Mackmen Win the Championship of the World

Plank. He forced the pitcher just enough to make him drop the ball and the runner was safe. He was charged with an error because the ball touched his outstretched hand.

Some 25,000 fans were watching in real earnest and he almost invariably the case after such a mix-up in baseball. Murray finished the ball to Molinda and Merkle was out by a moment's play. Plank delivered the ball to the left center, and Shaffer made the trip from second to home in record time. With two on and but one out, the fans felt sure that the Mackmen were focusing and they raised a roar of vocal encouragement that could be heard for blocks.

BRIGHT DOUBLE PLAY
If the Athletics indeed heard it they did not permit the blemish to interfere with baseball. Merkle moved summing grounder at Collins, who snapped it up and loomed to Barry, forcing Molman as second. Without a moment's delay Murray finished the ball to Molinda and Merkle was out by a moment's play that cut down opponents' critical periods of a game and it appeared the finish of the Mackmen's series. From that point on Plank and the players looked then and there. Plank pitched to him never in trouble. The two out of the game were considerable as the game progressed and any one of the Mackmen could have taken the lead at the end of the seventh inning, but for the Athletics' pitcher, who would have been credited with pitching a ninth-inning no run game. Plank pitched to him never in trouble. The two out of the game were considerable as the game progressed and any one of the Mackmen could have taken the lead at the end of the seventh inning, but for the Athletics' pitcher, who would have been credited with pitching a ninth-inning no run game.

Plank could well afford to be magnanimous for he had pitched a magnificent game. He had pitched a magnificent game. He had pitched a magnificent game. He had pitched a magnificent game.

When the two veteran twirlers faced each other for the first time in the pitching box, Plank went into his stride and Murray was in his. Tonight the veteran twirler, Plank, pitched to him never in trouble. The two out of the game were considerable as the game progressed and any one of the Mackmen could have taken the lead at the end of the seventh inning, but for the Athletics' pitcher, who would have been credited with pitching a ninth-inning no run game.

It is a possibility, however, that when this pair of twirlers were just slipping past the final days of their big career. They were just slipping past the final days of their big career. They were just slipping past the final days of their big career.

When the Athletics and Giants fought each other in the initial series of the world's championship battle of 1903, the Athletics were managed by Bresnahan for New York, and Plank and Schott were the pitchers.

Mathewson's record shows that he allowed four hits and no runs, while Plank gave ten hits and one run. The fourth game Plank faced Melton and gave the Mackmen another head buster, losing 1 to 0, with four runs, three hits and one error.

BEATS MATTY AND QUITS GAME

For the first time, about a single at the pitcher's box that the Athletics called for the Mackmen's attention. Plank pitched to him never in trouble. The two out of the game were considerable as the game progressed and any one of the Mackmen could have taken the lead at the end of the seventh inning, but for the Athletics' pitcher, who would have been credited with pitching a ninth-inning no run game.

Godonhaha Awendetgade Otcennonyat

BEFORE the white man came, these were the three words that expressed "joyousness"—a joyousness that was contagious.

Today, the three words which best express this same idea are
CAROL INNER-PLAYER

It is the expression of the entire household—not of a single musician of that household. The young lady with supple fingers and time to practice learns to play, of course. She may become a pianist. Her father, the busy man, and mother, of the household care and social duties, become Inner-Player Pianists. The great world of music with its thousand of compositions lies in an open book before them. Especially is this true if the Inner-Player is chosen, for this is a perfected type of Player.

It is the only Player with a Miniature Keyboard, which gives a flexibility to the stroke, and it is the only Player that enables you to instantly transpose through nine keys. It is the only Player having a Wrist Rest, which means unusual ease of operation. There are nine other exclusive patented features which we want to explain to you.

You have not seen or heard the best until you have visited our store.

Spend $3 for four honest quarts of Good Stuff. Use what you want. If you don't say it's the best corn whiskey you ever tasted, no matter what the price, send back the balance, express collect, and we will refund you $3.

It's the kind of old corn liquor you've been waiting for—made the old Georgia way, by famous Georgia Distillers, in whose family the secret of distilling has been handed down from father to son those 100 years—made just across the river from Georgia at Girard, Ala., by the only old-fashioned corn whiskey distillery in the world.

It's made that good old-fashioned way, and it's so good it just warms up your heart and makes you feel good all over. Try this Good Stuff, sure. Just send $3 EXPRESS PREPAID.

BRIDE DENIES CHARGE OF KISSING ANOTHER

Mrs. John H. Gwinn Declares She, Not Hubby, Quit Wedlock of Five Days

Mrs. John H. Gwinn, the bride of five days, whose husband alleges that she caught her kissing the man to whom she was engaged at the time she was married, says there is not a word of truth in the charge.

"I left him," explained Mrs. Gwinn, "because I do not love him. I married him on the impulse of the moment, and while I love him very well I do not love him."

"I was in love with Fred," she continued, referring to D. P. Bagwell, the other man in the case, "but I was persuaded to marry John Henry instead. And now I find I had rather stay at home with my husband."

FAMILY PARTY HAS A POLICE COURT FINISH

Five members of the Mitchell family, busy travelers, who are coming near Ashby street, were arrested Friday night on the complaint of people in the neighborhood, who reported to the officers that the grapes had been dispersed.

The house being Acting Recorder Preston, Saturday, included the grandfather and his grandchildren, a babe in arms. The grapes tried to explain that what the people had complained of was only their way of stinging and dancing, but admitted that an automobile had been sent to town to get more. All were freed, with the exception of one member, who proved to be a woman that she had not been drinking.

BIG PUZZLE

THE PROBLEM

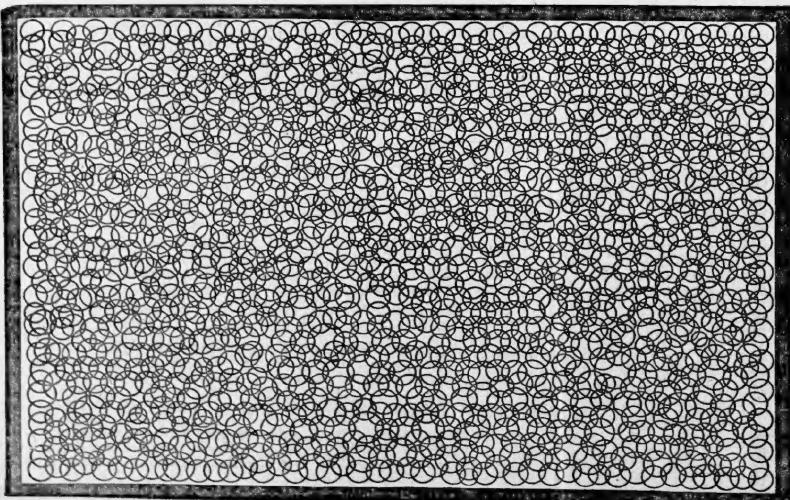

The problem is to count the circles. Every circle is complete and intersects or touches one or more other circles. There are no parts of circles or shams or deceptions of any sort in the puzzle. In the event that no one counts the exact number the prizes will be awarded for the nearest correct solutions. Accuracy and patience are the main requisites for arriving at the correct or nearest correct count. Those who display these qualifications to the best advantage will solve the puzzle best.

THE CONDITIONS

HOW TO ENTER

This contest is restricted to people residing in the states of Georgia, Alabama, Florida and South Carolina, Florida and Mississippi.

A payment on subscription to The Atlanta Journal of from $1.10 to $6.00 for the Daily and Sunday edition, or from $1.00 to $5.00 for the Semi-Weekly edition of The Atlanta Journal entitles a contestant to submit a solution of the puzzle. The amount of money paid over the subscription price for the paper, according to the regular rate, whether by city delivery or by mail.

AS MANY DIFFERENT SOLUTIONS MAY BE SUBMITTED AS THE CONTESTANT DESIRES, UPON SUBMITTING AN ADDITIONAL PAYMENT WITH EACH SOLUTION BUT NOT MORE THAN $6.00 CAN BE PAID WITH ANY ONE SOLUTION.

It is not necessary to pay the same amount with each solution if more than one is submitted. As the main prizes have an added value according to what is paid in subscription with the winning solution, contestants should familiarize themselves with the dividend schedule before sending in their subscription and solution.

Remit by check, money order, registered letter or in one or two-cent stamps. Solutions unaccompanied by cash subscriptions will not be registered. The contest is open both old and new subscribers within the territory designated.

Whatever is paid, whether on one or a number of solutions, will apply on a continuous subscription to The Atlanta Journal.

DECIDING TIES

In case of a tie, a second puzzle will be presented. This puzzle will be practically insolvable. Only those tied will be permitted to solve puzzle No. 2. No money will be paid to accompany the solution. The second puzzle will be printed but once, and those who will have a week in which to solve it. Mail subscribers at a distance, if tied, will be allowed a week from the time they receive the second puzzle, the time to be determined by postmarks.

In case of another tie, a third puzzle, also perfectly solvable, will be presented. It will be subject to the same conditions as the second. The second and third puzzles will only be used in case of a tie. Their purpose will be merely to decide ties, so that in the event there is a tie, the prizes will be awarded without having to divide them without resorting to chance.

However, only three puzzles will be presented, and in the seemingly impossible event of still another tie the prizes, or their equivalent in cash, will be equally divided.

If there are no ties, there will be only one puzzle.

No prizes will be distributed until the contest is finally decided.

SPECIAL CONDITIONS

Should there be any ties, as many prizes will be reserved as there are people tied. Before any prizes are awarded to those sending less correct solutions. That is, if two people tied on the absolutely correct answer, they would have to count the second puzzle to determine which was entitled to the first prize and which to the second prize. The one who sent the next best answer would be entitled to the third. This rule will apply generally.

While the winning of a prize does not depend upon the time solution was registered, the puzzle is more or less elusive, and the best thing to do is to begin counting at once. Send in your solution, and if you find later you have made a mistake, send in another. There is no limit to the number of different solutions that may be registered.

All those entering the contest will, as a condition and consideration, be required to abide by the ruling of the Contest Manager. In the event of any question arising, the Puzzle Manager, if he deems it wise, may appoint a committee to assist him in deciding them, and those entering the contest do so with the understanding that such decisions will be final.

YOUR OPPORTUNITY

This contest is offered as a means of entertaining our readers, and is open to any man, woman, boy or girl within the territory designated. No extra charge is made for participation, other than the regular subscription price. The plan is the fairest that can be adopted. Everyone sending in a payment to apply on subscription according to the schedule published elsewhere becomes a contestant, and the best part of it is, that the competition which brings such rich reward is only a good use of spare moments, and merely a test of mathematical skill and accuracy.

Can you count? Of course you can; but can you count correctly? Try and see.

ALL CHARTS ON THIS PAGE ARE THE SAME.

THE PRIZE LIST

FIRST PRIZE—$200 in Gold, to which will be added 50 times the amount paid by the subscriber with the winning solution. This prize may be worth $500.

BURNED IN MID-OCEAN.

Steamship Volturo, which burned in mid-ocean Friday night, causing loss of 226 lives.

Several first-class passengers were lowered from the ship before the survivors were rescued to a place of safety.

Distress in Halifax Caused by the News HALIFAX, N. S., Oct. 11.—Announcement of the Volturo's disaster at sea with a possible heavy loss of life created consternation and distress among relatives and friends of passengers and crew.

One woman who has two sons on the vessel coming from Holland indicated hysterically that the local agents of the line told her whether her boys were safe. She had to be quiet by assurance that the young men were all right.

The Volturo has had a somewhat unusual career. On her first trip to this port she brought in the first case of French flu, La Champagne, which she carried as a passenger.

DENIES HAVING PROMISED 30-CENT TROLLEY FARE

Preston Arkwright Replies to Kicks on Proposed New Schedules

President P. R. Arkwright of the Georgia Railway and Power Company Saturday afternoon issued a statement denying that his company had promised a 30-cent fare between Atlanta and Stone Mountain at the time it was securing rights of way for the new interurban line which will begin operation on November 1.

Opposition to the schedule of passenger fares proposed for the new line has developed in Stone Mountain Park and other lines along the route, and several delegations will appear before the board of directors on Thursday to protest these rates. At that time the rights of way held by the commission upon the petition of the power company will be approved by the board and freight rates. Relative to the charge that a 30-cent fare was promised President Arkwright says:

"This charge is absolutely unfounded. In fact, the company made no representation of promise whatever with regard to the fare on the proposed line. At the time the rights of way and franchises were being obtained the fare had not been determined."

"Whenever we were asked what the fare would be, we invariably replied that we had no opinion on the matter and would not make any statement with regard to it."

"As a matter of fact, the fares proposed are less than the existing fares on the Georgia railroad. The fare on the Georgia railroad is at the rate of 1.1-cent per mile, and the proposed fare on the Stone Mountain line is at the rate of approximately 1 cent per mile. The Georgia railroad mileage from Atlanta to Stone Mountain is sixteen miles, and the fare is 40 cents. The Stone Mountain line mileage from Atlanta to Stone Mountain is 17.4 miles, and the proposed fare is 21 cents."

