestnut to fashion handsome dinner costumes. Among the colors which are especially popular are: Russian green, ice-cream, tawny blue, mahogany, citron and bright yellow, wintergreen, aubergine and sprig purple and olive. Skirts called "bourse" fashion, which are here to remain, scalloped flowers are bound with folds of silk or velvet, finished with a narrow plaited trim or with a wide gathered frill of tulle. The wired cove collar of lace is a gown. It is arranged to fall over the shoulders and the hands a way from the bodies at the back. Evening costumes having very short capes, sleeves, with angled drapes, which leave the arm uncovered. The dressy afternoon gowns have long or three-quarter-length sleeves. PRESERVING HEALTH and BEAUTY

By MRS. HENRY SYMES

DISCARDING THE SUMMER MELANIN

The wearing of a mask will be valuable to the girl who is at business all day and is, therefore, prevented from treating her face during those hours. The mask is made of fine linen from which are cut out pieces for the eyes, nose and mouth. Spread on the inside of the mask a paste made of olive oil and almond meal. Allow this to remain on the face for several hours or keep it on all night. When it is removed, bathe the face with tepid water and you will be surprised at the softness of the skin. The mask applied several nights in succession will soon bleach the skin and leave no trace of summer tan.

Another successful remedy for whitening the arms and the face and neck, for that matter, is to bathe daily with buttermilk. This will also make the skin as smooth as velvet.

CHOP SUEY and SOME RICE DISHES.

So many nationalities unite to make up the American people that it is only natural we should have diversified in our palates. For my part, I like to enjoy trying new dishes and to see the results. My Chinese friend, Mr. Chen, has brought to me a number of recipes which he says are the best in the world. He is a native of the Province of Szechwan, and his recipes are the result of his own experience and that of his father and grandfather. He says that these recipes are the best in the world and that they are the only ones that he has ever seen.

How to Cook Chop Suey.
We will suppose the chop suey is for a family of four. On Saturday get your meat, chop it as follows: Have told you and put it in the ice box. Slice your onions, not too fine, and set in the ice box for some cold place. Open cans of bamboo sprouts, discard the liquor; cut up in pieces size of hazel nut. Open cans of mushrooms, discard liquor; if the mushrooms are large, cut into bits, if small, leave whole.

How to Cook Rice.
I am overwhelmed when I think of the rice and thought it took this contributor to write out this recipe, and I am sure we are all becomingly grateful. The fault must be ours if we do not achieve success.

Other Foreign Ways.
Now I am fairly started on the theme of my favorite vegetable let me give you a few other instructions for preparing it. One is cooked for the tables of other nations. Here is one for a Chinese dish—'butternut' style. For this you will require a cup of raw rice, cooked as directed above and heaped in a deep dish. Before taking it from the colander, make for it a sauce by frying a sliced onion to a light brown in two tablespoons of butter. Strain this out which has been seeded and chopped finely. In a small bowl mix the onion with a teaspoon of lemon juice and pour over the rice in the dish. If you are fond of onion, leave it in the sauce with the pepper sauce.

What It Contains.
This dish goes on:
- Chinese tell us that the difference between Chinese and American chop suey lies in a matter of the amount of sauce poured on the ingredients or mixed in with them. In the Chinese, the sauce is poured on the ingredients, in the American, it is mixed in with them.

THE SEASON'S LINGERIE NOVELTIES

by Josephine Jordan

DRAWINGS BY DAGMAR RASMUSSEN

Princess slips are now a combination of a bralette and a petticoat.

The newest high-waist are made of silk and are ankle length.

The Tange corset is made entirely of elastic and slips on over the head.

Crêpe de chine high-waist are snugly trimmed with ribbons and lace frills.

LINGERIE is finer and more soberly than ever this season. "Multi underwear" is now a misnomer for most of the season's lingerie is fashioned of the finest of sheer French muscades, delicate hand-knitted laces and soft silks. Crêpe de chine never has been used so extensively as it is this season for undergarments of all sorts.

There is just as much ingenuity used in the designing of the new lingerie as has been displayed in the fashioning of the models for the new gowns. The smart gown demands there shall be no fulness underneath its perfectly fitted bodices, so the new models in lingerie are absolutely without fulness. There are no ruffles except of the most filmy net. There is no trimming except the flat braids and bindings.

