JUDGE FITE AGAIN SCORES APPELLATE COURT DECISION

Declares Court Should Either Be Abolished or Some New Judges Selected for This Bench

Judge Augustus W. Fite, of the Cherokee circuit, who was recently fined $500 for contempt by the state court of appeals because of his published criticisms of decisions rendered by that tribunal, takes another shot at the court in a signed card which he has sent to The Journal for publication.

As in the former instance Judge Fite takes exception to the fact that the court of appeals reversed this case. The case out of which the contempt proceedings grew was that of a negro who had been found guilty of attempted murder of a white woman. The present case involves a conviction for perjury.

WILL MASON AGAIN HEAD POLICE BOARD BY SPECIAL ACT?

Failure of New Charter Means That Dominant Figure in Police Board Will Be Ineligible for Re-Election

FRIENDS ALREADY BUSY TO REPEL ORDINANCE

They Will Endeavor to Adopt Ordinance, Making It Possible for Him to Be Chosen, Mason Noncommittal

The term of Carlos H. Mason, chairman of the board of police commissioners, expires on the first Monday in March of next year, and under the present law he is not eligible for re-election for one term.

Had the proposed new charter passed at last Wednesday's election, a board of public safety, an entirely new board, would have taken the place of the police board on the first of next year, and Mr. Mason would have been eligible, and undoubtedly would have been elected to new board.

Now, however, Mr. Mason cannot be elected to the board of which he has been the dominant figure for the past five years, unless council passes an ordinance allowing members of the police board to serve for three consecutive terms.

When Mr. Mason completed his first year's term there was in force a law limiting the service on the members of the board to one term.

At that time the limit was imposed by the city charter. Mr. Mason's friends set to work with the result that they passed a charter amendment which would fix the length of service of police board members, and then they passed an ordinance through council in order to have the board re-elected.

Mr. Mason's friends are on the job, and have been busy for some time with the result that they have secured the passage of an ordinance through council in order to have the board re-elected.

Should an ordinance increasing the number of terms to be served by police commissioners be passed, it is probable that it would be vetoed by Mayor James C. Woodward, but he has a number of times overridden the mayor's veto.

The completion of the police board may change considerably at the reorganization in March. With the chairman, the terms of four other commissioners, R. Jones, of the Ninth ward; R. C. Clark, of the Eighth ward; and J. N. McEachern, of the Seventh ward, are expiring.

Wife of William H. Yeaton Gets Maiden Name Restored and Is Married to Minister

Her New Husband, Formerly of Macon, Faces Charges Before Presbyterian Church Board in Texas -- Was Formerly Miss Lillian Phillips. Told Husband of Other Man Before Leaving -- Was Married to Mr. Yeaton When 18 Years Old

Dispatches to The Journal last night from Fort Worth, Tex., tell of the marriage of an Atlanta young woman to a young Presbyterian minister, formerly of Macon, after she had obtained divorce from her first husband, when she married when eighteen years old. Her maiden name was restored when she married the new minister.

The minister has been summoned before his church board because of the affair.

All Atlantians who figured in the drama are Mr. and Mrs. William Hall Yeaton and the minister is Rev. Lloyd R. Field. Mr. Yeaton is the credit man for the International Agricultural Corporation of this city and has an apartment at 17 West Cain street.

Rev. Mr. Field, who formerly was pastor of several small Presbyterian churches at Macon, was early last April called to the pastorate of the Presbyterian church at Clark, Ark.

Before he left Macon he visited Atlanta and a mutual friend introduced him to Mrs. Yeaton at a soda fountain.

An immediate attachment grew up between the minister and Mrs. Yeaton. Mr. Yeaton knew nothing of his wife's acquaintance with the minister until after the latter had gone to Arkansas.

One day in the early part of last April, he says, his wife confided to him that she was in love with Rev. Mr. Field and announced her intention to go on a visit to an uncle in Fort Worth.

Mr. Yeaton says he was deeply grieved and shocked, but feeling that there had been no misconduct between his wife and the minister he agreed to let her go to Texas, hoping that after mature reflection she would reconsider. He states that he accompanied her to the train, bought her a ticket, gave her money, kissed her good-by, and that from cities along the way he got newspaper articles which he sent her in telegrams; that she again visited him after her arrival at Fort Worth and later wrote him encouraging letters.

Mr. Yeaton continued to correspond with his wife and sent her liberal sums of money, says Mr. Yeaton, "two or three months after she went away I learned through a woman friend of hers that she did not intend to return to me and I should not endeavor to hold my wife against her will. However, I continued to write her and she had no objection to do nothing that would bring unhappiness to both herself and to me."

"On September 1st I received a letter from my wife's attorney requesting me to waive service on the divorce suit. After thinking it over and deciding that I should not endeavor to hold my wife against her will, I decided to waive service and to do nothing that would bring unhappiness to both herself and to me."

McNAUGHTON'S DEATH SENTENCE COMMUTED TO PRISON FOR LIFE

State's Executive in Proclamation Extending Clemency States His Belief in Physician's Guilt

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE RESPONSIBLE FOR DECISION

Convicted of Slaying Fred Flanders—Dr. McNaughton's Execution Has Been Stayed for Years

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 27.—"I am extremely disappointed," said Dr. McNaughton, when told of the governor's decision. "I had confidently expected a commutation of my sentence. I feel no resentment or bitterness against those who are responsible for my condition and have persecuted, rather than persecuted me."

"I will begin my sentence without a day's delay. I have long since reached the point where I have no secret in my mind. I am glad to go to a final judgment before my Lord and Master. I know He will clear me, and He is the only one I have ever feared."

The prisoner himself, probably the most disappointed man at the outcome of the McNaughton case, is Rev. W. J. McNaughton. Dr. McNaughton did not pretend to dispute his feelings as the report from Atlanta, he said he was disappointed that the governor had not been influenced by the enemies of Dr. McNaughton.

"I shall hear a great deal of this case in the state of Georgia as time passes," said Dr. McNaughton, "but I will not credit the credit of the executive."

Dr. W. J. McNaughton was sentenced to death on Oct. 24 for the murder of Fred Flanders, of Emanuel county. He will be hanged at the outcome. He must spend the remainder of his life in the state penitentiary.

Dr. McNaughton's sentence was commuted to life imprisonment Saturday afternoon by Governor Slaton, after a two weeks' review of the record in the famous murder case. Governor Slaton has since commuted the sentence of the governor for about three years.

In the announcement of the commutation, Dr. McNaughton's sentence was commuted to life imprisonment, Governor Slaton states that in his opinion the evidence against the doctor was not sufficient to justify a death sentence. He also stated that it was all of a more or less circumstantial nature and that expert testimony offered since the trial had shown that the doctor had not pressed the fallibility of human judgment.

"Human life is sacred," declares the governor. "His protection is the highest function of the state. It is the duty of an officer sworn to enforce it, to prevent the execution of a man condemned criminal as well as to his execution. It is the duty of the state to protect the life of a man who has been found guilty of a crime."

The following brief resume of the case is given by the governor in the preface to the governor's proclamation commutating the sentence of Dr. McNaughton.

RESUME OF RECORD. W. J. McNaughton was found guilty of the murder of Fred Flanders, of Emanuel county, on October 24, 1910. The supreme court of the state of Georgia, in its decision on the appeal, affirmed the conviction of the lower court, and the sentence of death was carried out.

An extraordinary motion for new trial was made, but before the case could be reached, the judgment of the lower court was affirmed by the supreme court, one of the judges dissenting on the ground that the evidence was legally insufficient. A writ of error to the supreme court of the United States was granted, but before the case could be reached, the judgment of the lower court was affirmed by the supreme court, one of the judges dissenting on the ground that the evidence was legally insufficient.

The wife of Fred Flanders was jointly indicted with Dr. McNaughton, and application for executive clemency was made for her. Governor Brown declined until the case of Dr. Flanders be disposed of. An entry of nolle prosequi was entered against her on August 10, 1913. The supreme court of the United States was granted, but before the case could be reached, the judgment of the lower court was affirmed by the supreme court, one of the judges dissenting on the ground that the evidence was legally insufficient.

TARIFF BILL TO PASS MINUS COTTON FUTURE

Leaders Think It Unlikely That Cotton Futures Tax Can Be Settled

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 27.—The feasibility of the tariff conference to agree with reference to the cotton futures tax will be reflected in the report which is believed tonight by persons supposed to be familiar with the temper of congress. As a result, the tariff bill will become law without any provision relating to cotton exchange, and the whole question will be made the subject of legislation at the regular session of congress.