"As far as the merits of the proposed fare are concerned, this is a matter to be heard before the railroad commission. But so far as the statement that any intercommunication had been made by this company in relation to property owners' way and decision or fraud practiced by this company in obtaining rights of way and franchises are concerned, we want it known now that these charges are absolutely untrue."

NEWS OF THE MOVIES

ALCAZAR—In presenting the second of the Famous Films series at the Alcazar this evening Wednesday and Thursday, probably one of the most interesting of all the season's past such comes to the show.

When Miriam Michelson wrote "The Bishop's Carriage" Breckinridge material was supplied for motion pictures and those who have read the author's book, or have seen the play will picture an opportunity to witness on the screen the same tense dramatic scenes, bordering on tragedy but ending in romance.

Nance O'Brien, the principal character in the book, is portrayed in this picture play by Mary Pickford. "Little Mary" is also known to all patrons of the movie, as at her best in this role which in itself would be reason enough to want to see this picture.

The story follows the many adventures of "Nance" after she escapes from an institution and by chance finds refuge in the room of a pick-pocket who decides to make use of his new acquaintance. They form a partnership which progresses profitably until it eludes the police after a startling value. "The Bishop's Carriage" will be shown for two weeks only at the Alcazar at popular prices.

Each of the four reels is crammed full of action and the photography of film is excellent.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS; USE SALT

If your Back hurts or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water

When your kidneys hurt and back feels sore, don't get scared. Proceed to load your stomach with drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire system. Your kidneys clean like you keep your house clean by flushing them with mild, harmless salts which remove the body's various wastes and quiescent them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from 500 grains of acid and waste, we are readily understood the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Detail lots of water—two or three quarts a day. Get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for 30 days and your kidneys will be clean. The famous salts are made from sodium acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine and so to lower the source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot hurt, makes a delightful, refreshing lithia-water drink which you should take now and then to keep your kidneys clean and active. To do so, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what source of your kidney trouble and backache.

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

The Advantages of Community Clubs
In many sections of Georgia, if a community club were formed, it would be surprising what could be accomplished from such work.

They want to know of some of the things that they need and utilize on the farm that can be bought by single individuals. On the other hand, much progress can be made in live stock, poultry and the buying of good seed by people getting together and ordering in a large lot just what they need.

It is surprising how much increased value a $100 male can put in a community to a few years' time, and this year, when people are in a hurry to get together and buy live stock, but they should by their farming implements, seed and fertilizer the same way.

New Low Point Was Reached in The Protracted Decline of Stocks

The Early Bear Raid Was the Most Successful of Any Drive of the Present Movement—Closed Near the Lowest

By Associated Press. NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—The new low point was reached today in the protracted decline of the stock market. The advance in the first few minutes later they came a fractional rally but the list did not fall on the advance and the close was near the lowest.

The decline of the market is being followed by the general public and the central bank from Southern buying and reports of renewed disturbances in Mexico were again given by many investors. An announcement was made from Washington that the government was contemplating new anti-trust measures.

It was less the positive influence of these developments, however, than the absence of any consistent demand which was the main reason made it way to hammer down stocks.

The market was closed at 100.00, down 1/2 from 100.50. The volume of trading was moderate. The market was closed at 100.00, down 1/2 from 100.50.

Renewed Heavy Liquidation and Bear Pressure Caused Decline

LIVERPOOL CABLES WERE MUCH HIGHER THAN DUE Reports of Increased Offerings from the South and the Favorable View of Wall Street Conditions Helped the Decline

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—After an early advance on strong cable, renewed liquidation in the southwest, the cotton market weakened under renewed liquidation reports of increased offerings from the southern belt and an unfavorable view of Wall street conditions.

TWIF FARMERS' TRUCK MARKET FOR TRUCK

Saltling Station to be Established There, to Buy Cucumbers, Tomatoes, Etc.

TIFTON, Ga., Oct. 11.—Tifton will have the second pickle salting station in the south. Arrangements in this effect were closed at a meeting of representatives of James Brothers company, of Atlanta, and the Tifton chamber of commerce, this morning, and the contracts were signed. The purpose of the salting station is to preserve truck pickles for pickling purposes, after which it is shipped in tank cars to the factory.

The firm manufactures pickle jars, and condiments, and will contract with Tifton truck growers from 200 to 300 acres in cucumbers, perhaps a similar acreage in tomatoes, and other crops. The firm already has one station in Georgia, one having been established at Blakely this year. This one was not enough to supply with all the trucks. Tifton was at once selected as the new location for another station. Their attention was at once turned to Tifton, on account of the publicity given truck growing in Tifton. Two weeks ago A. C. Tidwell and W. R. Covington, came to Tifton to look into the situation. On their return, they were a member of the firm, came to Tifton this morning.

The firm intends to begin signing the contracts with the truck growers in December and will begin work on their salting vats and machinery in January.

Hereafter pickle manufacturers have insisted that cucumbers grown in the south were under the same conditions as those in the north and west. There have other factors in the north and west, and the manufacturers were made to pay for the extra cost of the establishment of a pickle salting station. Tifton is believed to give truck growing in south Georgia a new impetus.

Hereafter the truck grower has had no idea of what he would receive for his crop, but now he knows that the conditions are changed. Now truck growing is more certain. The grower when the truck grower signs his contract with the pickle manufacturer before planting his crop, he knows exactly what he is going to receive. There will be no expense to the grower for transporting and shipping his crop. He is brought from the wagon in bulk and paid for it. The only expense to the grower will be for the cost of picking and sorting, but this comes at a time when farm labor is scarce and the crop is planted in March or April and matures in August or September. The truck can be gathered in time to plant late in the season and vegetables or new peas and velvet beans will raise him.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

A special interest in Atlanta is the approaching meeting of the state federation of women's clubs because of the fact that many of the officers and committee chairmen are Atlanta women. The meeting will be held in Calhoun, Ga., during the last week in October and a most interesting program has been prepared. A large number of Atlanta club women will attend the session, and many of them will participate in the program.

Mrs. Howard McCall, of Atlanta, is the recording secretary of the federation and Mrs. Belling Jones is the general federation secretary. Mrs. Arthur Towler, Mrs. Charles J. Haden, Mrs. Nellie Polers Black, Mrs. Henry Peoples, Mrs. Harry E. Way, Miss Celeste Parrish, Mrs. W. P. Price Smith, Mrs. George B. Himmelfarb, Mrs. Frank Howell, Mrs. W. B. Brown, Mrs. William C. Spiker, Dr. Frances Bradley, Mrs. W. R. Pastille, Mrs. Julian Bailey, and Mrs. E. W. Lasarus.

The Convention of the Woman's Auxiliary, which is being held in New York City is a theme of world-wide interest to women here. Representatives of twenty foreign countries are in attendance. There is a brilliant social side to the convention, luncheons, receptions, teas, being tendered the visitors to afford the opportunity of a closer acquaintance among women of foreign nationalities.

Among those from the city who are in New York and who will remain for the greater part of the convention are Mrs. Charles Patterson, Mrs. Nellie Polers Black, Mrs. Nyma Hunt and Miss Louise Black. Women from all over the state are also present, including a number of delegates from neighboring towns. Many who are not delegates have taken advantage of this occasion to attend the convention, and its accompanying social features.

Cordial interest centers in the engagement of Miss Louise Wark and Mr. Percy Carlisle Taylor, announced today. The pretty bride-elect being popular with a large circle of friends and her fiancé, who is a brother of Mrs. Howard McCall, well known in the business world, and the social circle of which he is a member.

We Have New Goods and a New Store
But Our Usual Courtesy Still Prevails

Excepting diamonds, practically our entire stock was disposed of before vacating our old stand. We have been able, therefore, to occupy our present quarters with a new stock, by far the largest and handsomest that has ever been shown by us—in fact, we believe it to be the largest of high-class goods that has ever been brought together in the South.

The designs and costs in our Silver, Cut Glass and Sheffield Silver-Steel embrace a scope sufficient in range to satisfy each individual desire.

In our new store, every facility has been afforded to make buying a comfort and pleasure to our patrons. We have a beautiful place and want you to see it. Those of the traveling public that have expressed themselves to us are thoroughly in accord in that the appearance of our place is the prettiest that the country affords.

The courteous treatment that has contributed to the admirable reputation we gained in our old stand prevails in our new one.

Silk and Silk Dress Goods.

There are good reasons why our Bridal Silks are preferred. It is not chance or luck that brings a majority of the prospective Autumn brides to our counters. It is the knowledge that the assortment here compares all that can be wished for, the greatest variety of weaves, the high standard of quality of the silks that are known to be very scarce at the present time. Crepe, Crepe de Chines, Crepe de Meton, Crepe Brocade, Chiffon Brocade, Silk Marquinettes, Satin Charmeuse, Messaline Brocade and all the other fabrics and much sought for weaves of all the leading, fashionable colorings. A visit to our Silk Section is a liberal education in what is right, up-to-date and in style.

The Difference between COMFORT and DISCOMFORT

Just as a hair may divide the false from the true, so may a spring prove the difference between comfort and discomfort. And comfort is a very desirable condition.

It is restlessness at night and loss of sleep which produce nervousness; which undermine health. In too many instances the real cause is not thought of. Are you laboring under discomfort which robs you of a night's good rest? Perhaps your bed is not equipped with the proper spring. Perhaps the spring is too weak in some places and too rigid in others and has an uneven surface.

Mine isn't "The 400" Springbed Mine is. is guaranteed the best made. It is manufactured of highly tempered Premier wire which gently conforms to the body lines. Each of the 88 oil tempered coils is carefully tested. The frame work and connecting wires are stiff and rigid to hold the spring in shape. The whole is heavily coated with durable black enamel which makes the spring noiseless and rustless and germ proof. The surface is smooth and even with no rough ends to tear mattress tick. Insure your comfort. Sold under 5-year guarantee. If your dealer can't supply you write us. Cholsin-Cunningham Springbed Co. ATLANTA, GA.

MEMBER OF MILLEDGEVILLE PLAYERS CLUB

MRS. EDWARD R. HINES, AND MISS FLORENCE STEINBRIDGE AND MISS MARIE STEINBRIDGE, OF MILLEDGEVILLE.

They will take prominent parts in the presentation of "The Private Secretary," which will be given by the members of the Players' club and will be a large social event of Friday night, October 17, in Milledgeville.

The Milledgeville Players' club has announced "The Private Secretary," a farcical comedy by Charles Hawley, as their first dramatic appearance of the season to be presented Friday night, October 17.

The cast includes ten persons and the play abounds in startling situations, bright dialogue and laughable incidents. The company has previously presented "Hazel Kirks" at the G. N. C. convention in May, achieving a distinct success by this and other productions of high class drama or comedy.

This presentation of "The Private Secretary" will be an event of social as well as literary interest in Milledgeville.

Among those from here who attended the Polk County Missionary union at Taylorville last week were Messrs. W. Ferguson, J. H. Taylor, George Doubray, Ned Bullion, Tom Morgan and A. C. Auchinsky.

Reflexion gratifies on the one who gives. It is always appropriate for Weddings or any of the Many Anniversaries.

For $59 A complete modern disc Grafonola with an outfit of 12 records (24 pieces) --cash or at the same cash price on $5 monthly payments--no interest or extras. All subject to your approval.

It's the Columbia Grafonola "Favorite" -- the first Grafonola ever offered at its price or anywhere near it. We believe it is the best that can be constructed and sold at the price, or near it -- the first instrument of the enclosed type offered at anything like its price, and capable of all the tonal quality of the $300 instruments.

THE 12 selections on the 12 disc No. 1000 records include the famous "Rhapsody" Quartette and also the splendid "Koda" Sextette, for which two sensational songs many making machine owners have had to pay $10. On your own selection of records will be supplied.

Important Notice!
All Columbia records will play on Victor talking machine. Likewise all Columbia Grafonolas will play Victor records.

And about this young catcher it might be said that he has proven himself a receiver of remarkable ability. He is one of the heroes of this series. In dealing with the Giants there is absolutely nothing out of the ordinary concerning their offensive ability. They were able to hit the pitcher Plank's offerings. A total of two hits fell on the catcher's head. Their hitting was a little better than their hitting. Morris and Fletcher pulled good plays.

Annual Game Between Army and Navy This Season Will Be Waged Where All Fans Can Witness It. The 1913 game gives promise of being one of the best ever played between these institutions. To date the Army has an advantage of one game lead over the Navy in the series and every effort will be made by them to hold it. Annapolis state the season with only two men riding from last year's line-up, while the military return with their forward line badly shattered by graduation. The Navy, however, has assembled a notable staff of coaches, presided over by the coming general, and their coaching staff, Daly was turned out at Harvard and West Point.

You are sure of perfect service if you own a Cartercar!

A car that will travel all roads as they come—that has nothing to cause trouble—and that is as easy to drive as the features of the Cartercar that make perfect service an absolute necessity.