For machine embroideries intended for lingerie purposes, fine muscades, batistes, sheer crêpes, and even organdies are used as foundations. Some of them are in drawn thread effect, thus adding to the transparency and lightness of the material. This in addition to the open designs seen in some of the new embroideries and the lace-like work in some of the patterns, gives a distinctly new character to the fashionable lingerie embroidery.

Allovers are well liked for the season's lingerie. They are used for entire garments, including nightgowns, bralettes, corset covers, and even culottes. This is an entirely new idea in the use of embroideries. Before this allovers have been used as insets or as valors or as trimmings in various fashions, but they never have been used as the stuff that lingerie is made of, and the garments that they produce are among the most noticeable changes that the new season's lingerie has brought about in the change in the style of corsets. To give the desired languor to the effect of a costume one must be theoretically uncorrected. There are a few women who can be that actually with any success whatever; that the corsetiers have spent their best energies on the construction of models that will give the uncorrected effect, but provide support and just the proper amount of restraint.

The most extreme style of this season's models is one to which the name of the "Tango" has been given because it is particularly suitable for the diversion of tangoing. It is made entirely of elastic. It slips on over the head. There are short laces in the back above the waist line and at each side to tighten the elastic over the hips. One of the new ideas in corsetry is the use of elastic laces. They "give" as silk laces do not and add to the general carelessness and lax effect that is so much in demand. To return to the "Tango" there is practically nothing above the waist. There are only two short pieces of bonings in the front. But they are negligible as bonings. This model is guaranteed to give absolutely free action to the body.

Naturalness Is End Sought.

Many of the new corsets slip over the head. That obviates the use of stiff fastenings. Almost all of them are low in the waist. The whole tendency of modern fashion is toward the supple little figure, and everything that makes the silhouette right or confined must go. Naturalness—when it is obtained by artificial means—is the watchword of fashion designers today, and the fact that the attempt to obtain that effect leads to occasional extremes is unimportant.

Extreme or not, the new corsets are much more comfortable, without a single bone, than those of the period of the all boned, high bustled, armorlike encasements that we used to wear. American women will probably be a little slower to accept the all elastic slips which have been received with so much joy by the Parisienne, but the most conservative of them will welcome the new tendencies in the construction of their corsets.

The new figure line demands a straight back and hips and a slightly rounded front contour, and this is best obtained by the front lace corsets, which allows the wearer to adjust the corset to suit her special requirements and assured the smooth flat back. The low bust, the long corset skirt, and the use of flexible boning in small quantities are characteristic of all sorts of the best new designs, whether they be front lace or back lace.

The changes in the styles of corsets have made the use of the bralette almost imperative. Manufacturers have brought out more elaborate models than at any previous time. They are handsomely trimmed. They are made of the sheerest and most pliable of fabrics and are boned and draped in at the waist to give a soft effect. They have entirely taken the place of the corset cover of old. Quite another type of bralette is the garment which is worn as an auxiliary to the new elastic corset. It is made of tricot or of rubber webbing, and gives a most supple effect. When made of elastic it has the advantage of being a reducer as well as a bralette.

While the corset cover has left the fashionable lingerie wardrobe and the "combination" is rather a thing of the past, there has come into style new combinations of garments that are at once practical and lovely. One of the newest is the combination of the chemise and the culotte. It is made of the softest of crêpe de chine and is worn instead of the vest. It has almost no trimming.

One of the New Designs.

The culotte is one of the new designs. It is better known as the knickerbocker. Although it is usually combined with the chemise, it is often worn separately. Some of the fancy culottes to be worn with costumes which have the underskirt made in one piece with the gown are fashioned of silk a few shades lighter than the costume. Often figured silk is used for them. They are fetching little garments.

Silk petticoats will, of course, be worn, but they will be of the thinnest silk obtainable. They are often made of a heavy silk chiffon, and more often than not they are fastened into the gown with which they are to be worn. They are slashed as to hem, narrow as to width, and soft and lovely as to texture.

Princess slips are no longer what they were. They are now a combination of a bralette and a petticoat—that is, the top of the slip is fitted and sewed on to the petticoat. It seems like a combination of two distinct garments, for the top is trimmed handsomely or made of a dainty all-over embroidery, and the skirt is plain.