It is regarded as certain that the Smith-Lever plan for regulating the cotton exchange will be accepted by the Senate. Leader Underwood incorporated the plan in a bill which he introduced in the house as a basis of speedy action. The only element of doubt in the attention has to do with the future of the Senate. An effort will be made to amend the Senate to accept the Smith-Lever plan, but Senator Simmons expressed his opinion that the bill would be killed. He added that the house would finally vote on the Smith-Lever plan and that the bill would be some law without any provision relating to cotton futures.

Senator Clarke, of Arkansas, author of the original cotton futures bill, declined to indicate what his attitude would be in connection with the Smith-Lever plan, but he intimated very strongly that he would not support it. It is of importance enough to justify and demand his consideration by someone as a distinct question. He stated that, while interested in the success of the original cotton futures bill, he would not support it. He stated that he would not support it. He stated that he would not support it.

M'NAUGHTON'S DEATH SENTENCE COMMUTED TO PRISON FOR LIFE

EVIDENCE SUBMITTED.—The jury heard the testimony of the governor and the medical officers. The governor said that it was his duty to sign the death sentence. He added that the house would finally vote on the Smith-Lever plan and that the bill would be some law without any provision relating to cotton futures.

Senator Clarke, of Arkansas, author of the original cotton futures bill, declined to indicate what his attitude would be in connection with the Smith-Lever plan, but he intimated very strongly that he would not support it. It is of importance enough to justify and demand his consideration by someone as a distinct question.

Senator Hammond after a consultation with John T. West and Hamilton Phillips, attorneys for Zachry, and E. D. Dunbar, attorney for Mrs. Zachry, excluded everyone from the court room except those directly connected with the case. Only one officer of the court, Deputy Sheriff Phillips, was permitted to remain.

GEORGIA TEACHERS WANT TO SEEK ORGANIZATION

So Declares Alabama State Auditor, Declaring That Many Are Getting Places

(Special Dispatch to The Journal) MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 27.—Georgia teachers according to Alabama and accepting positions in schools because Georgia has not paid their salaries promptly, according to Brooks Smith, state auditor. "Georgia has been putting off paying its teachers for several months and many of them are accepting positions in other states," Mr. Smith today said. "Alabama has been able to meet all its obligations promptly and this is an indication that the same is necessary in this case."

The only element of doubt in the attention has to do with the future of the Senate. An effort will be made to amend the Senate to accept the Smith-Lever plan, but Senator Simmons expressed his opinion that the bill would be killed. He added that the house would finally vote on the Smith-Lever plan and that the bill would be some law without any provision relating to cotton futures.

LAW ENFORCEMENT BILLS REMOVED FROM CALENDAR

Turbulent Extra Session of Tennessee Legislature Comes to Close

(By Associated Press.) NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 27.—The turbulent extra session of the Tennessee general assembly ended late tonight with three of the so-called law enforcement bills still on the calendar of the house. These bills, designed to make less difficult the enforcement of laws against the liquor traffic, were the subject of debate during several closing days of the session, and by a filibuster conducted by "regular" Democrats were prevented from coming to a vote of the house after they had been passed by the senate.

The only element of doubt in the attention has to do with the future of the Senate. An effort will be made to amend the Senate to accept the Smith-Lever plan, but Senator Simmons expressed his opinion that the bill would be killed. He added that the house would finally vote on the Smith-Lever plan and that the bill would be some law without any provision relating to cotton futures.

Mr. Hancock's Record in the City Council Voted Several Times Against Electing City Officials by the People

A LETTER has been sent to the Voters of the City by Mr. W. L. Hancock, candidate for Alderman from the Eighth Ward, in which he takes credit for many things done by the General Council during his extended service in that body.

The record of a public official is always a legitimate subject of discussion when the official offers for re-election. Therefore, we call attention to some specific votes by Mr. Hancock which are not mentioned in his letter.

The Executive committee ordered a vote on the question of electing the City Clerk, Marshal and other officials by the people. Mr. John S. Owens was a member of this committee and voted FOR it.

In this election the people voted over 6,000 to 900 that these officials should be elected by popular vote.

A resolution was introduced in Council to amend the Charter and carry out the decision of the people. A motion was made to lay it on the table. Mr. Hancock voted YES. (Minutes of Council No. 21, Page 699). Various motions were made to strike from the list several officials named by vote of the people. Mr. Hancock voted TO STRIKE each one proposed. (Minutes of Council No. 21, Page 708).

Throughout the whole fight Mr. Hancock voted in favor of all motions to delay or to defeat the expressed decision of the people in the election held on the subject. (Minutes of Council No. 22, Pages 63, 66 and 427).

The people finally won their fight, and these officials are now elected by popular vote, but it was OVER the vote of Mr. Hancock.

Now, Mr. Voter, if Mr. Hancock, when last in Council, refused to carry out your will, as expressed at the ballot box, can you expect him to carry out your will, if he is put back in Council, whether you hold an election on the subject, or simply expect it to him in person. He has shown a contempt for the people, even when they acted and voted together all in one mind. How can he now ask the same people to re-elect him as their REPRESENTATIVE. A representative is a man who represents. He did not do it. You cannot now expect him to do it. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Mr. John S. Owens has never been in politics. He is not lined up with any faction. He will put up some "new blood" into our City government. He is an active, successful business man. He is the kind of man the people are always saying they want in Council. Now is the chance to get SUCH A MAN!

JOHN S. OWENS Campaign Committee.

YOUR HAIR NEEDS PARISIAN SAGE

Use It as a Tonic-Banish Dandruff-Stop Falling Hair and Scalp Itch

Parisian Sage is a delightful and invigorating hair tonic. It gently penetrates into the scalp, gets to the roots of the hair, removes dandruff, and supplies the scalp with just the kind of nourishment it needs to make it grow abundantly and shining.

Parisian Sage has had an immense sale and here are the reasons why it is not injurious to the hair or scalp. It removes dandruff with an application of the tonic.

It stops falling hair and itching of the scalp. It cleanses, cools and invigorates the scalp. It makes hair that is thin, dull, matted or stringy, soft, abundant and radiates with every available source. I believe it my duty to do what the Judge and jury would do in this case.

Parisian Sage is delicately perfumed with the finest essences and comes in fifty-cent bottles at drug stores or direct from the manufacturer.

Get a bottle now—at once. Tuck a little into the scalp—you will be surprised to find that it is so easy to use. Pronounce Parisian Sage the best, most pleasant and most effective hair tonic made. Be sure you get Parisian Sage. (Adv.)

FEED FEED

LISTEN, POULTRY RAISERS! FROM reading poultry journals...

It is in the last year a good many who have attempted to get rich quick...

By raising fancy birds and eggs at fancy prices have failed in their efforts...

and have quit the poultry business. It seems evident from the statistics...

that the commercial side of the poultry business is just waiting and is here to stay...

High priced feed and pork is making it necessary for the farmers as well as the family on a town lot to raise poultry...

especially so they may have fresh eggs. Now there is no doubt that the hen either on the farm or on the town lot will pay if kept free of insects...

and fed correctly, and to feed correctly you must feed the necessary ingredients...

required to make the eggs. If you do not feed the hen on any one day...

she will lay, and in addition to feeding the right kind of food, you must know that your feed per hen is not costing you more than you can sell the eggs for...

Strength of Union Pacific and Reading Had Little Influence

Trading Was Light, and With These Options the Stock Market Closed With Prices of Active Stocks Little Altered

(By Associated Press.) NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—With the exception of leading and Union Pacific, which had gains of about a point, the stock market closed today with prices of the active stocks little altered. Trading was light and the closing of the market ranged slightly. The market was down last week, and the active stocks were down from 10 to 15 points. It afforded an opportunity for week-end covering, which was the main factor in the slow recovery which set in. Early losses were made up in many cases, though another factor was the upward trend of the stock market, which resulted in a slight decline for many of the active stocks.