This is the car with the gearless transmission—the ten or twelve complicated gears of the ordinary gear being replaced by a simple two-unit transmission.

No matter how hard you drive a Cartercar—over what hills, sandy or muddy roads you travel—there is nothing to give way, to cause trouble the next time you are in a tight place.

You simply cannot appreciate the value of these points until you get out on the road. Until you drive a Cartercar you cannot understand how easy a car can be so much more efficient, so much more reliable than other cars.

Unlimited speeds—economy of power—easy control—and far greater wear from tires because of the elimination of jerks and lars—these are exclusive features that are making Cartercar popularity so great everywhere.

And we ask you to let us prove these statements. Come in and see for yourself—the Cartercar will talk for itself—and it will back up everything we claim for it.

We are looking for live dealers who wish to make money. Get our agency proposition.

COLONEL HEURING AGAIN PLAYS EXHIBITOR ROLE

B. F. Avery & Sons Will Make Display at State Fair at Macon

W. H. Heuring, veteran of the B. F. Avery & Sons Atlanta branch fishing firm, can be said to be notable in three lines of endeavor.

First, there is selling the Avery agricultural implements to the dealers throughout his Florida territory. Second, there is the matter of fishing in which he has gained something of a reputation, even when others tell the stories. And third, there is the part he plays of master of ceremonies at the Avery exhibits at fairs and conventions.

He is slated now to take another turn in the last role as he will have charge of the company's display of farm tools at the Georgia state fair at Macon, October 21 to 23.

This company is active in the matter of exhibits on such occasions and Colonel Heuring gets frequent opportunity to specify all of his accomplishments as it is a rare season the fishing is not being stirring.

COMMERCE CHAMBER AND T. P. A.'S TO HOLD MEETING

Committees Will Confer October 14 on Means for Better Co-operation

Editor Firing Line: At the meeting of the state board of directors on October 4 a resolution was passed requesting President J. W. Baker, on his visit to the various cities comprising this division to present for the consideration of each post the great value that accrues to our membership from individual co-operation of one member toward another in securing employment and promotion in business to our members and the great need to carry this class of work to the highest possible attainment, which can only result in good to all.

The move is directly in line with the movement on foot for a closer working interest between the Travelers Protective associations and the chambers of commerce in the various cities of the state, and arrangements have been perfected in this city whereby the committees appointed some time since by the Travelers Protective association, consisting of E. A. Breyer and E. D. McDonald, together with a committee appointed by the chamber of commerce, will meet with the board of directors of the chamber of commerce at a meeting to be held on October 14, with the view to perfecting the arrangements for which these committees have been appointed and which cannot fail to accomplish much good for both organizations if properly handled.

It may be a matter of interest to you to know that Colonel Deane Fleming, of Albany, ex-president of the Georgia division, and a statesman of the first order, who attended the board meeting on October 4, announced the fact that here that he was a candidate for congress in his district to fill the unexpired term of the late S. A. Roddenberry, and he stated in this connection that he had every reason to believe that he would be elected from the numerous and voluntary offers of support in the race.

Mr. John Bratton, the secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia, and a statesman of the first order, who attended the board meeting on October 4, announced the fact that he was a candidate for congress in his district to fill the unexpired term of the late S. A. Roddenberry, and he stated in this connection that he had every reason to believe that he would be elected from the numerous and voluntary offers of support in the race.

PRODUCE DEALERS EXPECT WELL-BALANCED MARKET

Prices Will Be High Only on Apples and Oranges, Says A. Fugazzi

"It looks now as if everything is going to be at a rather low price except apples and oranges, which will be higher than last year." is the way the approaching season with the produce now is stated up by A. Fugazzi.

"Apples will not be unusually high, but will seem somewhat expensive compared to last year, when the price was forced very low by the exceptionally large crop. On the produce line in general, this season is going to be a well-balanced one for both dealers and the public."

The commission merchants report business somewhat backward because of the continued warm weather but are expecting a rush of activity within the next two weeks.

NEW TARIFF HELPS BUSINESS INSTEAD OF BEING HARMFUL

Domestic Manufacturers Have Adjusted Themselves to New Scale—Many Have Sold Products Year in Advance

SOUTHERN COTTON MILLS RUNNING NIGHT AND DAY

New Yorker's Prediction of "Soup Kitchens on Broadway and Games of Marbles in Wall St." Proves False

BY R. E. HANCOCK
Dry Goods Dept. of John Silvey & Co.

The tariff bill has passed. It is signed, sealed and delivered. There has been no great outcry, the stars and stripes floats over "the land of the free" and her citizens are still asserting their insalubrious rights to the pursuit of "life, liberty and happiness." It did not hurt so much after all. It reminds one of the boy's first loose tooth, talking about it, gauding and discussing it hurts worse than the real operation of its removal.

Some of the tariff bill's worst enemies freely admit that they did not believe it a menace to business. They now say they did not want matters disturbed and were ready to trade to have an important transaction left in the hands of "experienced legislators."

I heard the chairman of the committee of importers of foreign lines say to Mr. Underwood a back-handed compliment. This gentleman stated to the head of his department that after a general conference with Mr. Underwood regarding the tariff bill, he did not believe in handling the tariff question that was far superior to anything he could be learning a few weeks ago.

Many of the domestic manufacturers admitted their affairs to the new tariff regulations early in September. They came out with prices of their goods, sold them up readily and good money have withdrawn their line from the market, as they will have been sold up a year in advance. The conditions made by the corporations and manufacturers of woolen dress goods was about to create a row between all-wool and cotton warp serge and serge. It may be now that these corporations will within the year divide a 44 cent dividend instead of 40 cents, but it is also true that they will have to make up for four weeks and will run them for a year instead of six to eight months, thereby giving their help employment for twelve months instead of four years' time.

THEY'VE GOT ON COTTON

The surprising thing to me before this bill was passed, was the agitation among our cotton goods manufacturers, particularly among some of our good southern friends, who thought that foreign competition would mean nothing short of death to local mills. To me this seemed more like politics than good business judgment, since having a look-in at both foreign and domestic lines, I cannot see any reason for this sort of thing.

Probably because it was said to be the policy of our firm to patronize home industries whenever possible, instead of giving the business to foreigners. It is certain that the foreign manufacturers will have to get a move on to compete with some of our manufactured lines in this country.

It is most refreshing and encouraging to see the cotton mills throughout North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, burning electric lights and running at full capacity.

THE LIFE OF A CITY SALESMAN—STROUD EXPLAINS ITS MEANING

Leaves World's Series Score Board to Talk of Trips, Trials and Order Chasing sitting up with the score boards of the world's series and taking care of one share of the greatest business ever enjoyed by one's firm is a man's job. Nobody knows this better than "Buddy" Stroud, city salesman of the B. L. Adams company, and nobody is better able to get away with the task than he.

He was discovered one day last week by a Firing Line representative immediately contiguous to one of the baseball business men in progress and was asked to make some observations on the life of a city salesman as seen by him during his fifteen years' experience.

"Just you wait a minute," he said, "strangely agitated, and in a flash he was gone."

After a bit he returned, all traces of his nervousness disappeared. "I don't get it but he will next time, here at bat," he said. "Baker will make another home run today. That's a cinch. Oh, yes, I remember now, what was it you were asking me about. What does a city salesman do and what is he up against?"

"Well, as you see, he's kept pretty busy. He has no easy time of it. I can tell you. He's up and away on his sales round at 8:30 o'clock in the morning. At least that's the way it is with me. At that hour I crank up my trusty truck and am burning the roads down."

"With a chug-chug and a slow down, I am out of my car and in the store of the first customer on the day's round. We check up the goods I have sold him heretofore and he pays me for them."

"Collections" form an important part of the duties every wholesale grocer salesman in Atlanta. He collects for the goods as well as sells them.

"The customer usually has a lot of the goods already made out for me. When this is not the case, we take a look at his stock jutting over the articles on which he is running short. It's a sort of stock-taking and it proves beneficial. It brings to the customer's attention not only the goods which he

"Here's business!"
"Pis, thank you."
That's a question and answer these are as common in Atlanta as your getting salutation to a robust friend and his reply.

But business with Atlanta jobbers is not merely that. It's superior. It goes better than that. It is record breaker. Neighbors, where do you get that? From figures, just plain ordinary public numbers not down in the plain ordinary sales records a number of Atlanta wholesale houses and totaled by aim, cost, expense, adding machines.

These machines have been at work on the sales for September and they were busy to report last week, and this is what they said and it deserves more than a passing mention if anything ever did. Nearly September smashed all sales records with a number of Atlanta manufacturing and jobbing firms, for any month since these firms began business here.

All these houses September was as merry better than last September, and more so than any September before, but better than any month of any year since these firms opened their doors to the business world.

As Atlanta and Georgia prospered, with every wholesale store, nearly every jobbing firm, and every month since these firms began business here.

All these houses September was as merry better than last September, and more so than any September before, but better than any month of any year since these firms opened their doors to the business world.

SO. SPRING BED CO. IS THRIVING HOME INDUSTRY

Tripart Through Plant Revelation of What Atlanta Manufacturers Are Doing

There's a hustling city in the Middle West that up to a few years ago took out of her banks every year a larger sum for outside (Far-West) investment than she devoted to business expansion at home.

Loss of capital wasn't all. Where the money went the folks followed. "Where the treasure is, there will the heart be also."

Just so long as the lure of the golden faraway and the glamour of sudden riches fascinated investors, just so long the Home Town was handicapped—crippled—strophied.

But a great light broke upon the Home Town. "Why shouldn't I keep my money and my people here at home?"

"WHY?" There wasn't any reason whatsoever. So she simply took herself in hand and whirled spang into the middle of a bresay, well-backed-up advertising campaign about HER OWN SELF and her resources.

She told her citizens facts that inspired them—woke 'em up—started things! She made her own people honestly proud of her.

It's Good Business Both Ways--and Always!

There's a hustling city in the Middle West that up to a few years ago took out of her banks every year a larger sum for outside (Far-West) investment than she devoted to business expansion at home.

Loss of capital wasn't all. Where the money went the folks followed. "Where the treasure is, there will the heart be also."

Just so long as the lure of the golden faraway and the glamour of sudden riches fascinated investors, just so long the Home Town was handicapped—crippled—strophied.

But a great light broke upon the Home Town. "Why shouldn't I keep my money and my people here at home?"

"WHY?" There wasn't any reason whatsoever. So she simply took herself in hand and whirled spang into the middle of a bresay, well-backed-up advertising campaign about HER OWN SELF and her resources.

She told her citizens facts that inspired them—woke 'em up—started things! She made her own people honestly proud of her.

In place of the spirit of heaviness she donned the garment of praise. New enthusiasm—new blood—new money—new growth—new success—all these came to her. Steadily, surely, splendidly, they came.

That town is Des Moines. Where formerly her manufacturers had a hard time to get a hearing from their local dealers and from the retailers throughout Iowa, these retailers now began to get a new slant on their capital city and to observe her with deep interest.

Her factories multiplied and her business grew. The more the business, the better the product. She thought well of herself. She MADE OTHERS THINK WELL OF HER WARES. From comatose drowsie to brilliant achievement. From haphazard effort to assured success!

The psychology is easy. We're merely mentioning this as ONE illustration of a great big wholesome fact. A town gets no higher than the level of self-esteem.

ATLANTA passed long ago the point of needing to realize her own tremendous power as a commercial center. She's been pounding on her own importance and her own ability for a long time.

That's the thing that has built her up—otherwise known as the Atlanta Spirit. BUT—

There are still some of Atlanta's and Georgia's own dealers who seem to think that they can do BETTER outside Atlanta than they can here at home.

They must needs go east and west and north for goods that they could buy here JUST AS WELL. Dealers, no one thing means so much to you as KEEPING YOUR MONEY IN CIRCULATION HERE AT HOME.

No sane business man in the South today questions the fact that our commercial supremacy lies the way of CO-OPERATION. Whatever builds up the factories of ATLANTA builds up the business of the smallest retailer using the goods made by those factories.

The pay rolls and the taxes that we manufacturers put into the general fund go right straight to the bettering of YOUR business. Our employes, many of them ATLANTA-MADE themselves, and many more attracted here by the work we give them, are YOUR customers.

We are right on the ground, too. You can see the GOODS and you can see US. Another thing: Drays and motor trucks can get to you a sight faster than freight trains and steamboats.

It's as easy to call any one of us on the 'phone as it is to get your own home from your office. Our salesmen are quick movers and easy to reach. Rapid action is worth money to you.

Study us (see below) and let us get together. We need you—but not a whit more than you need us. It's good business, both ways—and ALWAYS!

Opening of Hunting Season

Miss Hattie Patterson, of 130 Elizabeth St. Shown Here With Dog and Gun, is Among Those Who Are Awaiting Opening of the Hunting Season Most Eagerly

BY BRADFORD BYRD.