One of the most distinct changes in the season's lingerie is the change in the length of the night gown. The newest night gowns are made "ankle length." The hems are either slashed or curving, after the fashion of the hems of the new dresses. Some of these short gowns—like those only to the instep—have full length sleeves and low necks. They are beautifully trimmed with hand work and the fineness of lace. Many nightgowns are made of silk. One particularly attractive one was made of printed silk in Chinese design in yellow and brown on a white ground. In cut the nightgown was of the simplest kimono form rather scanty in the proportions and finished without a collar. It was drawn together with a silk cord on the ends of which were tassels.

So filmy has Dame Fashion declared that all undergarments must be that net is being used for all kinds of fancy lingerie, even for the winter wardrobe. It is impossible to spend too much thought upon such a thing. It has never been so handsome nor so graceful in spite of its absolute plainness. A little of the newest lingerie is worth the price of a king's ransom, though it is as light as the thistle-down.

Collarlets of marabout are short and wide and finished with a bow and ends. They come in combinations of white, pink, and blue, and a variety of new Parisian shades.

Serge comes eagerly to the front with great success. It is washable, comes in convenient widths, and in checks, shadow stripes, or plain colors. It is especially adaptable for the college girl.

Wool rattles for fall come in lovely shades of maroon and tobacco brown, amethyst, taupe, sapphire, and rose blue.

Bodies of evening gowns are more wraps of unadorned stuffs. It is left for the skirt and sash to show the actual richness of the gown material.

Furs of every imaginable kind are photographically other amazing shades.

Net gimpes can now be had in ecru and flesh tones as well as white.

Hand done French knots are seen on the black and white waist for autumn; so is fagoting.

DOES ATLANTA ATTEND CHURCH?

OPINIONS OF VARIOUS MINISTERS UPON THE QUESTION OF ATLANTA'S CHURCH GOING

Do we go to church? Well, I don't know. I have some questions. I don't know if you mean the church as a whole or the churches of Atlanta. I don't know if you mean the church as a whole or the churches of Atlanta.

Dr. H. K. Walker, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, declares that there has been a diminution in the number of churches, but that the number of communicants has kept pace with the population.

THE SUNDAY MORNING SERVICE? ... Now a great mass of church members line up with this man on churchgoing only half way. They cut out the Sunday evening service. If your reporter would go into any one of the fourteen larger and wealthier churches in Atlanta on Sunday night he would discover less than 10 per cent of its membership in attendance.

DR. WHITE'S VIEW OF IT.
Dr. John E. White, pastor of the Second Baptist church, replies as follows:

"Attendance on the stated services of the churches falling off? Yes and no. Actually the number of people attending churches regularly each Sunday in this country is larger than ever."

"In the south the increase in the total number of church sittings during the past ten years has been remarkable."

"In Atlanta the number of churches had doubled in twelve years."

"At the same time there are more people not attending church services than ever before and the ratio of church attendance to population even in Atlanta is declining."

"What is the explanation of the decrease of the churchgoing conscience and habit? No one cause may be assigned for it but a combination of causes."

"In the rural sections the falling off is due mainly to natural causes—the movement to the cities and the springing up of small towns, and the improved means of country travel."

"In the city and town the church meeting does not appeal to the new citizens as the country church meeting had done, as a social opportunity, and the churchgoing habit falls away easily."

... sermons savor too much of local reference and application. "No, no, dear sir, it is not that. The churches made up of prosperous people, which are run on the conservative and doctrinal lines, are the emphasis of all on Sunday nights. "What is to be done about it? "As for Sunday evening attendance, there is no complaint from those who spread the gospel of the Kingdom of God—the gospel with a present, pointed application in the gospel of sympathy with souls tried and tempted and with a clear

MOVING PICTURE SCHOOL FOR ANIMALS

By GERTRUDE M. PRICE.
A private dramatic school for wild animals, with a view to the training of these creatures in the art of appearing before the camera, has been established near Fort Lee, New Jersey.

To be quite explicit, the purpose of this novel institution is the training of animals for the moving picture stage.

Every one wonders how the wonderful wild animals pictures are made. But did it ever occur to you that, perhaps, these wild animals had to be coached in their strange parts some time?

Monsieur Paul Bourgeois, a young French animal-trainer, first thought of training the jungle inhabitants to appear before the camera, and he immediately founded the school of which he is still the director.

In this picture you see Frances, a type of one of the largest beasts of the jungle, in the studio doing her part in a movie play, perfectly.