INTERESTING NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE MARKETS

Weather Reports, Crop Advises, Expert Opinions and Newspaper Comment

(By Associated Press.) NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—There was a general bullish excitement in cotton markets today and new high records were established on all positions, with October contracts selling as high as 11.10, while December, 10.90, or 31 1/2 points below the low level of only a little more than a month ago. Expectations of a very bullish October were strengthened by the report of a Chicago authority placing the condition of the crop at 61.5 comparing with its report of 48.4 last year. The official condition a month ago was 65.2, and about the government's figure next Thursday show as big a falling off. The government's private estimate, it would make the October condition around 61 per cent, or the lowest yet on record with the slight exception of 1909, when the October bureau was 55.5 per cent. The yield of 1911 was 61.1. Bullish sentiment also seemed to be encouraged by reports of a heavy rain-fall in the cotton belt, particularly in the official forecasts for cotton. The official forecasts for cotton, however, were not so low as expected, the weekly reviews of the dry goods trade and the continued steadiness of the market being maintained.

Report That Canadian Tariffs Not to Be Disturbed Caused Rise

Wheat Traders Who Had Sold Short Stamped to Cover on Advances that the Duties Would Not Be Removed for Several Months

(By Associated Press.) CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—What was alleged to be authentic advice that Canadian duties would not be removed after the meeting of parliament in the spring caused a decided rally in wheat prices today. The market, which at first had been depressed, closed firm 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 cents above last week's close. A gain of 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 cents, and provisions finished irregular, varying from 2 cents decline to an advance of 1/2 cent.

Wheat traders who had oversold stamped to cover as soon as they heard from Ottawa that there was good authority for the report that the Canadian tariff would not be disturbed for six or seven months. That this buying flurry set in, the market was unexpectably heavy. The rally was due to reports from the spring crop. It was said the railroad yield around Illinois would be considerable. It was also said that available stocks at Chicago and North Dakota were full of surplus wheat to be moved.

In regard to Canadian duties the accepted version in the wheat pit was that Ottawa's attitude was not likely to change. In view of this news prices advanced in the market. Settlements at the end of the week were within 1/8 of the previous close.

Liberal deliveries on September contracts were full of surplus wheat. The market was quiet on the morning of the 27th. Liberal deliveries on September contracts were full of surplus wheat. The market was quiet on the morning of the 27th.

UPS AND DOWNS CONTINUE TURPENTINE MARKET

Market Fluctuated During Past Week Two Extremes

SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 27.—While there continues in the general naval stores circles of Savannah reports of a pessimistic nature regarding the inability of the producing world to make up the comparative low price, turpentine continued to move freely at Savannah.

The week closing yesterday found the articles between 23 and 32 cents, fluctuating from one extreme to the other during the seven days, but at the close yesterday a more satisfactory basis of values in the nature of an apparent compromise was quoted and a fair volume of trading was done with the article ruling at 28 to 31 1/2 cents.

Because of the apparent uncertainty with which business was handled in the past week, the market was quiet for a number of days. The market was quiet for a number of days.

SOUTH FINEST FIELD FOR BREEDING BEEF Climate, Lack of Fever Tick and Cattle Records Boom This Section

The Wall Street Journal says: Enough has been said to prove the existence of an alarming shortage of beef cattle. To allow depletion to go unchecked must ultimately mean a meat famine. The remedy, of course, lies in increasing the supply, but the vital question is how that is to be done.

What better breeding lands could be asked for than in the south? Between Virginia and Louisiana are millions of acres of good well-watered lands that carry cattle. Climatic conditions would carry the carrying cost less than in the north.

The census valuation looks as if a large part of the southern stock is in the "scrub," of which even New York and Pennsylvania (without counting the territory of factories) 600,000. This is not because the north has more of the best of the experimental farms and the extraordinary results obtained on them.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1913. While some rules today put thy course away.

The planets are friendly today, the astrologers declare, and it is a time for pleasant social intercourse, since antipathies should not intrude.

Oriental Rugs at Half Price

That's the Headliner We Feature in Heavy Type to Add Zest to the Annual Oriental Rug Sale. Storekeepers are intensely human. Six years ago our rug chief bought some fine Oriental rugs in carpet sizes. All have sold but one. Five years ago he bought another lot. All sold but one. Of the carpet size rugs bought in subsequent years, one or two have remained each season until we have accumulated eleven. Nothing wrong with them; in fact, Oriental Rugs, like wine, improve with age. But the rug chief is human. He is tired of invoicing the same rugs season after season. Doesn't want to see them around any more.

Though they are well worth their first full price, he is willing to sacrifice any of these 10 rugs at half price. There's the unabridged story. If there are eleven rug connoisseurs in Atlanta who can use any of these rugs, they can get the bargain of their lives. Here's the list:

USE NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE IN TIME AND YOU WILL NEVER NEED FALSE HAIR

Wearing false hair is a harmless device of which many ladies are guilty. These women are all objects for sympathy rather than for criticism. Early neglect in the care of the scalp has caused the loss of so much hair that their personal appearance is sadly marred. To correct this defect they resort to artificial hair, but by so doing to hide the results of their earlier neglect. These unfortunate are deceiving no one but themselves as no matter how costly the wig or how well the wig and the hair are fastened together, the hair will not grow back. Most ladies would resent any imputation of personal carelessness and neglect. And yet very many permit their natural hair to become so thin, brittle and lusterless that it looks no better than that brought at the store. All this is so unfortunate as it is unnecessary. Hair that is unhealthy or thin may usually be restored by the working of the dandruff germ. This destructive germ burrows down into the hair follicles and shortly after the hair falls out, with the result that it finally loosens and drops out.

For preserving and beautifying the hair Newbro's Herpicide is a prime favorite. It intelligently uses a justifiably clean, healthy scalp and the life and lustre of the hair. In no way can one add more to her personal charm and attractiveness than by the use of this remarkable and well known scalp prophylactic.

On account of its astonishing merit and its delightful and exquisite finds users everywhere and among all classes. It may be purchased in 50 cent and $1.00 sizes at all drug stores.

You will find upon inquiry that dealer to such a degree that he will not hesitate to guarantee it to do all that is claimed or refund your money for the five bottles purchased. Applications may be obtained at the better barber shops and hair-dressing parlors.

Upon receipt of 10 cents in postage and a return order of packing and mailing, the Herpicide Co., Dept. S, will send to any address a nice sample bottle of Herpicide and an interesting booklet on the care of the hair. Jacobs' Pharmacy, Special Agents.

What Anne Rittenhouse Says

PARIS—The tunic is both a new form of women. They want to wear it, but they are not sure how they can. It is quite unbecoming to many kinds of figures. One is better able to stand with above the knees than the fulness between the waistline and the hips. The pleating of the material to the side in order to obtain the fulness of the tunic enlarges the figure to such a measure that few women care to contemplate themselves in the dress after trying it.

There has come about a new arrangement of it in the last few days which the conservative houses have introduced and which may prove a way out of the dilemma. An Oriental sash is used in a modified form, to hold down the fulness and keep it in a graceful line. The effect is decidedly Persian and much more becoming than the original adaptation of the tunic.

There is one most attractive model in black satin which has a narrow skirt, short all round, and a straight-away tunic made of pleated black tulle edged with an inch-wide band of velvet and christiane.

Around the hips there is a folded sash of black satin which is not tightly drawn in to the figure, but merely gives to it a semblance of outline and regularity. It is cut away in front to two points at the lower edge which are outlined with christiane and caught under and attached to the tunic. At the top is a large yellow rose with green leaves.

The bodice is of black brocade with rhinestones edging, and the lining is pink chiffon.

A sash over the tunic.

The sash is probably the best solution of the problem so far, and while, as an accessory, it was commended last spring, still it has returned in a better form for a better purpose. When the tunic gowns were first brought out, they were not especially well handled. The idea was new and the beginning was not graceful. After two or three weeks of experimenting, two or three changes were discovered that were helpful. The skirt was made in a much plainer fashion; that is, the swirl of drapery which was brought up in broad pleats to the middle of the waistline back and front was omitted, and the skirt got its fulness from a adwaise manipulation of the material that left the hips free from folded cloth.

You can easily see that this gave the tunic a better chance. It is, in itself, always full, and it is made awkward by being placed over other kinds of fulness.

The sash is another improvement and it will probably be adopted by the majority of women for two reasons. First, it makes the waistline look smaller and gives more grace to the hips; second, it differentiates the gown from the dozens that are sold at small prices since the famous originals appeared.

BASSES HAVE NO ZOOLOG.

This new kind of sash in after all no longer ends, nor bows. It is merely a bit of drapery that goes about the waist, pulled up a trifle above the waistline in the back to give the Oriental effect that every woman aims at today, no matter how near she comes to it.