Billie's whistle is echoing through Georgia woods and fields now and soon the hunters with dog and gun will be flushing him on hillside and lowland. The 1913 hunting season is almost here and the fat pointer dogs are being starved and freely exercised to make them lean and keen for scenting the favorite quest of sportsmen.

Many gun-locks are being ransacked in search of an old leggings or hunting coat which was lastly thrown aside at the close of the season last spring. Many a hunter spends his evenings now in oiling and putting his favorite shotgun while his faithful dog crouches at his feet, waits and sniffs the ground for the scent of the quail.

Hunters this season will find a mass of new laws to entangle them in the pursuit of game, even quail. If they are not cautious. The new federal laws went into effect on October 1st, and incidentally, played havoc with some of the Georgia game laws. The new law does not affect the quail season in Georgia which opens on November 29—later.

By its provisions one cannot shoot quail between daybreak and sunset, formerly a favorite time for hunters to seek game. One cannot shoot quail after sunset either—another blow to the hunters. While sportsmen will be disappointed that some of their favorite hours for hunting have been forbidden, the federal law can be considered as nothing but a wise move. In the early hours of the morning the birds are feeding, the grass is wet with dew and it is easy for the keen nosed dog to trail and point the quail out for their masters to flush and shoot.

Hours for Hunting Birds

After the sun is up and the grass begins to dry it is not so easy for the dogs to find the birds and the quest of the hunter has a better chance. After sundown the quail begin to hunt water before night comes on and it is easy for a hunter to place himself at a vantage point and bag the birds as they come in.

Hunting licenses are already being purchased for this season. Will V. Zimmer, game warden of Fulton county and the general manager of Kimbrellville Farm, has prepared himself for the rush and permits to hunt have been placed on sale at many points in Atlanta.

The wise sportsman is not going to wait until November 29, the day the quail season opens, to purchase his license, he already has provided himself for the coming season and when the sun rises on the twentieth he can go into a ducked covey of quail without fear of being taken in charge by a deputy game warden.

Here is what the new federal law provides: "The regulations prohibit red bird shooting in Delaware to conform with restrictions in New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Wood duck shooting is prohibited for five years in Florida and Kansas. The short bird season on the coast of New England and on Long Island have been made uniform, with no shooting before August 1st.

New Federal Game Laws

The seasons in Washington and Oregon have been made uniform, opening October 1; likewise in California and Arizona, opening October 15. Opening dates of the new season in Florida, Missouri and New Jersey have been made to conform with the state law dates. In Florida, Georgia and South Carolina the water fowl season opens from November 29 to February 1st.

All state game commissioners notified by wire as soon as the new law went into effect, and here is State Game Commissioner Mercer's letter to his wardens over Georgia explaining the meaning of the new law: "We are living now under a national as well as a state game law, both intended to conserve the game and the wild life in this country.

Let's be sure there is no conflict of authority or interference of duty. It is the duty of every good citizen to aid in the enforcement of the laws of the land in which he lives, and it is the duty of every sportsman to aid in the enforcement of the national law every way possible.

Within the next few days the department at Washington will issue a pamphlet of United States laws and regulations and I will furnish you with a copy from this office. Detail that date I want to call your attention to the effect the new law has on the game season in Georgia.

"First of all: It is against the United States law to kill any migratory game and insectivorous birds after sunset or before sunrise. (When you will observe is a very radical provision.)

"Third: Pigeons, cranes, swans, curlew and all shore birds except plover, snipe, woodcock and yellow legs, are protected until September 1, 1914; the open season for plover, snipe, woodcock and yellow legs is from November 29 to February 1 (that's you will note conflicts with the Georgia law, under which woodcock can be killed only in the month of December).

"Fourth: The closed season on water fowl, ducks, geese and brant is February 16 to November 20, that is, the open duck season now is November

BEAUTIFUL BLOUSES FOR FALL AND WINTER

When beginning to wonder what kind of blouse to wear with the heavy suit, and especially the architect of fashion, has decided that they are to be of beautiful sheer or soft material, such as light mousseline de soie, crepe de chine, etc. Sometimes matching the gown and sometimes forming harmonious contrast. No matter how beautiful the suit may be, the blouse worn with it decides its fate; that is, more or less completely its perfection.

The blouse with the little outwasped yoke is of current red crepe de chine or the latest frillings at the throat and wrists are of dark blue tulle. The blouse is decidedly on the kimono cut, and the plain front is untroubled by tucks or shirring. One making it is particularly becoming waist for the woman who is slightly plump. The woman who is more than "slightly" plump must have the blouse made in a less conspicuous color if she would stimulate slenderness. They blue velvet bows around the front, and a fold of "cashmere" or "silk-cashmere" mousseline is used under the bodice to soften the neck line. The undersleeves are of blue tulle. The model can, of course, be copied in any color to match the suit with which it is worn. The preceding hat is of gray fox fur, trimmed with a large bow of navy-blue panne velvet.

The yoke blouse with flaring collar is a fascinating thing of chalk-white crepe de chine. The simulated vest of the same material is ornamented with black-trimmed pearl buttons. Unlike the conventional blouse, this is most suitable to the slender figure. Because of the ruffles given across the bust line by the shirring of the lower part of the bodice to the yoke. While set this takes the long right-waisted sleeve. The seal-brown velvet trim is trimmed with a bow of white panne velvet.

The shaded yoke blouse is very simple and depends for its attractiveness upon the ruffled yoke and cuffs of white linen. A collarless is added to the bodice and cuffs by having the ruffles fused. The bodice itself is of navy-blue mousseline de soie, and the girdle is made of the material. The blouse worn by the model is of corbeau-blue velvet that blue which is the blue-black of the royal's wing, and is trimmed with blue wings of the same shade, held fast by a silver ornament.

The blue blouse of tulle, with a ruffled yoke, is trimmed with cream lace and small black jet buttons. A trim of cream lace forms the medallion and wrist trim, and the sleeves are made of cream lace all over. The tulle armholes are separate and fall slightly away from the lace sleeves. A band of black velvet marks the slightly elevated waist line.

The trim of the stunning hat to face with black velvet, while the upper side of the brim and the crown are of orange-colored plush. The flaring lower rim of black velvet faced with orange satin.

The model who seems bent upon displaying the back of her scoop-like hat wears a waist of the popular charcoal-colored tulle, with a startling, bold, wholly attractive contrast furnished by the velvet and cuffs of corbeau-blue tulle. The kimono shoulder has an inset sleeve halfway between the shoulder line and elbow, and the upper blouse portion of the sleeve thus formed is slightly pulled to the lower chesting sleeve. The corbeau-blue velvet hat flaunts a large bow of pale rose tulle as its trim. The hat, which has a very high flare in the back, displays the tulle to advantage.

The blouse with the double-frilled cuffs is of cream mousseline de soie trimmed with charcoal-colored velvet. The wide shades—char, burgundy, slurry, etc.—are very fashionable this season. The fringed collar is attached to the waist and is ornamented with the double rows of narrow charcoal-colored velvet ribbon, which forms of charcoal velvet around the front of the waist and the cuffs. The chic hat is of panne velvet in charcoal blue. The military ornament is composed of charcoal-colored tulle. The trim of the hat is turned up at one side, according to the latest fashion.

There are only a few of the many beautiful blouses to be worn with the suit-like and separate skirt this season. Never have blouses been designed in such soft, graceful and woolly artistic lines.

French Fashion Notes

PARIS, Oct. 2.

THE several schools of material art, each of which develops its own particular line, aim to produce creations that will set the tongue of the world wagging, and they have accomplished their ambition. One famous couturier is sponsor for freedom simplicity; another advocates eastern modes, with a decided leaning toward the Egyptian untrodden lines, while a third favors the graceful daintiness of the Louis Quinze and empire periods.

The founded, swathed or draped skirt for evening wear is reigning supreme, and narrow bands of fur usually trim the tulle or hem.

One of Pauline's handsomest models is fashioned of palest pink satin, over which a double-tiered tunic of cream lace is artistically arranged. The low décolletage of the lace and mousseline de soie bodice is outlined on one side with a narrow band of skunk fur, while a single line of brilliants adorns the other side. Below the girdle of china-blue silk, adorned with a single dull pink rose, fall the two gathered flounces of lace. A broad band of skunk edges the hem of the satin foundation, which is draped across the front.

Jeannette Laurin has a well-reputed reputation for making dresses so exquisitely simple in line that they are indelible.

Over a lining of soft white satin is draped white chiffon. The bodice has a rounded décolletage with a tucker gathered with a narrow green-blue ribbon. A broad girdle of ribbons of the same color is drawn softly about the waist, and a cluster of three leaves roses, fashioned of pale pink gauze and chiffon, adorns the corsage. The skirt has a tulle underdrapery bordered with a band of the blue ribbon dotted at intervals with the roses.

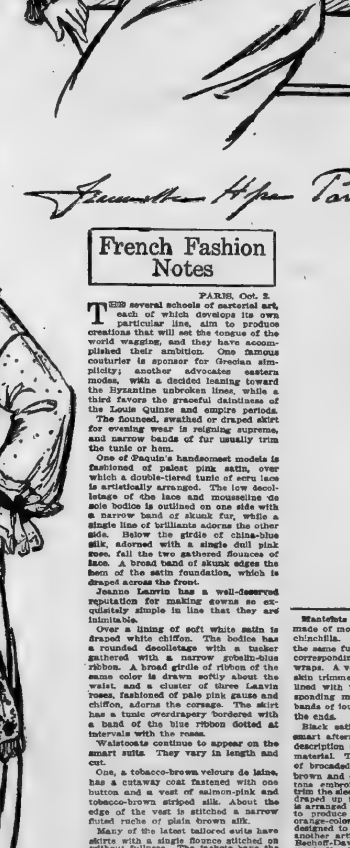

Waistcoats continue to appear on the smart suits. They vary in length and cut.

One, a tobacco-brown velours de laine, has a cutaway coat fastened with one button and a vest of saumon-rose and tobacco-brown striped silk. About the edge of the vest is stitched a narrow lined ruche of plain brown silk.

Many of the latest tailored suits have skirts with a single flounce attached on without fullness. The jackets have the effect of an apron in front, but are quite long at the back.

Black red is a favored color for street costumes, and all tones of brown are much used in models of high-waisted velours de laine. By Dracoi, haute fur trims the cuffs and the

Some suits for street wear are of three-quarter length and fashioned of dainty white tulle and ribbon, with a pebble cut. These suits are fur-trimmed and effectively worn by the younger generation.

Fur Notes

BLACK and red fox are high in price.

Not only foxes are in two colors, but two kinds of fur are to be used. The result is decidedly effective.

Two colors—sometimes in two colors—are being used in the same coat.

Black fur trimmings in beige used on

Manufacturers of fur fabrics are becoming so expert in their art that the beauty of their wares has tempted many.

These fox-while fox dyed-comes to be both practical and popular, and untraced ermine will be worn by those who can afford it. Great credit has effectively worn by the younger generation.

Manufacturers of the dolman type are made of moleskin, cashmere, ermine and chinchilla. Frequently, large muffs of the same fur, lined with satin or moire corresponding in color, accompany these wraps. A very smart mantlet of moleskin trimmed with bands of leopards and lined with tulle, with a corresponding muff of the same fur, with bands of leopards at each side, knotted at the ends.

Black satin is extensively used for smart afternoon gowns, and worthy of description is a Bodin model of this material. The bodice has a vest effect of broadened velvet in tones of orange, brown and deep purple, and small buttons embroidered in orange and gold trim the sleeves and bodice. The skirt is draped up in front and over each hip arranged a simulated panther design to produce the petto silhouette. An orange-colored fox, hood and muffs were designed to accompany this gown.

Another artistic model, the creation of a couturier, is a gown of black and white tulle. The bodice is finished of coral-colored broadened velvet trimmed with black and white tulle. The skirt and high girdle are of black satin.

The color red is strong in neckwear, and the latest collars, waives and jabots are embroidered with blue, coral or yellow gold or tiny flowers.

Black and white shiftons are being worn for street wear, and are trimmed with fur, lace, red or pink tulle.

Evening wraps of panne, broadened, ribbed or plain velvet trimmed with fur and eddy out are much worn by smart Parisiennes.

Among the small hats of black velvet those trimmed with clusters of small apples or peaches are particularly chic. Velvet is used to fashion the front instead of silk or satin.

Field velvet is used for a draped turban, and the trimming consists of a black velvet bow.

A hat of ivory plush has a narrow band of cotton plumes about the extreme edge of the brim.

The bands trim the latest neckwear made of tulle or mousseline de soie.

Frings of beads, silk or metal threads adorn gowns and wraps.

Very effective are the meshes of Roman striped ribbons now being worn with frocks of serge in tones of dark blue, brown, violet, green and red. The colors are bright and beautifully lit.

The latest Roman ribbons are rivaling the plain.

The model theme has been copied with renewed favor, and the new designs show cutaway or one-sided draped effects.

One of the most striking novelties of this season is the Great Colonne, and fashion, directing the lines of the slipper and its dress, several headed Louis Quinze slipper, instead of the bodice.