... and Frances challenge on Saturday powers that, like the devil Christ cast out, want only to be set right. "I suppose the church that casts out devils has never lacked for a congregation."

... With a few slight exceptions, the principles of animal posing and human acting are the same. When a film requiring beauty is to be made, the animals are first trained regularly in their simple movements until the performance becomes a habit, since they respond to instinct rather than intelligence.

Originally, this was used by the trainers to make their charges do the right thing at the right time for the camera man. For this purpose, common devices include coating tree branches with honey to keep the beasts about the entire length of a scene or exposing a chicken off the stage when the fox should jump out of a window.

The animals feel at home only when in the studio. Consequently the company of human actors is not for Fort Lee when a film with animals in it is made.

A remarkable circumstance is the fact that the players are seldom hurt by the animals.

Womans, maintains the director, seem even more fearless than men, and the beasts, in turn, seem to show more confidence when with these and with children.

The Modest Minister
COPENHAGEN.—M. Pedersen, the Danish minister of agriculture, has returned, after some weeks' stay in England, where he has studied small holdings experiments and visited the garden cities, both of which have interested him immensely.

"My daughter," the minister said in an interview, "accompanied me on my excursions. She is a general servant with a family in London. To begin with, her people were 'very English,' and would not allow her to go out with me, but when she learned who I was matters passed off very smoothly."

HOOPS STOCKS

LARGE SIZE FORTUNE IS INVESTED EACH YEAR BY ATLANTA IN OLD BOTTLES, PIECES OF IRON, AND OTHER SCRAP.

By WARD N. GREENE.

Once in a while, so the Arabesque legends relate, a fat man in the sun beneath a beard's wall and a hat would beat the market. He would buy up the date of something. And as he sat there among the clutter of the kitchen and the clutter of the cigar stumps which were piled up on the window of the harem, he would be very busy to pick up the date of something. He would buy up the date of something. He would buy up the date of something. He would buy up the date of something.

ways actively at work through Atlanta's streets; and that twenty or thirty more make a junk peddler from city to city throughout Georgia in their search for junk.

An outsider would consider a junk dealer of a very low stratum of existence, almost next to a chow man in a cheap national comedy. But as a matter of fact the junk dealer very likely has an income just triple the size of those who scoff at him.

The beauty of the junk dealer's trade is that he seldom fails to have enough material to supply the demand. He can use anything. And anything means everything. Pins, axes, bones, paper, old iron, new zinc, clothes, food, and all are swept into the dealer's maw, waste that is saved.

Of course, some things are at a premium. Bottles, certain kinds of tin, and certain pieces of iron are in great demand. A cluster of horse-shoes and nails brings a good price. So do tin cans, bottles and broken furniture that have been accumulated all winter in the cellar.

What a blessing it is sometimes to have the junk man back his wagon up your drive and deposit with him the tin cans and bottles and broken furniture that have been accumulated all winter in the cellar. Adoring the Ballot and Praying to the Ballot Box

The American people have the habit of adoring the ballot. They adore it as a fetish, as a talisman, as a magic wand. They adore it as a fetish, as a talisman, as a magic wand. They adore it as a fetish, as a talisman, as a magic wand.

They adore it as a fetish, as a talisman, as a magic wand. They adore it as a fetish, as a talisman, as a magic wand. They adore it as a fetish, as a talisman, as a magic wand.

How Everyone Pays the Piper

Man takes her flirting lightly, and woman takes her tragically. Both of them must pay the piper, so!

And though they are exchanging "glances" numerous serenades, "Work," says the wife, "tears, sobe the widow. And 'regret' says the flirt, man or woman. But all these are only the copper, nickel, penny and silver currency in the kingdom of love.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler

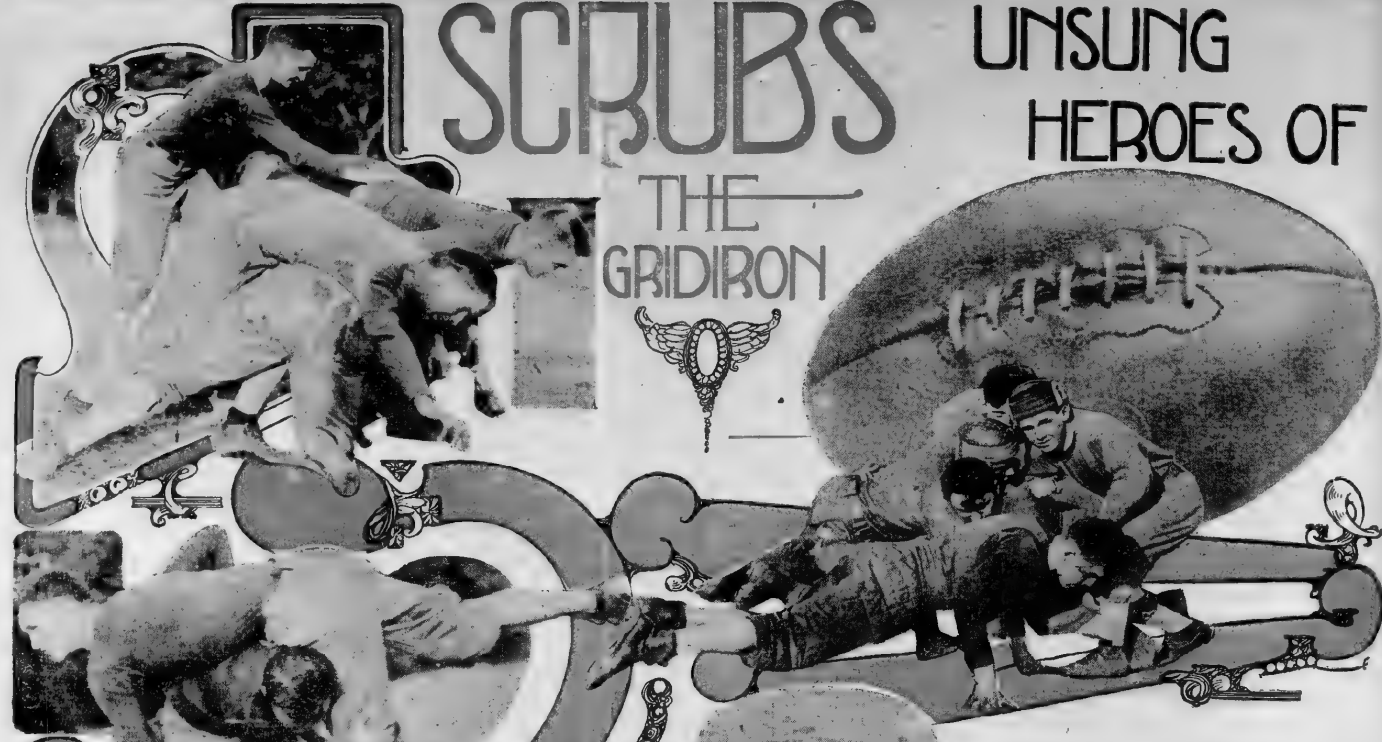

Atlanta dealers must know what rats are bringing in London day by day. They must keep track of South American rubber. Every change may mean more money or less money right here in little old Atlanta.

To do this they must take the junk peddler, the junk magnate. These give full quotations of stocks in new iron and steel, scrap iron, melin, rubber, woolen rags, clips, quilting, waste, paper, cotton rags, hides, rags, bones.

Miss Grace O'Ryan, a Pretty "Co-Ordinator" is the thing. It gives one the grace and beauty of the olden days before bodies and souls were cramped by whalebone and shoe leather. It brings the roses to one's cheeks and the tan to much of the rest of one. And it frees one's soul.

How does one co-ordinate? Simplest thing in the world! One co-ordinates with a bow and arrow, prancing around one's lawn in one's bare feet, wearing a sort of Greek tunic. And of course one has a high beard face around one's yard.

COBBS UNUSUAL HEROES OF THE GARDEN

N THE year 1908 a new fresh idea presented on the campus at the Georgia School of Technology. Students, transported from the bustling existence of the home town and dumped down into a strange new world where professors, upper classes, athletes, fraternalists, fun, foolishness and stinging were jumbled together in a delightful chaos, he began ruminating himself the most glorious line of his young life.

Among other things which stood out in the glimmering prospect before him was the chance to play football early six feet tall, tipping the scales at twelve stone in his original birthday suit, blessed with a earth of bad habits and much endurance, there was every reason why he should win the coveted football "T."