Such drapery is in keeping with the deep girlish that Fremet introduced and which are now employed on a great many frocks. These are all pulled up a bit above the waistline and again below it, and although they are folded and wrinkled, they have a stiff bone at back and front to hold them in place. The new idea seems to be to lengthen the waistline. One observes this everywhere.

College Society

The Mesopotamian society entertained its new members at a delightful reception last Saturday evening in the college parlors. A fine program was rendered, including piano selections by Miss Cooper and Miss Foster, and reading by Miss Bradford, who is head of the expression department. After a social hour loss were served. The domestic department is a popular addition to the club. A specialist is at the head of this department, and work done will be of a high grade. An event of much interest slated for next week is the faculty concert. This will be the first of a series of recitals to be given every other week during the year. Plans have been made for the inauguration of a student government system. An honor board of five will be elected by the student body at an early date.

A Touch of Novelty

Some of the most attractive variations of the sandwich plate and kindred silver, combine cut glass with the silver; and this with pierced work gives a delicacy of style which is decidedly decorative.

The material has been cleverly handled in our showing, however, to insure also the strength of construction which is essential to the real value of a piece of silver.

WEDDINGS

CHARMING ACQUISITION TO MARRIED SET

Garner-Hobbs

The marriage of Miss Kate Garner and Mr. John A. Hobbs, of Odessa, took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Howard Garner, in Niagara, Ala., on Wednesday evening.

Rev. H. J. Sargeant, of Birmingham, performed the ceremony at 7 o'clock. The wedding music was in charge of Mrs. Wheeler and Mr. W. M. Webb. Proceeding the ceremony, Mr. Webb sang "O Promise Me" and to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march which immediately followed, the bride and groom grouped themselves about the altar of palms and ferns.

Miss Louise Garner, a sister of the bride, then entered and was attractive in a gown of pink tulle and with lace trimmings. She carried an armful of pink carnations.

Mrs. Maurice Wing, of Birmingham, a sister of the groom, was maid of honor, herself a recent bride wearing her wedding gown, an exquisite affair of which duchess satin fashioned an court train and luxuriantly embroidered in pearls. She carried an armful of pink roses.

The bride entered alone and was attractive in a suit of tulle with hat and other accessories to match. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Mr. Maurice Wing, of Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Hobbs left immediately after the reception which followed their marriage on a bridal journey which will cover points of interest in the north, returning to Odessa, Ala., on October 1, where they will be at home with the groom's mother, Mrs. J. W. Wrenn, at the Princeton hotel, of which Mr. Hobbs is the general manager.

Liliputian Wedding

An interesting event of Saturday evening was the Liliputian wedding given under the auspices of the Epworth league, No. 7, D. of P. Imp. O. R. M.

Music and recitation were a feature of the evening, and the wedding was a great success. The bride was Miss Mattie Belle Drake and the groom was Harold Willis.

Miss Nellie Hilley was maid of honor and Charlie Drake was best man. The ringbearer was little Miss Louise Spinks and the bridesmaid was Miss Annie Scogin.

The groomsmen were Clarence Drake, the flower girls were Miss Jennie Maud Scogin and Miss Irene Waldrip, the ushers were Arthur Waldrip and Earl Waldrip, and the readers were J. N. Willis, Jr., and Helen Drake. The children were all under two years of age.

Jones-Thomas

The marriage is announced of Miss Alice Viola Jones and Mr. David Connor Thomas, which took place Wednesday evening, October 21, at the home of Rev. J. C. Strickland, pastor of the First Baptist church.

The ceremony was quiet, being witnessed only by Miss Kirtie McElherron, Mr. Vernon Hatten, Mr. Fred Thomas and Mr. Doyle Jones. The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Jones, of Sapulpa, wore a suit of blue with white beaver hat trimmed in French lace. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Thomas, formerly of Dalton, Ga.

After the ceremony, the bride and groom were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Thomas, 14 Pearce street, where the young couple will be until October 15, when they will take possession of their new home, 11 Pierce street.

Van Buren-Hardeman

A home wedding of unusual interest was that of Miss N. V. Russell Van Buren and Mr. Wallis Brumby Hardeman, which took place Tuesday evening, October 21, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Van Buren, parents of the bride, at Grapewoody, Mrs. G. O. Harrison, of Pinehurst, officiating.

The house was decorated with quantities of lilies, bride roses, carnations, ferns and azaleas. In the parlor, where the ceremony took place, the bride and groom stood beneath a bower of amalia and white roses, and before an improvised altar stood a tall brass candelabra holding a tall brass vase filled with flowers. On either side of the altar huge brass floor vases held Easter lilies. The mantel was draped with amalia, and on it were vases of bride roses and unshaded tapers.

The wedding music was rendered by Miss Cassie Plimley, of Hartsell, Ga., and just before the wedding march Miss Helen Maxwell, of Milledgeville, sang "Because."

The only attendants were the bride's sister, Mrs. Louis LeRoy Fernald, of Tarpon Springs, Fla., and Mr. Ben T. Malone, of Monticello, Ga., best man. Mrs. Fernald wore a green broadcloth suit, with overdrapery of lace. Her bouquet was of white carnations showered with ferns.

The bride entered with her father, Mr. Van Buren, who met the groom and best man at the altar. The bride was lovely and made a charming picture in her wedding gown of broadened crepe de chine with lace and pearl trimmings. She wore a veil of tulle, which was caught with white lilies, and her bouquet was of bride roses showered with valley lilies.

Mr. and Mrs. Hardeman left during the evening in an automobile for Macon, where they took the train for wedding trip. On their return they will begin housekeeping and will be at home to their friends at 181 English avenue, Macon, Ga.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. E. V. BASEBALL HONOR ROLL FOR THE SEASON. NATIONAL LEAGUE. Best Batter—Crawford. Leading Base Stealer—Carey. Best Pitcher—Lynch.

AMERICAN LEAGUE. Leading Base Stealer—Mohan. Best Pitcher—Lynch. Best Fielding Club—St. Louis.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The Cobbs, Wagners, Mattys and Johnses do not make all the baseball history. Pictures for both leagues show that many other players are establishing records, and doing it so quietly that the general public doesn't even know about it.

How many fans can name the leading base stealer in the National League? Not many. Why not? Because John Mohan, the Pirates, who tops the list with 43 stolen bases, and yet Matt Ryan, the Boston Braves, who comes in fourth with 20, are not household names.

There's another surprise when Old Man Tommy Leach is discovered the best transferee in the National League. Little Leach was too old for Pittsburgh, but since joining the Boston Braves he has pitched 87 runs in 114 games. The Giants haven't pitched any other pitcher so far, ample proof that New York runs have been hard to manufacture lately.

Premier hitting honors in the National go to Crawford of the Phillies. This slugger has batted out hits for a total of 249 bases. Crawford has eighteen home runs, thirteen triples and thirty doubles to his credit. 200 points bet on an average of 407 per cent. 200 points bet on his career total. 200 points bet on his ability to place a man in the ten leading sluggers.

The Dodgers lead the list in club batting and the Giants in a three-handed tie with Philadelphia and Pittsburgh for second place. Three triple plays have been pulled off in the National this season. Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Boston each turn in the trick.

The batting duel, considering only the hits and extra bases, in the American League, between Jackson and Cobb is the most interesting. Jackson has an average of .257, Cobb in third with an average of .251. Cobb is a better hitter in between than an average of .251. Cobb is still the home run king with eleven circuit swells.

The Athletics show four players among the first ten leading sluggers, not a very surprising thing for a team supported by a great manager. Mack's team leads in club batting and in making home hits. Not satisfied with this showing, the Athletics are leading in club fielding, and still may win the Philadelphia pennant by a narrow margin.

The first of the season this year was a stiff work-out on Sanford field every day. The Athletics report for practice every afternoon at 4 o'clock and don't leave the field until 8. There is this time the coaches put on the hard practice, as much as any ordinary football prospect can stand up to. Every afternoon the last work has been very warm, and frequently the men get too hot, but every man is putting his shoulder to the wheel and hopes in his manager way to help build a good team. There is one thing that you can never get the best of, and that is that other pitcher. Whoever the best pitcher "Gory to Old Georgia" is, he is always the one who is the best pitcher in the National League.

Scrimmages for Auburn Eleven

AUBURN, Ala., Sept. 27.—Friday afternoon Auburn football team had a battle royal between varsity and the reserves. The game was divided into four ten-minute quarters, and every minute of the time was full of spectacular play on both sides.