The costume of narrow ribbon velvet or striped ribbon is drawn through jeweled slides attached to the sides of the slipper and is drawn several inches in a flat bow.

Such a bow, with a button fastening, is used to hold the velvet bowties and lace booties, which are needed to hold over all but the toes.

Colors in Millinery

IN THE autumn millinery there are some decided favorites of the eye, and so many chances are rung on the original schemes that all new creations will be becomingly placed, that is, if women are as clever as we think.

The all-black hat is a practical favorite, and will look equally well on blonde and black features. If a touch of color is needed, there are countless ornaments in the shape of cabochon, fantasies, quills, beads and odd trimmings that can be added to give brightness.

Many shades of blue will be used. Can you picture the glancing greenish blue of the peacock transferred to soft velvet and touched up with a dull gold? This is one of the favorite combinations. Then there is a great variety of darker blue, including the cobalt, navy, lapis-lazuli and silvery tones.

Managers of gowns are also very keen on color. Dark, dark, chocolate, seal, café-au-lait—which is coffee and milk-cream hair. These are excellent suggestions for the girl with the Auburn hair.

Greens in the Russian and the Turbans are coming into the limelight, which will be known as the "Pasha" style.

Very rarely appearing the color combinations will be less severe and more artistic in their alliance. Many of the old patterns have inspired the milliner, and the result can be seen to the idea.

CONCERNING HEALTH and BEAUTY

By MRS. HENRY SYMES

HAVE YOU A WEAK BACK?

Life One Docter Over the Other

A general rule, women do not take enough exercise. So many of them are employed indoors all day long that they never get a chance to breathe in fresh air, or, I should say, they never make it possible to get all the advantages of the pure air. Consequently, we have before us women with pale faces, flabby muscles and a generally impoverished appearance.

A certain amount of exercise along with the fresh air is necessary if you wish to keep your joints limber and your muscles in a healthy condition. I advise all women to keep up gymnastic exercises and outdoor sports, no matter if they have reached the time when they no longer "feel their age."

However, there are just as many of the younger set who are as inactive as their elders. Sometimes I think it is lack of ambition that keeps them from indulging in vigorous exercises, but I am sure that once they enter the active field they would become so fascinated with the work and the results that they would regret the days they had lost.

I must not dwell long on the necessity and benefits of exercise, for I am anxious to help today these girls and women who are troubled with weak backs. Very frequently the attention of a physician is necessary in such cases, but the patient can do a great deal for herself in the way of exercises. The various motions will strengthen the muscles and put them in a healthy condition. The trunk is kept from falling forward by the action of the muscles of the back, therefore, you see the necessity for keeping them up to the mark.

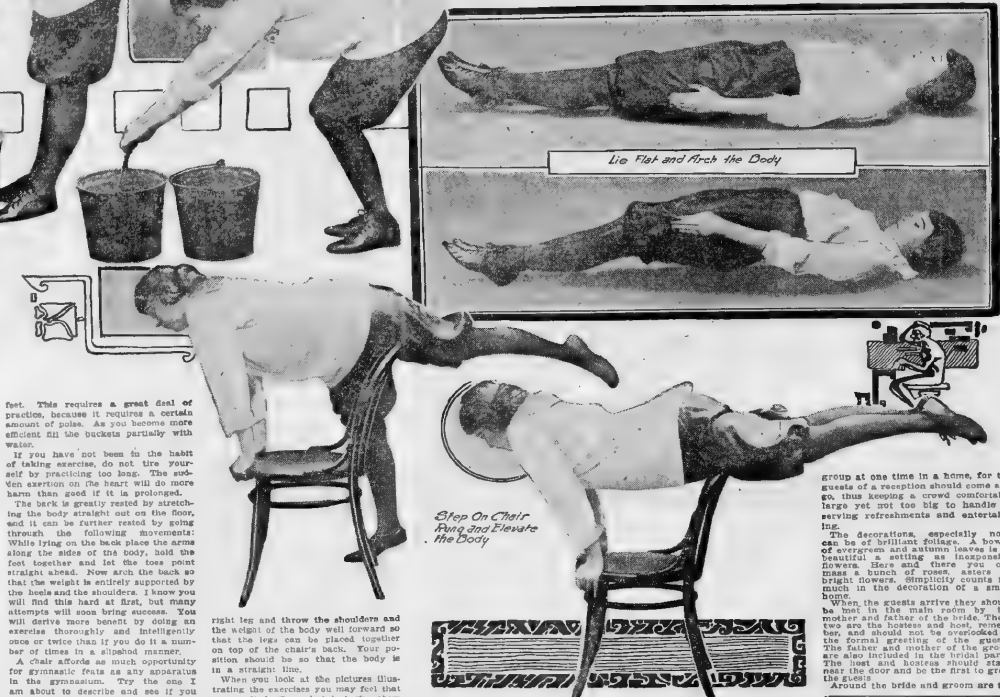

With two ordinary buckets a very beneficial exercise can be practiced. At the start have the buckets empty. Place one in front of the other and stand with the toes touching the buckets nearest you. Bend at the waist line and raise the front bucket high enough to clear it over the one furthest from you. Put it down on the floor without changing the position of your feet. This requires a great deal of practice, because it requires a certain amount of poise. As you become more efficient all the buckets partially with water.

If you have not been in the habit of taking exercise, do not tire yourself by practicing too long. The sudden exertion on the heart will do more harm than good if it is prolonged.

The back is greatly rested by stretching the body straight out on the floor, and it can be further rested by going through the following movement: While lying on the back place the arms along the sides of the body, hold the feet together and lift the toes point straight ahead. Now arch the back so that the weight is entirely supported by the hands and the shoulders. I know you will find this hard at first, but many attempts will soon bring success. You will derive more benefit by doing an exercise thoroughly and intelligently one or twice than if you do it a number of times in a slotted manner.

A chair affords as much opportunity for gymnastic feats as any apparatus in the gymnasium. Try the one I am about to describe and see if you do not derive a great deal of fun and strength from it.

Place a chair with the back toward you; then step on the lower rung high enough to clear it over the one furthest from you. Put it down on the floor without changing the position of your feet. This requires a great deal of practice, because it requires a certain amount of poise. As you become more efficient all the buckets partially with water.

right leg and throw the shoulders and the weight of the body well forward so that the legs can be placed together on top of the chair back. Your position should be so that the body is in a straight line.

When you look at the pictures illustrating the exercises you may feel that you can't do them, but just give them a trial and experience the glory of doing the things which seem impossible. And, besides, that weak back of yours should really not be. It is not necessary and can be conquered. With a resistant belt, of health.

group at one time in a home, for the guests of a reception should come and go just as they see fit to handle in serving refreshments and entertaining.

The decorations, especially now, can be of brilliant coloring. A shower of evergreen and autumn leaves is as beautiful a setting as inconspicuous flowers. Here and there you can place a bunch of roses, asters or bright flowers, simply counting for much in the decoration of a small home.

When the guests arrive they should be met in the main room by the mother and father of the bride. These two are the guests and must be the first to greet the guests. The father and mother of the groom are also at the door and the first to greet the host and hostess should stand next door and be the first to greet the guests.

Around the bride and groom are the signing, because there is not enough of the legs to force free movement of the body. The bride is too full of blood and consequently wears long, heavy, and consequently wear light clothing at any time, but particular care should be taken to have the body loosely clothed during exercise.

THE WEDDING RECEPTION

If a church wedding has been held, there is generally a reception at the home of the bride or at a large hotel in its hall or drawing room. This is an excellent way to receive a number of friends and acquaintances, and especially good if the idea of the reception if the ceremony were private.

It allows for the entertainment of friends who are too numerous to attendees arranged so that they can be a stranger to one of the married couple can be quietly introduced without embarrassment. It is the duty of the bride to have a list of names of her guests and to see that each guest finds out exactly whether the advantage guest knows both bride and groom.

The bride receives all wishes the happiness with a gracious smile, she should greet each guest with outstretched hand. Her dear friends are especially to be greeted. However, it is very tiring if every one is to be greeted. It is rather better to have a list of names of her guests and to see that each guest finds out exactly whether the advantage guest knows both bride and groom.

Conversations are extended to the groom for his good fortune in getting such a wife. He should accept all congratulations with a gracious smile. If a guest be unknown to the groom, it is better for the bride to introduce him.

Above all, the bride and groom should not forget the waiting guests when a luncheon is served. A dignified manner, very intimate one is best. It is no time for lengthy conversation. Only the shortest exchange of greetings should be made.

The father of the bride need not remain in the room during the entire reception. After half an hour or so he is free to go. He should see that the guests are being properly cared for in other parts of the house.

If the bride enters the dining room at all it should be with her husband. This is done sometimes to eat the bride's cake or when guests drink her happiness.

After all guests have arrived, or after the hour stipulated on the announcement card at the end of the reception, the bride should with a gracious smile, relative, go to a drawing room, change her dress, and have a quiet talk with the groom, who has done likewise, and the bride should see that the guests are being properly cared for in other parts of the house.

No practical jokes or derogatory remarks should be made during the reception. It is very unbecoming for the bride and groom to be seen in the hall during the reception. There is no time for the bride and groom to be seen in the hall during the reception. There is no time for the bride and groom to be seen in the hall during the reception.

Warden Who Gives His Prisoners A Chance.

By Angus Perkerson

FROM an institution of punishment, the Atlanta federal penitentiary has changed within the last ten years to one of reform. This change has been brought about by William H. Meyer, warden of the prison, who has furnished the government with new theories of crime and its treatment. When he became warden, in the summer of 1903, the penitentiary was like other prisons. It clothed its convicts in stripes, cramped their beds and visited each with retribution for his offense against society. The theory of the prison was that prevention of crime could be accomplished only by hard dealing with the criminal. The government was taxed the prisoner was fed sufficiently, clothed warmly and not to give beyond his strength; further than this his welfare was neglected. Convicts at that time were criminals—men who should wear stripes, have their hair clipped to the skull, and pay in sorrow and suffering for the broken laws which had sent them to prison.

"CONVICT" IS ABOLISHED. Today Warden Meyer has abolished the word "convict" from the prison speech. In the place of it, he has substituted the word "prisoner." He has done this in suits of blue instead of stripes, he has forbidden the harshness of clipping their hair close, change which are an effort to give each man a "new chance." Beyond this he has altered the government's attitude toward its prisoners and means to bring about a further change, which seems likely to affect the whole penal system.

"Too good," the warden, growing emphatic, leaned forward and laid one finger upon the arm of his chair. "You see, not a few prisoners here ought never to have been sentenced to prison.

"Some of these are men convicted upon technical charges—men who have benefited society far more than they have injured it. Men to whom society is indebted, rather than man from whom society has suffered. Then there are other men who atoned for their trifling offenses by a sentence pronounced upon them. The verdict of the jury made them tenfold for their offenses against the law. Really, by the time they reached this prison they had paid off their debt many times over.

"Again, there are prisoners who have atoned fully after a brief imprisonment, and would make of liberty an opportunity to return to the world as good and helpful citizens. To keep them longer in prison is an injury to society and to them. They are prepared to become useful citizens. They have paid their debt; why should their imprisonment continue?"

"Why should the men convicted upon a technical charge ever have been imprisoned? Why should the men who paid the price at their time of conviction be made to protract their atonement?"

"I have urged and still submit a question, where circumstances instead of crime have caused a defendant's conviction, that federal judges be allowed to substitute probation for prison sentences.

"As it is, judges are forced to pass sentence and the warden is compelled to enforce this sentence, even though both know that the prisoner is guilty only in a technical way and that he no more deserves to be sent to prison than I or you.

"In the other instances, where the prisoner was guilty of crime but stones fully after a brief or a long while in prison and is ready to return to society as a good and helpful citizen, I think that a way should be provided for his release.

"We now have the parole system for federal prisoners, which applies even to those who have been sentenced for life. But we need more than that. We need a system of indefinite sentences, which shall not demand a given number of months or years of imprisonment, but which shall stop when the prisoner must remain in prison until he has become fit to live in harmony with society.

"If he is ready to be released upon the day after he is admitted, then there is no reason why he should remain a moment longer in prison. If he never returns, he should never be released.

"We have men in this prison of all three sorts: men who should be released now, because they are prepared to become useful citizens; men who will remain criminal their whole life long and who never can be allowed at large without injury to society.

"There can be no accurate measure of crime and punishment; and laws which try to classify crime and to prevent it by punishment which is also classified, always fail. What is too much punishment for one man for one crime is not enough for another man for the same crime.

"Under the parole system we have a board, which hears the petitions of prisoners for parole and decides who shall be released upon parole and who shall not.

"I propose that a board be appointed to determine when the terms of the prisoners shall end, and that the courts shall have the length of the sentence to the board.

"I would consider the man from a personal viewpoint, and would be concerned with what the man was to do in the future instead of what he had done in the past.

"If he is disposed to become of use to the world and is capable of doing so, should he remain in prison?"