He went out for the team. The night after that first practice, as he stood about on his feet pillow, there came through his whirling fancies the vision of a dimly characterized old dandy banked by a mass of yelling, amiable, white-limbed figure in a top hat and monocle, who, without a word, nudged Jerry down through a hall of tapers and staggered across the last white line of the ball plucked fast. And he heard the thousands crackling and popping in fierce sports with the "out" for the team. Day after day he lay down in the dirt and out and in, the variety which his feet felt on him. Sometimes he topped that fierce charge, sometimes he felt the whole backfield rush above him, and while his body trembled with the shock, and his brain pumped back and forth in fierce sports with the "out" for the team.

Every Saturday afternoon he hugged a mass of awestruck to his rear and shivered on the sidelines as he watched that same variety backfield tear its way through oval college eleven. Often other creatures came bounding upon him, unbidden into conflict. He himself snarled for the call which never came. When the season ended, he was as well as a sub.

THE CALL THAT NEVER CAME

The fall of 1909 found him once more "out" for the team. Before many weeks had slipped away he was again serving as a football "T" as variety backfield stopping men when he could, most often ploughing up the earth with his face while they shattered the scrub line. Rock-aid came, dreaming of the id dream. He snubbed his way through another season.

ad of a little plot of green, a cupped hole, and the breathless onlookers hanging in suspense on his every put and drive. Yet near in his wildest fancies did he see his scrubbion fair into the white blaze of glory that was his when Bidron a best went down before his sure, clean stroke. His years of labor bore ripe fruit at last.

WHEN SAM WHITE SIBBED

At Princeton the name of Sam White will live for years as the prince of Old Nassau. Yet years ago Sammy White was a tousled scrub who was the base of his coaches because he wouldn't obey orders.

"Fall on the ball!" they told him. "Don't take time to pick it up. Fall on it! Fall on it! Fall on it!"

But Sammy White persisted in snubbing at the contrary oval as it bounced along the award. Never did he launch his body through the air and "cover" it with a resounding bang, according to the directions of the Tiger coaches.

In desperation they canceled him.

solely to win the turkey day struggle against the Commodores. To gain the victory, Sevance was depending on that star combination whose equal has seldom seen cleaved through a southern gridiron. Andrew Lanier, fleet halfback, and Chigger Brown, quarter.

Early in the fray Chigger Brown was slashed into ribbons and borne from the field sobbing because he could not fight it out to the finish against the black and black Sevance must set in a substitute quarter. "Bone" Lyons was picked for the place. He earned that nickname in the first half.

Neither side had crossed the last line, but Sevance had advanced the ball close to Vandy's goal on a series of brilliant backs and end runs. In the shadow of the posts, the Commodore line truss hard for three downs on him as the long kick went and Vandy kicked.

As the leather arched up the field in a long spiral, Bob Blake, Vanderbilt's crack end, sped toward Lyons, the waiting quarterback. He was almost on him as the long kick swooped downward.

"Then a groan went up from the heart of every spectator who wore the purple. The ball struck Lyons on the chest, bounded off and smacked into Blake's arms. He was by Lyons and over the goal line in the snap of an eyelid for Vanderbilt only touchdown.

For once it seemed that the substitute had found weight in the balance and found steady waiting.

The game raved along into the last part of the second half with the score still 8 to 9 in Vanderbilt's favor. Sevance was playing desperate ball, and so the Tiger team no man played with a sicker heart and a grimmer determination than did Kenneth Lyons.

At the long banners of the sun streamed from the bloody western sky and the referee rapped out that but five minutes remained to play, his chance came again.

In the middle of the field Vanderbilt staved off the Sevance advance with another kick. Again the long spiral sailed toward the crouched quarterback; again Bob Blake crashed down upon him. This time Lyons gathered in the punt with steady arms, lunged past Blake and was toward the whole Vanderbilt team that lay between him and the goal-posts, eighty yards away.

The Sevance stands went mad at Lyons' run. Up the field, past player after player, self-arming, dodging, side-stopping, "Bone" Lyons was smashing toward the Vanderbilt goal. Commodore after Commodore barred his path, only to be again in an instant. Over the last white line went the substitute quarterback, using the score after he had thrown away victory in the first half.

Never a snub but dreamed the vision of a White or a Lyons; yet full many a snub was born to work unmet and waste his hopes upon the midnight air. All can not be called, yet all can hope and dream and wait.

planting oats, barley, or rye, and along with this grain, he plants hairy vetch, a clover which is French, Spanish, Swedish, or of some other foreign extracting.