Major kicked off for the scrubs and Spackman returned the ball to the varsity. Then by series of brilliant line plunges, Pendergast and Blise, varsity carried the ball over for the first touchdown without a punt in one. Then the scrubs braced up and in one scoring was without a punt in one quarter. The final count was 18 to 0. In favor of the varsity.

For the reserves Cleveland Carey, Robinson, and Dugger played great ball. Arnold and Newell worked well for varsity in returning punts. Arnold is playing under a half and Hart, Harris, and Pendergast will do the work on the other side. Taylor and Newell will probably do the bulk of the work as at full back. The coaches are working hard to develop a man for this position. Another problem for the coaches is the development of a good punter. Taylor and Pendergast, a new man, will probably do this work this year.

In the early part of the season it was feared that the team would be greatly lacking in weight. The most sanguine of its supporters admit that it is not up to the form it has shown at this time in former seasons.

The return of the two veteran line-men Pitts and Yorkwood, however, has greatly bolstered up the team. Pitts, weight and experience makes him a man to be feared at center, and Yorkwood is a great guard.

On the side lines Friday afternoon the hospital corps loomed up in discouraging numbers. Hart and Kearney have injured shoulders. Taylor a sprained ankle and Lousell injured. During the game Arnold was added to the list. All of these men will be out of practice for some time and some of them for the rest of the season.

On the coaching department, Coach Condon has two assistants, George Pinton, the great fullback of '07, and Ed. Bragg, one of the all-time greats, is also in the field every day. These men can be depended upon to do all that is in their power with the material at hand.

Newman to Go Higher in the Next Race. NEWMAN, Ga., Sept. 27.—The local baseball association received word today from Manager George Robb, saying that he has completed plans for Newman to buy franchise in a higher class league and that particulars would be given later.

Newman led the Georgia-Alabama league last year in attendance and the franchise was sold at the end of the year that the attendance would exceed a $100,000 salary limit, thus allowing Newman to play higher class ball.

Turn Verin Club Will Have Boxing

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 27.—An amateur boxing tournament, under the auspices of the National Turn Verin will be held at its club houses in Bruce street, on the evenings of October 4 and 6. Preliminary bouts will be staged on the first named date, while the semifinals and finals will be contested on the latter.

ALMOST PICK LINEUP OF THE GEORGIA TEAM

ATHENS, Ga., Sept. 27.—The Red and Black squad is certainly being given a stiff work-out on Sanford field every day. The Athletics report for practice every afternoon at 4 o'clock and don't leave the field until 8. There is this time the coaches put on the hard practice, as much as any ordinary football prospect can stand up to. Johnson on Diet Hurlers Star Ball

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 27.—Walter "Smokoball" Johnson, monarch of the mound, is pitching himself to glory on a diet of pudding, sherbet, cake and ice tea. Perhaps no other pitcher in the history of the game ever performed so valiantly on so weak a diet, yet Johnson never indulges in more food at noon than pudding, sherbet, cake and ice tea.

Hurlers Hurt By Catchers

Often a Catcher Will Make Pitcher Change Delivery and Run Him

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 27.—Many a young pitcher has been ruined, or nearly ruined, because a catcher tries to make him change his delivery.

The hardship can easily be seen when the same catcher works with the pitcher practically every game he works. After throwing curve after curve and not using the ball very long before he begins to go back on him, especially so when he isn't a regular curve ball worker.

In addition to this, if the pitcher makes any complaint, the catcher suggests the report that the kid's hitting isn't worth a bang and doesn't break enough to baffie the batter, so he says he has to keep calling for the curve.

This is why he meets the objections of the pitcher. It is generally a catcher who is afraid of his own job and hasn't enough principle to get out and hustle the game at one victory each forty-eight hours.

Victory to American BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Sept. 27.—E. E. Pommeroy of this city won the world's championship of checkers, from Alfred E. Brown of England, who has held undisturbed possession of the title. The competitors were tied up to the fifteenth game in the series.

PATTON'S RUPTURED KNEE IS OLD FOOTBALL INJURY

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 27.—The injury which is now keeping Jean Patton, the local football star upon the hospital list at Tech, much to the dismay and sorrow of the Jacket rosters, is not a new one. The Baylor "war horse" received the injury in a prep school fray here two years ago.

Local gridiron followers are in great hopes that Patton will be in excellent condition on October 15, as Tech plays the University of Chattanooga here on that date. Patton is a great favorite in this burg.

Rival Teams Claiming Ryan

LYNCHBURG, Va., Sept. 27.—Announcement has been made of the signing of Ray Ryan as manager of the 1914 Richmond team, the statement given to the press Tuesday by Secretary Bradley, of the Richmond club. Ryan is spending a few days in Roanoke, where he played several seasons and from which team he was sold to one of the Chicago teams.

McCarty, president of the Norfolk Tars, to effect that Ryan was under contract as player to the Tars and he did not know whether he would be released or not. Reference to the reserve list of the Athletics failed to disclose the name of Ryan in the list.

Presley seems determined to quit as this puts Roanoke in the field for a pit, with Norfolk also looking out for a new man.

50,000 cars—Not enough!

FOR every indication and from orders on hand we could double our 1914 production to make 100,000 cars and still be behind in orders. We have on file immediate shipping orders for over 10,000 cars. The new Overland has been on the market for less than one month—yet in that short time—in 30 days—we have received orders for one-fifth of our entire 1914 production.

For example: Away up in a very small town in a remote corner of the great northwest, a dealer had contracted for 40 Overlands to be taken during the next twelve months. This is a big order for that section of the country. The publication of our announcement (last month) brought him such an overwhelming batch of cash orders that he came straight to Toledo to literally beg for more cars. He stated that he would take the entire shipment of 40 cars in one month instead of twelve months as originally contracted for.

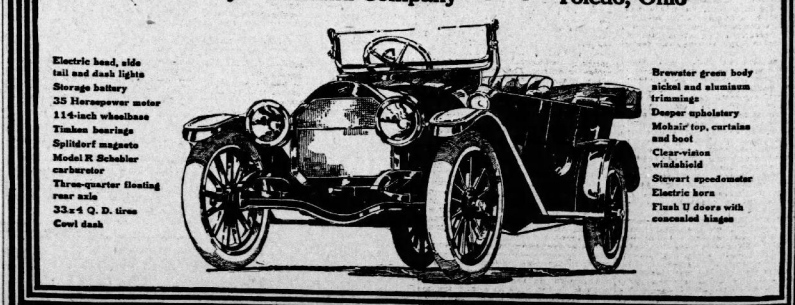

On the other hand our dealers in the large centers would take 500 cars apiece right now if we could supply them. But 150 a day is the very best we can do at this time. And these 150 per day we are carefully and equally distributing all over the country.

Such selling records have but one meaning. Such a demand must prove to you beyond all doubt that the Overland is the most economical and practical buy on the market.

Deciding Plays Of Sox-Giants Series of 1912

The first game went to Boston, 4 to 2. Wood opposing Terran and Crandall. With one run needed to tie in the ninth and Herzog on third, Fitch and Crandall failed.

The second game went 11 innings, 4-6. The Mathewson pitched against Collins, Hall and Bellent. With the score 5 to 1 in the eighth, the Giants scored three runs on Lewis' full bludgeoner by Doyle...

The fifth went to Boston, Mathewson's hard hit ground ball and the winning run was scored. From the eighth inning, the score was 5 to 2. Marquard beating O'Brien and Collins. O'Brien's balk in the first throw Boston into a panic and the Giants had the game in hand before they recovered.

The Giants won the seventh 19 to 1. Terran's best. Wood and Hall. New York outplayed Boston from the start.

The deciding game New York lost in the tenth. The score was a tie in the ninth. The Giants scored in the tenth on Murray's double and Murkle's single. Snodgrass dropped Herkie's foul ball. Spaulker's foul ball fell on Murkle, who stood still to his base while Meyers tried to get it. Snodgrass followed this with a hit which scored Egan. Herkie went to third and Spaulker to second. The former scoring on Gardner's fly and the game was won. Mathewson and Bellent pitched.

Emory Players At Grid Work

Looks as if Many of the Classes Will Turn Out Caring Events

(Special Dispatch to The Journal) EMORY COLLEGE, Oxford, Ga., Sept. 27.—Emory's interclass football season will open on October 13, this date being selected by the athletic committee of the student body, which leaves only three full weeks to prepare for the season.