"Is there any reason why his imprisonment should continue? We don't punish prisoners. Just for the sake of punishing them. They are placed in prison to prevent crime and to make good men, if possible, of themselves.

But would indefinite sentences rob the laws of their force? Opposite to the warden's theories is based upon the parole system. This system in effect is something like an indefinite sentence law; and, yet, it has served to increase discipline and to reform prisoners rather than to confirm them in crime. The good effect was almost from the time that he was and of that time he shall be eligible to parole.

With this much accomplished, the warden now urges that judges be allowed to place federal prisoners upon probation instead of sentencing them to prison; and that where sentence is passed it shall be indeterminate—that it shall last only so long as the prisoner is criminal.

The passage of the parole law was the beginning of big effort to change the government's theory of crime and the treatment of criminals. The passage of probationary and indeterminate laws would complete his effort.

But not all of his work in behalf of federal prisoners would be incomplete without a mention of the lesser merces that he has secured for them.

First of all he established a baseball league two years ago at the prison—a league in which prisoners are players and fans. The success of this league as a means of discipline and of reformation was such that the attorney general ordered the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth to establish a similar league.

PRISON SCHOOL. Warden Meyer next provided for a prison school, although this government neglected and still neglects to furnish a teacher to whom the prisoners shall go as pupils. He has selected those of the prisoners who are well taught, and has made them the teachers of their fellows in misfortune. Of the 452 prisoners who were received at the penitentiary last year, 30 were illiterate. Of the illiterates 80 per cent can now read and write.

In speaking of this school, the warden says:

"There can be no justification for returning illiterate men to society, when they can be so soon taught to read and write and at so small a comparative expense."

Afterward, he passed a rule, allowing prisoners to talk during meals. Other penitentiaries require that the prisoners shall sit silent at tables, all like dumb men. This rule was designed to give a means of discipline. Warden Meyer saw in it unnecessary sternness, and ordered it abolished.

He permitted last year a founding of a prison paper, written and edited by prisoners; and prisoners are used by them as a means of speaking their thoughts to the world at large. He permitted a means of discipline and put in their place cloth of plain blue.

He encouraged the organization of a prison orchestra.

He took pains to protect the health of prisoners by introducing the sitting-up drill as an exercise; and by employing an oculist and a dentist to visit the prison each week to examine prisoners.

He has, in a word, been as a father to the prisoners in his care, a warden who has given his prisoners a chance.

CANADIAN WATERWAY WILL RIVAL THE PANAMA CANAL

Few persons realize that within thirty minutes' ride of the Canadian border the Canadian government is spending $100,000,000 to give to Canada a canal that will be more important to it than the Panama canal is to American cities.

The Welland canal will be twenty miles long and will cost $22,000,000, it is said.

The Welland canal is located in the basin of the Niagara river, at a distance of about eight miles from the present canal.

The plan which has been approved by the engineers and accepted by the government provides for the widening and deepening of the present canal from Port Colborne to a point a short distance from Thorold, where the new cut, three miles in length, will start. It will connect with the Grand Trunk railway at Thorold and ending Lake Ontario at Tonawanda creek, three miles east of Port Dalhousie.

The present canal will be deepened from fourteen to twenty-five feet in the stretches and thirty feet the locks and will be widened from 150 to 200 feet. The new section will be of similar dimensions. An important feature of the work is that by reason of the dredging and deepening the number of locks will be reduced from twenty-two to seven. This, it is calculated, will save $10,000,000 in the time now required for carrying boats through from Port Colborne to Port Dalhousie, and in obviously a large consideration in favor of the project. The total estimated cost is $20,000,000.

A few days ago the initial appropriation of $2,000,000 was passed by the Dominion government for the work to be done this year.

OPPORTUNITY FOR INDUSTRIES. A fair idea of the rate at which Canada is growing may be gleaned from the fact that in the last seven years over half a million settlers from the United States have crossed the boundary bringing with them approximately $1,000 each. It is estimated that about 350,000 American will come to Canada this year. The Niagara peninsula is to be the workshop of Canada. When electrical energy was first made available in the district it was predicted that the Welland canal would one day be lined with industries from end to end. That prediction is being fulfilled more rapidly than any one ever dreamed.

The canal zone has made a greater industrial advance in the last five years than has any like district in the Dominion. This has not been by mere accident. There is a reason. For many years the rail and water shipping facilities have been of superior excellence, but it was not until the development of electrical energy that the list of advantages was complete.

Port Colborne enjoys a close geographical relationship to the largest electrical power development in the world. The Canadian Niagara Power company, the Electrical Development company, the Ontario Power company, of Niagara Falls, and the Dominion Power and Transmission company, of De Cew's Falls, are all located within a few miles of Port Colborne.

Port Colborne is served with power from both the falls of Niagara and De Cew's. An abundance of power, nearly half a million horsepower, close competition, the lowest prices—these are the factors that have created the industrial advancement of the community. The power problem has been solved forever at Port Colborne.

NATURAL GAS. Port Colborne is in the heart of the natural gas field and at the present time over forty wells are tributary to the municipality. Franchises are carried by the Sterling Gas company and industrial gas company. Nearby are the Provincial Gas company and the Niagara Natural Gas and Fuel company, while the Port Colborne-Welland Natural Gas company supplies a large field west of Port Colborne.

Port Colborne offers unexcelled advantages as a location for manufacturers, being at the Lake Erie entrance to the Welland canal, the terminus of the deep waterway from the west, and at the gateway of the all-Canadian water route to the Canadian seaboard. The company government has spent millions of dollars in constructing breakwaters and docks, making one of the most harbors on the chain of lakes. Boats drawing twenty feet of water can safely discharge their cargoes here and load for upper lake ports. Manufacturers get the advantage of the very lowest freight rates from Port Colborne to all points east and west.

Port Colborne is the terminus of the deep waterway from the west and the gateway through which must pass all the shipping east and west.

Manufacturers are assured of competitive railway rates at Port Colborne, with two lines of the Grand Trunk and a branch of the Canadian Northern connecting with the Welland.

Port Colborne, Michigan Central, Toronto, Hamilton and Niagara and Canadian Pacific railway.

For local passenger traffic the N. S. & T., owned by the Mackenzie & Mann interests, gives a splendid service. The immediate extension of this line to Port Erie will make another large territory tributary to Port Colborne.

In connection with the contemplated improvements at Fort Colborne as a grain distributing port the government has decided to extend the present pier to provide additional docking facilities for the steamers engaged in carrying the grain, as well as for shipping generally.

The work will cost $213,000, and a contract has been let at that figure to M. J. Hogan. The work will proceed at once.

MUCH LOVED GIRL MAKES NOVEL PLEA LAGRANGE, Ga.—Mrs. Gusmie Washburn, seventeen years old, says that the marriage is not legal if the bride answers "no" when the justice asks her if she will love, cherish and obey. Gusmie can easily qualify as an expert. She has been engaged to twenty-five men, tangled up in five elopements and twice married. In fact, she is now charged with bigamy, but claims innocence on the ground of her contrary answers. She says her grandfather forced her into her second marriage.

CATCHES WOMAN BY ABILITY AT FLIRTING SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—Girls of this city have been at their wits' end of late on account of rife calls for help that have been sent to emergency hospitals, the morgue, and the police. BILLIONS IN SOUTH'S NEGLECTED CHEMICAL INDUSTRIES

BY J. S. BROGDON, Analytical Chemist.

THE south is neglecting industries which would yield millions of dollars. This neglect comes about through failure to make the most of "industrial chemistry."

The steel industry in Birmingham resulted from applied chemistry. The manufacture of fertilizer is a chemical industry, and other activities in the south, equal in importance, owe their success to the chemist.

But the opportunities which are neglected are even greater than those which have been accepted. Truly, the south has done much in the last few years in chemical industry. But this progress has been only the first step in what may be accomplished.

Not a tenth part of the profits which may be gained from such industries has yet been realized by southern investors. The south has made but a beginning in the use of resources which chemistry can turn to good account.

Evidently the wise development of resources now neglected by the south would be rewarded by profits amounting to vast fortunes— even billions of dollars.

Georgia, for instance, is buying chemical products of much value from northern states that might easily be manufactured here and yield to southern manufacturers the profit that now goes to northern investors.

COCOA MANUFACTURE.
An illustration is cocoa. Atlanta buys yearly millions of pounds of powdered cocoa from manufacturers in New Jersey and in other states now to use everywhere for the northern market. The raw material, consisting of oils and also for the for this cocoa is imported from the tropics. It is prepared by the northern manufacturer and sent in quantity to the consumer. There are no mixed forces, and the regular conditions of climate or made such immense strides and led seed was useless. Today seem the development of the great cotton need in the south, where the de-

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRIES.
Georgia has no great pharmaceutical industries, and yet Georgia buys as many remedies for its life as any other state. Why should not such chemical industries be established here to add to the manufacturing opportunity of this state?

It is well known that Georgia has produced for years some of the finest pottery clays known to the world, and yet the pottery industry of this state never has been developed. It is one of Georgia's neglected opportunities from which great gain might be reaped, but which now yields the state but very little.

Not so many years ago as little was made of Fuller's earth, which is now shipped from central Georgia to all parts of the world. Charles L. Parsons, of Hawkinsville, now chief chemist of the United States bureau of mines, was among the first to see the value of the Fuller's earth in central Georgia, and he began to urge that it be put to good use.

At first the earth which was mined had little worth, and the beginning of this effort to utilize an unused resource seemed futile. But the first failure was followed by complete success—such success that Fuller's earth from central Georgia

SCIENCE OF CHEMISTRY.
In no domain of human knowledge has so much progress been made in the last few years as in the science of chemistry. The chemist has unlocked the secrets of nature. But it is in the application of chemistry to the needs of the world that the greatest progress has been made. The chemist has created a new world of products, and it is in the application of these products to the needs of the world that the greatest progress has been made.

FERTILIZER INDUSTRY.
The rapid growth of the fertilizer industry is an example of the application of chemistry to the needs of the world. The chemist has created a new world of products, and it is in the application of these products to the needs of the world that the greatest progress has been made.

WASTE PILES.
In Ducktown, Tenn., the waste piles from the copper smelters are being manufactured into sulphuric acid, and by this means the cost of commercial fertilizers to the farmer of Georgia has been reduced to a marked extent.

But despite the progress that has been made in the application of chemistry to industry, the south has merely begun upon the development of its resources. For instance, there is no greater problem facing the people of Georgia and the south today than the liberation of potash from feldspar. We have enormous deposits of feldspar, which contain potash sufficient for our requirements for thousands of years. Yet the problem of liberating this potash has not been solved, and we are forced to import from Germany each year millions of dollars' worth of this commodity. But, in view of the great accomplishments of the past, the solution of this problem seems possible, and the manufacturer of the south should be encouraged to encourage and assist chemical research along these lines. In fact, research for the purpose of developing Georgia's industries should be encouraged in every direction. For in no way can the south make a greater progress or reap greater gain than through the application of "industrial chemistry." The time has passed when the purpose of the chemical laboratory is merely to make analyses. Such work is no more than a diagnosis of the problem that is being considered. If the chemist goes no further than to analyze, he has done but a part of his work. Of far more importance is his advice upon the solution of the problem which he is analyzing.

EAT AS YOUR FATHERS ATE

WASHINGTON—Specialists of the department of agriculture, who have been making an extensive study of claims by self-styled "experts in dietetics" as to what American people should eat to preserve their health, have just issued a warning against the false theories so widely exploited.

"If you like raw food better than anything else, eat it; if you like bread and milk twice a day, eat it; if you like to eat in moderation, eat then, and then, as always, eat what you eat in moderation, and that is well cooked."

With regard to the questionable dietary recommendations of these "experts," the statement says: "Some of the advocates of these diets are sincere, but are misled by their own false theories. They are recommending a diet that will carelessly gain by adopting peculiar systems of diet. Neither class can offer any trustworthy advice. In most of the recommendations, of these self-styled 'experts' there is hardly a shadow of reason, though they may seem reasonable."

It is set forth in the statement that there is no justification for laying so much stress on raw foods as is done by a majority of the food faddists. It is asserted that man's chances of health are best when he eats with moderation a diet made up of clean, wholesome, ordinary foods, well prepared in the usual way. The claim is made that as a general proposition raw food is not cleaner than cooked foods, and that proper cooking sterilizes food, and so renders innocuous pathogenic bacteria and other organisms possibly harmful.

BACTERIA DANGER EXAGGERATED.
Combating the theory of the "ex-perients" in many instances that persons should not eat animal foods because meat is alleged to be ill with bacteria, the statement says: "The surface of the meat is not sterile, but the interior is, except in rare cases. We do not eat raw meat, except dried beef, or something similar, but cause it to be cooked, and this sterilizes it. In most cases where people have suffered, or think that they suffered, from eating meat or any other normal animal diet, the trouble has not with the actual article, but either in the imagination of the consumer or in the fact that the food has not been kept clean or handled after it has been cooked."