The clover grows along with the grain, and returns to the soil whenever the grain takes away. Spring comes, the grain and the clover are cut, corn or another crop is planted, and by summer this city farm has produced two yields. In addition, each year is bountiful.

"I have no doubt," says Mr. Yarbrough, "that these five acres of land, produce more than 25 acres upon the usual farm. I am simply showing what careful and intensified farming can do."

Another city farm, which might have been described along with that of Mr. Nutting, since they adjoin, is the farm of W. T. Tibben, at East Lake. It consists of 105 acres, planted in peas, oats, rye and alfalfa. Of his alfalfa patch he says: "It is the finest thing on earth."

Like Mr. Nutting, he is convinced that dairying is a desirable part of every farm, and that alfalfa is a crop which would do most to improve and enrich the farmers of the state. He has discovered this from his city farm.

During the last few years he has been interested in agriculture as an avocation; and his farm, like other urban farms, has been made to yield a profit. Both in his dairying and in his farming, Mr. Tibben has met with success. But one of his discoveries is dairymaking.

GOLF IS PREFERRED

A great attraction of city farming is the thought that it brings one back to nature, gives one that breath of open air for which one always has longed, and does even more—returns one to that position as a tiller of the earth, for which one always had been intended. It seems to be the most desirable of all ends.

And, yet, Mr. Tibben prefers golf. City farming is profitable and serious and worth while, and all that, but for pure recreation and choice breath of fresh air, it follows far behind golf.

Still another city farmer is Capt. E. S. Gay, whose cultivated acres are on Briar Cliff road, three miles from Atlanta, and which bears the name of Graymont Farm Dairy. The farm consists in 36 acres of land upon which are 35 head of cattle, all of which are highly bred Jersey. Each has been proved by test to be free from all disease. The farm specializes in milk for babies, and has sold to 125 little ones as its patrons. Both the dairy and the farm follow the modern ways. As city farms with this excellent character which are made, and the knowledge gained that one may show new and desirable things to farmers who are old at their work.

Judge John B. Chandler is owner of a farm of 200 acres, which lies beyond Decatur, and is equipped with care as to all details.

Ex-Governor Joseph M. Brown gives a part of his attention to a farm in Cherokee county, and there has proved the efficacy of dynamiting land. By this method he has produced 148 bushels of corn to an acre where the yield had formerly been only 56 bushels.

Another in the list of city farmers is George Spence, the attorney, who is owner of 700 acres near Roswell, upon which he is applying practicable and effective farming methods.

As for the complete list, it is too long to give, and if one could mention all of the city workers who wish to be city farmers, one would enumerate the city's population. Touring cars and farms are a universal ambition.

CITY FARMERS

Massage for Chickens

(Special Correspondence.)

Oakland, Cal.—Massage your chickens, manure their tails once in a while; provide a hen bathing for their use; give them "beauty" parlor treatment; but be careful in the use of cosmetics, is the advice of Mrs. Ludlow Hubbard of this city, for seventeen years a trained nurse, but who, since her marriage is applying her professional knowledge to the rearing of prize-winning poultry.

"Mr. Hubbard pointed with pride to her handsome flock. "I would give them Delia's treatment, if they were a little more intelligent. They have learned how to act in the bath and to lift up their feet for their manure."

"If the same ideas as I am carrying out with my chicks were more popular among men and women, they would have a finer race with better health and a greater capacity to enjoy it."

"Two years ago I knew nothing about raising chickens, but I fell in love with a brood of chicks and decided I would try to rear them."

"Every chicken in distress I have to catch them like I would so many patients."

"It requires a great deal of physical effort, and I think the raising of chickens is one of the greatest mediums for reducing stress. I would advise fat women to try it."

Mrs. Hubbard's general appearance is the same for all. Her large chicken yard is conducted with the same care as a modern hospital. There is a regular routine of feeding, the sanitation is perfect, the temperature in the raising brooding houses is constant, and the laws of hygiene are carried out in detail. Even outdoor sleeping quarters are provided by the use of small tents.

Mrs. Hubbard raises only White Rocks, and 100 chickens now busy. Her trough room is filled with blue ribbons, and her work in the care of poultry loved.