The juniors are the surprise of the season, they retaining every member of the season-winning squad of 1911, and now have over ten new men out trying to out-pace those of the regulars. Prof. G. P. Shindler, coach of this crew, had his arm broken this week by the back-firing of an engine when he attempted to crank an automobile, and has not been out to see his bunch work. The preliminary tactics are being cared for by Coach Hanson, anticipating the seniors have not settled down to work, but Coach Hanson is anticipating a successful season. His team will not proceed until the first of October.

A mass of good prospects are found in the squads being worked out by Coach Fiesher for the sophomore team. This eleven was torn to pieces by failure of men to return to college, but he will build a good machine from his new men.

The freshmen have not announced the names of their coach for this season, but it is very probable that it will be Prof. J. G. Blythe. He has taken an active interest in Emory athletics, being the referee for last season and coach of the post-war-winning Junior team in baseball.

Why Europe Places the Hummobile in a Special, Trusted Class

Foreign buyers of American cars are the most critical purchasers in the world. They have been taught to distrust American shop practice, which too often seeks quantity at the cost of quality.

Unquestionably the first appeal of the Hummobile to the proud Continental buyer was based upon its prompt recognition of constructive features of the highest class.

Feature more than minor comfort is the high, roomy top which distinguishes the 1914 Hummobile. This has been attained without any straining of the Hummobile's originally fine proportions.

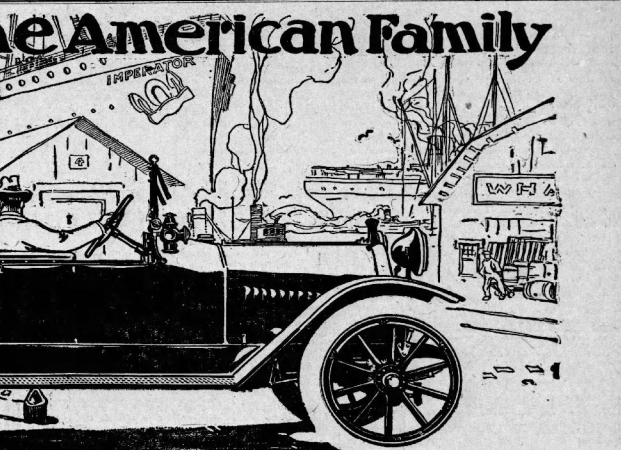

The Three-Unit Electrical System is Both Safe and Logical. The English buyer, who always puts safety first, will be quick to see the value of the Hummobile's three-unit electrical system.

Foreign Buyers Actually Pay a Premium for Hummobile. It costs a foreign buyer $200 to $400 more than it does the more fortunate American.

It is really remarkable that the automobile that is especially the favorite of the American family has been adopted in its entirety as the car of the American family.

Europe Wants One-half of All These 1914 Hupmobiles

Can you conceive a higher tribute to this new Hupmobile than the fact that Europe puts in its claim for one-half the total 1914 output? Such a signal endorsement has come to no other American car, for the Hupmobile has won its laurels on the score of price.

Its loyal following in our own land is not as you know a price following—but a preference based on the conviction that it is the best car of its class in the world.

The new Hupmobile is polished, and refined, and strengthened and beautified to a point that surpasses every previous standard. It has earned its conquest of the old and the new world—it has justified its right to be compared to the costliest large cars as "a perfect small diamond compares to a large one."

Smith Seeks Moran Fight

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—"Gus" Smith and Frank Moran do not meet in the city before the latter sails for Europe early next month. It will be through the fault of Jim Buckley, who guides the pugilistic destinies of the former.

Smith and Moran, it will be remembered, met in a twenty-round match on the coast. In which Moran was defeated. He had always contended that it was a lucky punch that started him on his way to defeat.

No Music at Games

MEXICANopolis, Sept. 27.—There will be no music at the University of Mexico football games this year. At least that is the decision of the board of trustees.

church of Summit, N. J. She is an Atlanta contralto of note, studying carefully for the concert stage but has no intention of going into opera.

BY LINTON K. STARR. ATLANTA has enough women who sing to supply voices for every opera under the sun.

To be more explicit, Atlanta women who have stood the test of critical audiences, could be ferried into an opera company that need exclude nothing from its repertoire, provided the necessary male voices could be found.

The only thing out of place would be the lack of dramatic training. In many cases this is being supplied, and, as a matter of fact, an Atlanta musician is planning the organization of a company that actually will produce operas.

To form such a company musicians should be at least six distinct voices, and there, that one singer for several of the parts, as in the opera Tannhauser where the roles of Elizabeth and Venus are very similar.

There must be a high dramatic soprano, like that of Madame Gaski, to take such parts as Venus in Tannhauser; Aida in Aida; Leonora in Beethoven's Fidelio or Santuzza in Lucia di Lammermoor.

Also, there must be an alto, as the mezzo-soprano, for a role like Carmen in Carmen, and a contralto or an ingenuous, indispensable in some operas.

All these, Atlanta musicians say, can be supplied by Atlanta women whose voices have stood the test.

The story of Atlanta women who sing would begin of course with the long hours of tortuous study through all the months and years of their life.

How another young woman went to sing before the critics of Europe, watched them shake their heads and hear them mumble their regrets that her work still was too crude.

Miss Hecht has sung the parts of Marguerite in Faust, Elza in Lohengrin, Elizabeth and Venus in Tannhauser; Santuzza in Cavalleria Rusticana; Tosca in Tosca; Leonora in Fidelio; The Countess in the Wedding of Figaro; Mimì in Bohème; the leading roles in Carmen; Malsinger and other well known operas.

She mastered her parts so thoroughly that, now, almost on a moment's notice, she can sing a good portion of almost any role.

Miss Hecht and Mrs. M. E. Carothers-Yorston, who achieved a part in the Royal Opera and two years after that was hailed with joy by half continent.

Some of Atlanta's singers are amateurs for operatic careers. Others are bringing joy through song to their friends and in religious work with the church choirs.

Others are devoting half of their time to promoting the musical interests of Atlanta. Pictures of some few of the Atlanta women who sing are shown above.

TERRIBLE COST OF THE BALKAN WAR

Once more diplomacy was called upon and a conference was called at Bucharest to settle the differences between the allies themselves, a matter to puzzle the hardest treaty maker, since these differences had their source in half savage racial hatreds that took no account of political expediency.

Walter Taylor - Playwright

(By WARD S. GREENE.)
THERE are several reasons why Walter Taylor happened to become a moving picture playwright as well as Atlanta's city clerk. First, he used to work with a circus, and that gave him an idea. Second, he used to work with a newspaper, and that made him know an idea when he met it in the street, and taught him what to do with the idea when properly introduced to it. Again, he works in the city hall, and that gives him the sense of humor to coax the idea along.

But most of all he happened to become a movie writer because he is one of the supposing kind who can take an idea and develop a whole family of young ideas along with it.

Have you ever played "supposing?" Children know it as "if I had a million dollars" or "if I was you and you was me," and grown people play it the same way, only they call it "Games in State." Walter Taylor didn't call it anything in particular, and perhaps didn't even know he was playing it.

You see, it happened in that day-dreaming month of June. It had been one of those long hot days that herald the swoop of the longer, hotter, summer.

The afternoon sun was beginning to smother its way into the western sky as Walter Taylor sat at his desk in the city hall and looked out of the open window at the parched stone flagging, at the shifting crowds of tired people hurrying home after long hours spent in crowds and the street in a rather whimsical way.

The light, for instance, why, it was drifting from yellow into a subdued grey as though the sun's rays filtered down through a sieve. It was like being under a tent.

If one were supposing now, that green hydrant out there might very easily be a post, and the delivery wagon rattling by it might be a chariot rumbling into the ring. The ring itself, well, it wasn't very hard to turn the dist-winded street into a tan-bark arena.

A man slid out from the sidewalk, hopped nimbly out of the way of the delivery wagon's wheels, and skipped across the street. He waved his hand to the watcher in the window.

"Funny fellow, that clown," thought Taylor.

The show went on. Two twiggers who strangely resembled men who were, say, matching, posed on the corner, in the ring rafter, and entertained him a bit with their antics. Now a beautiful equestrienne swung by with her hands tucked at the wheel of her car, on, at the reins of her gallant steed. Then again, a dwarf comedian dressed in ogee-boy costume turned cartwheels through the magic street.

A donkey whisked a cart around the corner and stopped opposite the street. He was a trick donkey of course. The driver jerked at the reins while the donkey stood still and thumped his ears. By the rights of the ring now, the man should beat him. Walter Taylor held his breath lest the man not play the game. Then he grimed with delight. The red-headed one in the driver's seat stooped belabored the steed with his whip.