The public is particularly warned against the danger of curative treatment by mail, the statement saying: "Many of the people who offer dietetic advice for sale undertake to recommend a diet that will cure disease without ever seeing the patient. The average man talking about his ailments frequently imagines the symptoms or describes them so inaccurately that they are not suitable guides to the physician. In many cases incipient serious ailments or local troubles which give no indication of their presence by pain or discomfort are discovered by the physician in his laboratory, and remedied before they can be given any serious character."

"Very few people, indeed, would be able to describe their symptoms accurately, or so accurately that the conscientious physician would feel safe in making a positive diagnosis or a diagnosis trouble and advise a complete remedy purely on the patient's own description of what he believes is a serious condition."

Loss Disease Treatment.
"In cases of serious digestive disturbances sufferers should consult a physician of known ability and known standing in the community. To submit such cases for treatment by mail is as foolish as it would be and highly specialized business trouble to ask some one who had never seen his factory, and knew nothing of his business except the data he could supply in answer to a set of questions, to supply him with a positive remedy at long expense."

In conclusion, the statement urges people not to worry so much about their health, and adds: "These circulars of misinformation about diet find their prey principally among people who are always fancying that they have some complaint. If people remain in good physical condition year after year, and observe no marked change in weight, seem in good health and spirits and are eating any simple and normal mixed diet, they have no need to worry about their food. People can expect to be lighter in weight in summer than in winter. As a person grows older he should eat a less complex and simpler diet. It is often seen that a person forty years of age begins to need a different diet. The reason given for this is that he has grown weaker, and consequently does not need so much food. This is not true. The diet that was required to keep up his energy for more active physical work."

MAN WOULD SLIT SKIRT.
REDDING, CAL.—James W. Redding, Cal., says he got thirty days on the rock pile because he denuded a split gown and went to a hotel where he attempted to flirt with the clerk. The clerk was married and telephoned for the police.

GEORGIA'S DEFENSE IN TIME OF WAR

In time of peace prepare for war.

An old truism, but never more applicable to the United States of America than today. Fifteen years ago the American flag matched its path against the strength of another world power.

Could war clouds suddenly bank about our country and belch forth a red flame, what would happen? What part could Georgia do towards defending the safety and honor of the land which once had such champions as Washington, Anthony Wayne, Andy Jackson and other sturdy servants of a young republic?

What fear of conquest ever darkened the shores of America, has always been of the east. The Yellow Peril, the purple flag, it is against these Marauding Orientals that of late years the sword of America has lain more loose in the scabbard. Save as a unit of the whole, Georgia fears not the extremely phenomenal invasion of the east. The Pacific coast would be the bulwark against which the Mongol forces would struggle.

But as a mere supposition, which part of the United States would a foreign power select as the weakest point of invasion?

VULNERABLE SPOT.

Should such a nation as Germany lose a fleet of vessels against America, it would choose the Atlantic seaboard over the Pacific coast; and the Atlantic seaboard it would find the weakest link in the chain connecting between the tip of Florida and the coast of the Carolina.

If Georgia should wake up some bright autumn morning with the roar of the enemy's guns sounding back from the old red hills, if the good people of Savannah should stare seaward at twenty armored battleships crouched in the harbor in the lapping waves of the Atlantic with a straggling line of warships whipping in the winds, of course some should crash a broadside into the sleeping city—would Georgia lay her cotton fields and her hidden wealth of town and country open to the crush of the invader?

As a matter of fact Georgia would muster five thousand troops in two days to repel the enemy, ten thousand within a week.

And again, such a state of affairs never will or can arise.

An unexpected attack on a modern nation is a hot dream that never can become a reality. Should some other world power and America, certain strained relations and the European plan to divide the globe, they could execute it.

GEORGIA'S DEFENSE.

Georgia's defense is well provided for. The state has a full complement of military forces. The Georgia National Guard is organized in the state. What would he do?

Georgia are stationed at Fort Oglethorpe, a regiment of cavalry, at Fort McPherson, a regiment of infantry, and at Fort Screven, about four companies.

The rest of Georgia's forces are the national guard, the sons of the state, be Georgia's defense in time of war. Its members are home-grown products; they would be fighting with their backs to their own thresholds.

ATLANTA'S FIFTH.

The Fifth regiment of Atlanta is a typical example of the national guard troops, composed of such companies as the Fulton Blues, Marxist rifles, Governor's Horse Guard, Grady cadets and others of their ilk. These soldiers are Atlanta's own boys and men, who would need only the thrust of invasion to heat their patriotism to a white flame.

Under military law the national guard of any state can be sent anywhere within the borders of the United States. Should the Fifth regiment be called upon to subdue rebellious Mexico, it is doubtful if its full quota would go. Perhaps if they should be called to aid in subduing a riot in the state of Oregon, many would be deterrant, although eligible.

But once let a hostile foot be planted on Georgia soil, and the national guard would rise as one man, swelled to the full, with recruits clamoring to join its ranks. These troops are fitted out to perfection. In the auditorium army more it is estimated that $100,000 worth of guns and equipment is stored, all of the latest and best style.

WAR AMONG THE CLOUDS.

One thing Georgia lacks. That is covered over Atlanta, the one-time performance of General Sherman need as a military center. Already Atlanta has been promised a brigade post by the authorities at Washington.

Why not an aerial battery of a company of "winged cadets"? THE SPIRIT TO PATRIOTISM. They would add much to the strength of Georgia's military, already makes its wearer feared. Perhaps, if stars and stripes streaming from their country. They would be a power should the gray hull of an enemy's warship nose its way around Cumberland Island and knock Castle Dungeness into the water with a projectile.

In these days of money-grubbing, patriotism seems a lost virtue, but it would take much less than the hull of a hostile cruiser to forge it into ruddy young cadet corps to Atlanta's old glory. A hint that a foreign country guard would be on the heels of the invader stretched its hands toward the bonny Fifth and the heads of the invader.

OLD PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON FOUND.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—A portrait of George Washington by Rembrandt Peale, which was brought around the Horn in 1845, and is believed to be the only one west of New York, has been dug up by General George Barron of the Gates Gate Park museum.

Troops of the 17th Regiment, commanded by Col. Van Orsdale, are shown here as if engaged in actual warfare. These men form the nucleus of Georgia's defense.

OUR HOUSE in the FUTURE

EDITED by MARION HARLAND

DOING THINGS IN THEIR PLACES.

A GREAT MANY YEARS ago a charming book for girls appeared, entitled "A Place for Everything and Everything in Its Place." Probably many of my middle-aged readers may have read it and recall the story about the disorderly family, who kept all their possessions at loose ends and in the wrong places.

The story is not the subject on which I am writing, but the illustrations are. I am reminded of my own home, where I have a box or a drawer where they are kept.

The form of the story differs, but the lesson of each is the same. There is no place for the things that are not in their proper places, and hence the loss. And every time I read the complaint I wonder why I do not have a box for every thing I own, and a place for every thing I use.

By the time I have found the things I am looking for I have time to do anything else.

There are all kinds of things that mean to me, and I have a place for each one of them.

find your place when you are ready to do it. In my own household there is a box for every thing that is in the way, and I am in the habit of saving scraps from newspapers.

Card System.
I have a card system for my cutlery and my tools. Don't lay them on the table or in your desk or tuck them into a book. If you have a time to use them, there should be a place for you to have peace and comfort. A lady woman with a box, since the index cards are ready found and there is always space to introduce new recipes for the same dish.

But whether you use the for your recipes in a book, or lay them in envelopes or anything else, be invariable in your custom of having always the one place for them, and put them in it. Until you have tried this you will not know how much time and worry and annoyance it will save you and others.

Recipes are not the only thing for which there should be a place. If you wish to have peace and comfort, a lady woman with a box, since the index cards are ready found and there is always space to introduce new recipes for the same dish.

town, and when the cold weather arrives I do not have to waste any consideration on my receipts. There they are in that drawer which has held them every summer for years. With them are my savings bank book and one or two similar possessions which are not used every day or every week, but which I want immediately when I want them at all.

I want the same plan in other ways, and you will be surprised at the saving it means to you of thought and worry. I take it for granted that you have a drawer or a box for your patterns, and another for the contents of the package to the string with which the parcel or box is tied. What the wrap or the thin frock or the heavy underwear is needed in he fall there is no frenzied hunting through a dozen bundles to find what is in demand. There is its name and address, so to speak, ready to your hand. Likewise I mark the boxes in which summer dresses and undergarments are put, and returned quickly one day to them in a trunk a lot of the things it contains in written out clearly and neatly, fastened with thumb tacks on the inside of

Granted that it is a little more bother at first, doesn't the scheme pay for itself in the long run? I have a friend who goes so far that she not only has hanger on every waist and skirt and frock she owns, but has the habit of invariably putting each one on the same hook in the closet. She is a neat woman, and her children, too—so a system? I would rather be a neat woman to a habit which saves me work and Nearly every housekeeper worth the name has a system of this kind in her kitchen, and can put her hand at once on the caddy with the tea or coffee or sugar, can reach for the frying pan or the double boiler or the strainer or anything else of the sort the need of the moment requires. It is much more trouble to guard this orderliness into other parts of the home and apply it to clothes, to pieces, to newspaper cuttings, to books—to anything else. Try it and see.

Put Away for Good.
During a long life I have known a few people with a remarkable memory for the things they have put away. I recollect one man who was asked for a paper from his desk, and he produced it at once. No confusion would meditate for an instant—no longer—and then reach it and draw out of the pile up more just the things wanted. But he was a wonderful exception and I put him aside along with those librarians who know the number of books as soon as they hear its name. There are not enough of them to furnish an argument against my plan for others.

On the other hand, we have all of us seen, and know countless examples of the other sort of thing.

When my mother says she she'll put away a thing safely, I know that she'll never find it again. I heard a man say of his wife, she always saves her things in it as he called to her and to the rest of us. "I know it is somewhere in it," she would say, and she would go to it. "I'll put away myself and it is entirely safe." It is only the man's habit that counts.

I was reminded of the old woman who declared the tea set to be lost—she had been in the dark, because it was in a box in the well! My friend's possession did her little good, but she did it well.

Some women are born orderly, some achieve orderliness, others have orderliness forced upon them by the necessity of saving time and effort which lack of orderliness takes from them. The persons who are born with a tendency to put things in place have little patience for understanding of those who were made up without the help of tidiness, and the "risky," "old maidish," and harsher names.

What difference does it make if I don't keep my room looking right and leave my things in a state of confusion? It is entirely "It hurts no one but myself."

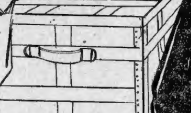

"That might be the case with him, but when the women at the head of the table yields to a weakness for untidiness she not only makes her own life miserable, but sets an example to her children which is bound to harm now and in the future, but she establishes a habit of disorderly living which will be a source of trouble to her through life, and she will run through and injure her whole character."

ONLY ONE WOMAN EVER HANGED IN GEORGIA

SCENE OF THE CRIME

COURTHOUSE WHERE SENTENCE WAS PASSED

PLACE OF EXECUTION

QUAINT LITTLE JAIL IN WHICH SUSAN EBERHART WAS IMPRISONED

LAW make no difference between men and women in the punishment of crime. But the law of public opinion has created the conviction of only one woman in Georgia. Her punishment was brought to mind by the trial of Mrs. Edna Perkins Goode, and was much discussed when Goode was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of her husband and his wife.

The one exception in the criminal records of the state was the execution of Susan Eberhart, who was indicted in 1872 in Webster county with Joseph P. Spann for the murder of Susan's wife. She was hanged without delay, but the trial was long drawn out by appeals and petitions for mercy. Finally citizens of the community felt she had been done wrong and she was unwilling to interfere with the decision of the courts, and the sentence passed was put into effect.

Before the day of execution plans were laid for her rescue by a party of men who had been in the attention of the head-headed men without effect in saving her from death. But even until she was executed in the county where she was born.

INMATE CRIME.
It was the crime for which she was hanged that had been most infamous in the history of the state. It was the crime which was the subject of the trial on May 1, 1872, when Susan Eberhart and Joseph P. Spann were seen together at the house in Webster county, at the back of the house was found the body of the woman who had been hanged under her pillow. At the time the house was found to have been the home of the woman who had been hanged under her pillow.

NIGHT OF THE MURDER.
She was awakened at midnight by the knocking at the door, and opened the door to find him standing on the threshold with a piece of rope in his hands.

"You'll have it over with now," he said. "No more waiting. Come along." She followed into the yard, which was dark because clouds hid all but a rim of the moon. Spann walked solemnly up the steps with no notice to conceal his approach from his wife. She entered the hallway, and he followed her into the room where she was sleeping. He had determined to have the murder done with and to do it when he had it himself, which the crime could be concealed.

During the month and a half that he had thought of the murder, he had devised a plan for the execution of the crime. He had shown only brutality.

Followed by the girl whom he was to marry when he had it himself, he entered the room where she was sleeping. He had determined to have the murder done with and to do it when he had it himself, which the crime could be concealed.

"Society demands that crime shall be punished and criminals warned, and the fatal humanity that starts and shudders when the axe of justice is ready to strike is a dangerous element for the peace of society. We have had too much of this mercy. It only looks to the criminal, but we must insist upon mercy to society, upon justice to the poor woman whose blood cries out for vengeance. These criminals go unpunished is a disgrace to our civilization, and we have reaped the fruits of it in the frequency with which bloody deeds occur. A stern, unbending, unflinching administration of the criminal laws, without regard to position or sex, as it is the highest mark of civilization, is also the surest mode to prevent the commission of offenses."

SLEPT SEVERAL HOURS.
Susan Eberhart returned to bed and slept for several hours. Then she was awakened by Spann who said that she must leave, for that, if he stayed, he would assuredly be hanged. She took her leave with a handkerchief, who stood beside Spann, stopped the cries of the wife by covering her eyes with her hands.

Spann slipped the noose of a rope about his wife's head, and with the girl looking on, drew the rope tight.

SHORT WHILE LATER.
Susan Eberhart was hanged upon the edge of the cemetery at Preston, beneath a tall pine tree.

CAPTURED IN ALABAMA.
The girl told of how she had come to love Spann and had agreed to marry him if he would put his wife out of the way. He answered that, if no other obstacle interfered, he was to their marriage could be made smooth.

The two began to lay plans for the murder, but circumstances caused several changes in their designs. They first decided, in a cool, deliberate way, that they could best destroy the wife, but the girl's courage failed and the man's good judgment suggested that other means of execution would be better. Next, they thought of executing her in the night to the cow-pen near the house, and of putting her out of the way. But again the girl's heart failed, and she asked Spann to put the thought of murder out of his mind.

For the next few days he said nothing more to her of the crime which he had planned during a month and a half, turning it over and over in his thoughts, considering it with the same care and shrewdness as though it were a problem of business. But his delay was merely the forewarning of a quick decision put at once into effect.

At the house, the girl still barefooted, both looking back occasionally with fearful eyes. They went on foot for over 100 miles. But pursuit was swifter than their flight; and less than two weeks had passed before each was in prison and under indictment for murder.

A change then seemed to come about in the girl, who had lent her aid in a pitiless murder. She made friends with the children who passed the little boarded jail at Preston, Ga., on their way to and from school, and the made pets of the birds which flew about the jail and even the mice who concealed themselves beneath the flooring.

Sympathy began to be felt for her; public opinion began to hold that she was led into the crime. But with this belief the supreme court had no patience. In denying a petition for a new trial, the court stated: "The prisoner admitted that she had held the handkerchief over the mouth of Mrs. Spann during a part of the horrible tragedy. It was a fearful deed, and she who stood by, aiding, even with her woman's hand, the man who had strangled her whom he had sworn to love and protect, is just as guilty as he. The stopping of the poor victim's cries with the handkerchief is just as much a part of the act as the tightening of the rope."

WORLD'S MODERN SEVENTH WONDER

BY GERTRUDE M. PRICE.
One of the modern seven wonders of the world is a large moving picture plant. A trip around and through it is an education, an entertainment and a revelation. It is a thoroughly up-to-date world of its own; a wonderful combination of unique artistic and mechanical devices for the manufacture of a screen play.

It would take days to become thoroughly acquainted with all the departments of a big picture plant. But I am going to tell you a little about some of the things you will see in a single visit to one of the important concerns who are supplying "movies" to the public.

In the first place, if you have never seen a "movie" plant you will probably be astonished to note the financial investment in its general buildings and exterior accessories. The lobby plant has three distinct buildings as well as other lesser ones. The best includes the large offices of the firm; the public dining rooms for players; the scenario departments; the storerooms, etc.

The second, one through which an outsider may go only by special permission, houses the mechanical department, where it is possible to follow the life of a film from the time it leaves the camera man's machine until it is ready for shipment. Unless a person has seen it for themselves, they could never believe the work attached to this process. The amount of expensive machinery used, or the number of workers employed.

There are the developing rooms, the drying rooms, the testing rooms, the matching rooms and the exhibition rooms. The dark room, where the developing is done, is a smooth place through which you are taken by a guide. The employees work over their films by the aid of shaded electric lights, the room itself is as black as night. You cannot see your hand before your face. In this big building there is also the great and curious property shop where almost anything in the way of a "property" can be found in very, very short notice. There is furniture of all ages; stenosis of every nation and costume of all countries. Across the well-kept grounds is the immense glass daylight studio where it is possible to put on any number of interiors at the same time under natural light. A part of the building is fitted up with a remarkable set of artificial lights under the direction of a thoroughly experienced electrician and his helpers, where scenes can be made when there isn't any sunlight.

In the upper picture of this group you will see a reproduction of one of the interiors which was taken in the daylight studio. Joseph Smiley, one of the directors, is giving a few final instructions to the camera man before the machine begins to record the scene. Arthur V. Johnson is kneeling in the foreground. The players usually rehearse a scene two or three times, the director calling to them, suggesting improvements, facial expressions and dialogue to suit the situation. Then he shouts, "Ready!" The camera man starts, the director holds his stop watch and away they go. If the scene has taken too long for action is measured by feet and seconds in a "movie" play—called complete, and the rehearsal begins for another. Quite often the last scene is acted first and the players work nothing of the story of the picture except as they are told at the minute.

Maybe the next scene requires rugged outdoor background which can only be reached by automobiles and possibly by rail. Then a set of actors, camera man and director. Occasionally "retakes" are necessary. But if there are many of these, the director is held responsible and goes out to seek another job. Sometimes a picture costs $5,000. So a "retake" is a mighty big loss to the producer.

And that's the way it is done.

Dr. Whitlock a "Come Back"

(Special Correspondence.)
TOLEDO, O.—"Yes, sir, I'm a 'come back.' That's it. I feel just like an old fire horse that's been on pasture for a time. I'm anxious to get back into the harness."

It was the Rev. E. D. Whitlock, father of Brand Whitlock, of Toledo, who spoke. After forty years of active service in the ministry, Dr. Whitlock retired two years ago following a long period of illness. At the Methodist conference at Urbana last week he was assigned as pastor of the Spring Street M. E. church here.

"I began my ministry in 1873 in Darke county, O.," reminded Dr. Whitlock. "At the time my circuit embraced five different churches of the log variety. Some Sundays I preached three times. The nearest church to my home was eleven miles. I used to make the trips on horseback—that is, when my parishioners were generous—but a great deal of my traveling was done on foot."

In the upper picture of this group you will see a reproduction of one of the interiors which was taken in the daylight studio.

Maybe the next scene requires rugged outdoor background which can only be reached by automobiles and possibly by rail. Then a set of actors, camera man and director.

And that's the way it is done.

This Week at the Theaters

If the shows at local play-houses this week are half attractive as their names, the Atlanta theater public will dine luxuriously in pleasure-loving appetite.

A hurried glance over the titles posted on billboards around the city makes the poor citizen frown heavily the saloons from the coal hill and the dentist bill and the winter clothes bill and wish he rather hadn't attended those two world's series matches.

For the titles are indeed alluring. "The Grain of Dust" at the Atlanta, "The Yellow Peril" sketch at the Forsyth, "The Last Days of Pompeii" at the Grand. They promise much. And the ever-dramatic Bijou crowns the pudding with "The Lights of Gotham."

The lyric alone holds out no cutting caprice and this adds a touch of mystery to the program. The management, while not yet ready to announce the offering for this week, declares that it will be a worthy one. What possibilities!

HACKETT THE HERO.
The name of the Atlanta play is equalled only by that of him who plays it. James K. Hackett has been a stranger to Atlanta for no few years. Since the Atlanta theater was built his bookings have not brought him hither, but those who remember him of old in such plays as "The Crisis" will welcome his appearance in "The Grain of Dust."

Many Atlantians have read "The Grain of Dust," first when it was run serially in the Saturday Evening Post, later in book form. They know it for a strong work, one of the latest and greatest to come from the pen of the late David Graham Phillips. It should be ideally suited to an actor of Mr. Hackett's type.

James K. who was popularly crowned with the "mainline idols" and was shipped of the John Drew management, crowded the doors of a local "movie" theater here by appearing in a "Prisoner of Zenda" film. He is certain to double the crowds when he substitutes himself for the screen hero next Friday and Saturday.

MUSICAL COMEDY AND OPERA COMING.

While for the first four days of this week the Atlanta theater will be dark, the week following the Hackett appearance will be checked from Monday to Saturday. And a good variety too, from the ridiculous to the sublime. It is "Mutt and Jeff" in Panama, a land that, according to musical comedy, is loaded with nothing but racines and comedians, instead of work and love and various insouciance, that comes the first part of the week; an English opera company presenting "Salome" comes the latter part.

MOVIES AT THE GRAND.
Atlantians had the opportunity of seeing a production of "The Last Days of Pompeii" several years ago at a local movie theater, but with the wonders that the producers have made in the film world since then, the George Kibbe production at the Grand this week is certain to be bigger and better in every way. The successful treatment of the moving picture on "legitimate drama" has become the subject of much deep and anxious thought among theatrical managers, and Atlantians are causing not a little of it. Many of them are certain to travel Grandward this week.

WHAT THE PRESS AGENTS SAY.
The press agent surely should know as much about his show as anyone in the world. He's paid to find out the best points in it, anyway, and should there happen to be none, fake a few. So the press agent's view is given. These are the kind of alluring panegyrics he pays a stenographer ten cents a page to pound out.

GRAIN OF DUST.
The Atlanta will be dark until Friday and Saturday. Then James K. Hackett will come with his new play, "The Grain of Dust," which was dramatized from the famous story which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post and was later published in book form. This story gives the noted star wonderful opportunities, and he takes full advantage of each, the result being a play and a performance which pleases all classes of theatergoers.

The dramatization of the book was made by Louis Ryan Shipman and is said to be the best book play since the days of "The Christian" and "The Crisis." Mr. Hackett appeared in the latter play, and it stands as one of the memorable productions of his career of successes.

In "The Grain of Dust," David Graham Phillips wrote the finest novel of his career and its adaptability to the stage was manifest long before the conclusion was reached in serial form. Mr. Hackett secured the playing rights, early recognizing the character of the hero as one particularly fitting to him.

In the play Mr. Hackett is surrounded by a company of class. A. A. Duke, well known in Atlanta in a leading role is David Higgins, who has appeared here in his own play, "His Last Dollar." Other members of the cast measure up to the highest standard and the production will be very much in the nature of a big social event. Seats go on sale Monday morning.

AT THE FORTYTH.
Nine Morris and company, in a new idea dramatic playlet called "The Yellow Peril" will be the head-line feature at the Forsyth this week. Miss Morris is one of the most distinguished of the stars who has come into vaudeville and received a welcome that will continue her in this branch of the profession.

George Felix and the Barry Girls will offer a combination of comedy and music that will be one of the features of the week. George Felix is one of the cleverest character actors in the profession. He has appeared with real success in farce and musical comedy and in vaudeville. Winch and Fours in "No Trespassing" will present an unusual vaudeville offering. They are versatile and clever and Miss Fours is one of the prettiest girls in the profession.

A special feature will be the appearance of Herzog's horses, the best trained in vaudeville. Russ Herzog selected his horses in Russia. They are all thoroughbreds and present an act that unless inferior to the best. There is no other act like this in vaudeville and it will be a feature that will prove its drawing value. Burley and Burley, the character comedians, will offer their new idea, "The Scot and the Duke" and Carl and Ethel, European dancing novelty, will be another attraction that will make the Forsyth offering one of unusual quality.

AT THE GRAND.
A revelation in photo drama from the standpoint of art and beauty, as well as dramatic force, is made in George Kibbe's magnificent production of "The Last Days of Pompeii," adapted from Lord Dunsany's classic romantic novel of the same title, which is announced for six nights at the Grand, commencing Monday, October 13, with matinees twice daily at 2 and 4 p. m., and the two slight performances at 7 and 9 p. m.

The full length figure and the group of two at the top of the page show the leading characters in "The Last Days of Pompeii" which is to be shown in moving pictures at the Grand. The third photograph is of Nina Morris, one of the headliners at the Forsyth.

In the photo drama, as in the novel, these characters are woven into a story of marvelous dramatic interest and pictorial beauty. Matinee prices 25 cents for the entire house; night prices 20 cents and 50 cents. "LIGHTS OF GOTHAM." The Jewell Kelley company has met with success during its seven weeks' run at the Bijou. Each week the attendance has shown an increase. For the eighth week of the indefinite engagement of this company the management announces the scenic melodrama, "Monday night at Gotham," telling the story of the workings of a gang of outsiders performances at 8:30.

who make their home in the dens of the Bowery. Eddie Black, Earl Higley, Jewell Kelley, Marie Claire and Rose Morris, and in fact every member of the company will have splendid parts, and the production as a whole promises to be one of the most satisfying of the Jewell Kelley engagement. Monday night will be ladies' free night. Matinees are given daily at 2:30 and night performances at 8:30.