The donkey would buck, and the red-headed clown would tumble into the street. In his mind's eye Walter Taylor saw him fall on his dust from their leaves and rustled their faculty. The blaring light mellowed and dimmed, and Walter Taylor began thinking about the know that what he did was rather wonderful.

Some take weeks at it. They buy books on the subject, study 'em deep into form, technique, and rudiments and the graduate work, then they ask all their friends about it, are, man or seventeen different copies, and after it's all over, are afraid to send off a single one.

But none of these things did Walter Taylor.

Walter Taylor continued to chuckle. The clerk ran to the window and peered out. Nothing in sight but a mule, a wagon, and a driver. The clerk gaped at Taylor. The man was deaf, he thought.

So he said, "What's the joke?" "I think I'll write a moving picture play," said Walter Taylor.

The clerk grinned a glassy grin. "Well, that is a joke," he grafted and went back to the interrupted contemplation of his lower vest-button.

PLAYWRIGHT IN 20 MINUTES.

Walter Taylor felt deeply hurt, but none the less in earnest. So while he continued thinking about the circus in the street, at the same time he grabbed the typewriter and began stabbing some of the thoughts through the frayed ribbon.

Twenty minutes later he zipped the paper out, leaned back in his chair, and sighed with satisfaction. He had written the moving picture play and it was a corker.

Yes, Walter wrote his first moving picture play in twenty minutes. Later, of course, he spruced it up a bit, and polished off some of the rough edges.

"Don't sell anybody," he says now, "I wouldn't like to make that statement in print, simply because nobody would believe me. But it's the truth."

Why nobody would believe Walter Taylor, we don't know. But if you are one of the ones who tried to write a play in twenty minutes, you

"Books?" he says. "Didn't see a one. Nor did anyone ever tell me how to write one of the darned things. The best way to learn is to go to some of these shows around here and watch how it is done. Simple as falling off a log. Anybody can do it."

Neither was Walter Taylor bashful about submitting his maiden effort. He would take a chance anyway, he thought, though in all probability they would send it back right away and beg him as a personal favor not to send 'em any more stuff like that. But stamps cost only two cents, so he sent it.

A few days later he had his answer. It came in the form of a check.

"Surprised?" says Walter Taylor. "I was plum duffed."

But taking the old motto of if at first you succeed, try 'em again, he sat down and wrote another. This time it took him longer than twenty minutes, but he finished her at last, tied her up, and away she went. And the check came back.

HIS RULES ARE FEW.

The plays have been written and dispatched several times since then, and several times has the check come back. Several times, too, the plays have come back. But that is only part of the game.

Not long ago Atlantians had the opportunity to see one of Walter Taylor's plays flicker across the screen. It was shown at a local theatre and was all about clowns, donkeys, and drosses. It was his first play, and although many who

Gold at Last Is Panned From New Alaskan Mines

BY E. O. SAWYER.
 Staff Correspondent.—"Oh, Billy, we're rich!"

The little woman, clad in "muckies" and trousers, looked up from the trying pan she held in her hand and in which rested half an ounce of coarse gold, to the silent, gray-haired man beside her and repeated again and again the magic words:

"Oh, Billy, we're rich!"

Snow-capped peaks and icy walls surrounded them. Three years in the wilderness of the upper White river country, the man and the woman had "mashed" over the snows by winter and the swamps by summer in search of this gold. Twice in that time they had been to Dawson for supplies. For seven years before the woman came the silent man had "mashed" by himself.

But away with those years of

"mushing"—HERE WAS GOLD AT LAST!

The silent man, standing there looking at the gleaming gold, was William E. Johnson, discoverer of the Shushanna Gold fields—the new fabulous treasure-house of Alaska, whither he had journeyed over a perilous and almost impassable trail. Since he sent his signal out to a party of men early in July of 1910, he and four women have stamped into these fields from McCarthy.

And now on the surrounding hills and in creeks in all directions from the James claim, over an area of some fifty miles thousands of claims have been staked, but on all, with the exception of a few in the narrow gulches where the gravel is shallow, it will take months of work before the owners can tell whether they, too, will end as "rich little pockets" as James has located.

Last year Nels P. Nelson joined them for a year's prospecting, and William E. Johnson, of Dawson, grubstaked the expedition. The winter's search for gold was nearly over and they had only been able to find a few colors along tributaries to Beaver creek in Yukon territory when they met Lillian Joe, a chief among the White River Indians and a friend of James.

Joe told them of a quartz ledge on Chatsbenda creek, tributary to the Chisana river, twenty-eight miles south of the White. Coming up this creek they met Carl Whitman, a prospector and prospector, who had also been in this country for many years. They camped together and began to prospect.

On May 3 James and Nelson found pay dirt at the mouth of a creek above the quartz ledge which they called Bonanza creek. Prospecting up this creek, they found a tributary in which the gravel yielded as high as $25 to the panner pan. They named it "Little Eldorado" and staked a claim. Carl Whitman staked the next one above. Nelson started to Dawson for supplies and Whitman to Golconda. James remained, living in a little 12x12 tent. When I arrived at Shushanna, a mining engineer, who had just bonded a claim for six figures from which, he told me in confidence, he expected to take half a million, guided me three miles and a half over the mountain from Johnston creek to the James home.

The woman had discarded trousers for a skirt of her own making, but still wore the muckies. Her hair is just turning gray and her hands and face are tanned brown.

"I am sorry to be found in such a shape," said she, "but one can't keep up with the styles here, and houses are real scarce. Won't you come into the tent?"

Stepping between a Yukon stove and a little stand made of split willow poles, on which a lot of condensed milk cans were piled, I seated myself on a moose hide that served as carpet, mattress and table at different hours of the day. There was over $15,000 in gold in those cans I learned later.

We discussed the high cost of living. Word had just come that a pack train had been quarantined by the government because one horse had been sick. Flour was selling at $1.50 a cup, bacon at $2.50 a pound and sugar at as high as $3 a cup.

"At the present rate I think we had better pack up the money we have and leave," she said. "We won't be here tomorrow with a pack train and then we will have a bigger tent and plenty of everything, as well as gold."

Hearing that I had been on the trail eight days Mrs. James said, "You are probably hungry. No man ever gets enough to eat on the trail. We strike here with the 'loved happy' that desire is not what it once was."

"A few years ago," he says, "a moving picture wasn't complete without a lot of blood in it. You had to kill off somebody every few feet of film. The drunken father must crash into his home and beat his child over the head. The next scene must show said father spilling tears over the child as she dies with reproachful eyes fixed on him. And then of course the thing ended with father saddened but reformed. Nowadays it's different. Characters can get sick as much as they want to, in fact, it's a fine thing to get them very sick indeed, but always cure 'em before the last flicker. Once you're consumptive west and died in agony. Now he must go west and be recollected; but whether straggled or sully it must carry some appeal to touch the common chord. And as for other rules, Walter Taylor has none.

"Just get your idea, tell it, and when you're through telling it, let the love of Mike, stop."

Which is a very good rule, set only for moving plays, but for Sunday feature stories as well.

FUR TOUCHES ON AFTERNOON COSTUMES

THIS season registers the high-idea mark in the use of peltry. Smart costumes, almost without exception, emphasize as a leading feature the use of fur. It is employed in every conceivable manner, to fashion collars and cuffs, cover buttons, as a border on waists and gowns, to trim suitcases and to adorn fabric muffs and gloves.

The zenith of luxury is attained when fur is introduced as a trimming, and its possibilities are unlimited. A narrow stripe of fur bordering a gown is, in many instances, more effective than a broad band. Much depends upon the character of the gown and the result which the designer strives to obtain.

The collection of fur-trimmed garments on this page are especially worthy of your attention for they illustrate the use of fur in the most artistic manner of the Parisian couturier.

Every well-selected wardrobe requires those accessories for wearing over the afternoon or evening costume, and the model trimmed with narrow bands of fur possesses every favorable attribute. The material used for the wrap is rust-red velours de laine in a ribbed design. The left half of the front crosses over the opposite side and is fastened with a row of disk-shaped buttons covered with the material. A narrow band of skunk fur borders the coat, and the long kimono sleeves are finished in the same manner.

With this stunning wrap is worn a small hat of black velvet with a large butterfly of black tulle poised directly across the front. Outlining this butterfly is a narrow band of skunk fur. A large aiglon scarf of skunk completes the costume. Velours de laine can be purchased in many lovely colors, so the wrap can be duplicated in any hue you may prefer.

A charcoal velvet is extensively used for the broad scarfs which accompany the afternoon costumes, and this is bordered with skunk fur. It is often brocaded velvet. The ends gradually grow narrower from the shoulders to the hem, and brown satin is used for the lining.

Brown velvet is used for the modish beret hat which is artistically trimmed with an ornament of jet. A band of skunk fur forms the headband.

The fascinating afternoon gown with the tunic opening is of copper-colored satin trimmed with corbeau-blue velvet and opossum fur. The lower portion of the bodice is oddly cut, extending over the kimono upper half in points both back and front. A small collar of the same fur finishes the V-shaped opening at the throat, and a band of the fur forms the cuffs on the sleeves.

Two gathered trills of cream lace contribute a touch of softness to the bodice.

From beneath the girle of corbeau-blue velvet falls the scantly gathered skirt bordered with a band of opossum fur. The underdrift, just below the tunic, is stitched a band of corbeau-blue velvet.

This smart gown could be successfully duplicated in deep violet or blue satin charmeuse and trimmed with opossum. The stunning hat of corbeau-blue velvet has a bow-shaped crown of opossum. At the back is placed an extraordinary bow of velvet.

Superior costumes to be numbered among the favored hues, and the three-quarter length, which is fashioned of large buttons in the center, is a most worthy. Broadly trimmed with velvet, the double collar finishing the neck line is developed of black velvet and falling genuine. A single button, covered with black velvet, is used to fasten the wrap.

The picturesque rickshaw hat is of black velvet bordered with gray fox fur. Two gray plumes are artistically arranged over the crown, and the band is a wide band of skunk fur.

If you possess a stole and muff which are out of date, cut the fur into strips and use them to trim a wrap or gown. This is far better than to allow them to lie in the cedar chest.

The low-cut V of the decollete is filled in with white mousseline de soie, and a double frill of the same material softens the line at the neck. A flat collar of the panther extends across the shoulders and back and double trills of the mousseline trim the sleeves.

The skirt has a tunic which falls artistically over a draped foundation. A girle of brown taffeta constricts the waist and is finished with a bow at the left side. The close-fitting Russian turban of moleskin is adorned by a fantasia of taupe-colored optic plumes, and the high skirt of moleskin is bordered with bands of panther.

The last garment of this collection is a dainty afternoon gown of white tulle over pale pink charmeuse. This model has a naive simplicity which will appeal to every woman who recognizes beauty in gown. The bodice has long, close-fitting sleeves trimmed with gathered trills of the tulle, and a model collar of the same material finishes the neck line. Where the bodice folds over surplus fashion a band of blue fox fur is effectively used. The triple skirt is one of the new features of this season, and each flounce of this model is finished with a band of fur. A broad girle of pale pink charmeuse and a full skirt of the same finish the waist line. The skirt is finished with a band of pale pink velvet and about the hem-shaped crown is drawn a band of blue fox, which terminates in a bow at the front. This is an unusually smart hat, and is appropriate for the debutante of this season.

Fur is an important feature of the autumn costume. To insist that if you possess a stole and muff which are out of date, cut the fur into strips and use them to trim a wrap or gown. This is far better than to allow them to lie in the cedar chest.

The long ends of the girle are knotted at the back, and narrow bands outlining the collar and cuffs.

The skirt is slightly draped and the belt, which is cut in one with the front, crosses over the back and fastens at the left side with a turquois-shell button.

A stunning suit of rust-red velours de laine has a vest of striped gray and copper-colored velvet.

Richard's evening wrap of velvet bordered with a wide band of skunk fur is especially noteworthy. Broadly trimmed with velvet, the double collar finishing the neck line is developed of black velvet and falling genuine. A single button, covered with black velvet, is used to fasten the wrap.

Pauline's tailored suits have coats 35 inches in length, many of which are belted, while others are of the open type with gold buttons. The skirts have slightly trimmed flares, and frequently three-piece costumes, and the high collar is trimmed a few inches over newly introduced.

Some of the Parisian skirts are fuller and the sleeves of transparent materials are used. Some with ruffled sleeves and the average length of the suit coats is 35 inches. The sleeves are fitted and the coat is three-quarters length, with

A wide band of loutre fur at the bottom and narrow bands outlining the collar and cuffs.

The skirt is slightly draped and the belt, which is cut in one with the front, crosses over the back and fastens at the left side with a turquois-shell button.

The coats in Chereff's suits are 35 inches long, with pleated backs, blouses and long under.

Chereff's suit coats are of three-quarter length and include draped effects and ruffles. The de mousseline, velvet and olive green are also favored. The very latest innovation is the four-curved collar of chiffon matching in color

CONCERNING HEALTH and BEAUTY

By MRS. HENRY SYMES

REDUCE YOUR FAT and HARDEN THE MUSCLES

Get a Firm Grip

PERSONS are always a number of persons interested in ways to reduce superfluous fat, and I feel that my task today is to give the methods prescribed must be persistent if he or she hopes to gain results in a reasonable time.

Excessive fat is a disease and, like all diseases, it can be treated better and more quickly in the first stages. I have seen many girls make the mistake that they are getting too stout and that they intend to do something to reduce their weight. They let the many precious days and weeks pass before any attempt is made, and even then they give up in despair if a decrease is not seen in a day or so.

Doing and exercising are the defects to follow, and as they continue they are within the reach of all.

First of all, let us consider the foods which should be avoided. All foods which tend to produce fat must be avoided. These include wheat, rye, animal, rice, potatoes, eggs, pork, veal, sea foods, candy, ice cream, sweetened milk, white bread, etc. It is safe for the stout person to eat moderately, but not to eat green vegetables, salads, fruits and dry bread. The appetite must be controlled as much as possible. Never eat between meals. The person who weighs too much is usually guilty of doing all the things she should not do, and for this reason it is hard for her to curtail at first, but by degrees it will be easier for her to abstain and cling to the things which are better for her.

Now for the exercises which will help to harden the muscles and burn off the excessive fat.

By starting any exercise all tight strings should be removed, the stomach unventilated and the mind ready to do intelligent things in the direction of the goal.

Exercise can be performed with a chair (that which will develop a beautiful arm and at the same time strengthen the muscles of the abdomen) and so on if you will try. Place a chair in a recumbent position, knee below the feet, as shown in the illustration, and step the back legs of the chair near the bottom. Without raising these legs from the ground bring the base of the chair up from the ground. Lower it again and then repeat.

If your figure is spoiled by having flabby thighs and legs, start right away to make the muscles of these parts firm and solid. Sit erect on a small stool or box, and maintain an erect position. It is important in all exercises that the head be held in an erect position. It is therefore necessary to have it poised properly if one is to have proper balance.

Hold the feet together and extend the toes so that the muscles of the legs are tight. Now raise the legs until they are at right angle to the body. Having assumed this position, raise the body from the table until it is supported by the hands. This is one of the most efficacious exercises for the thighs. Hold position long enough to prove to yourself that you are master of the situation.

How many girls and women can jump from a height in a graceful manner and without injuring themselves? I am sure that not many of you can do so now, but after practicing the directions I am about to give you will be able to jump from an unbelievable distance. This exercise will not only tone up and assist, but it will reduce the weight generally.

You can use an ordinary ladder. It is preferable to begin at the bottom of the ladder and work your way up to a spread a quilt, or something equally soft, before the ladder, so that the force of your weight will be somewhat broken. While jumping the body should be held well forward, and through you will slight on your toes, the heels should be rather close to the ground, so that there will be a spring and the weight will be directed.

Practice these exercises with an earnest and sincere desire to improve the figure. To have firm muscles is necessary that good blood pass through them, and to have good blood it is necessary to have proper circulation. Daily exercise will give both.

Raise the Chair Slowly

Enough to stimulate the scalp, but do not have them so stiff that they irritate the scalp. The proper stiffness of a brush depends upon the coarseness of the scalp.

In order to have healthy and beautiful hair the brush should be frequently washed. Nothing is better for cleaning brushes than ammonia. Put a teaspoonful of it into a quart of water, wash the brush in the solution, keeping the back of the brush out of the water. Then rinse the bristles in fresh water and dry with the bristles down.

To Develop the Arms

Kindly give me an exercise to develop the arms. I have a double chin and I take an erect position, body right, head straight, and I stand upright, the feet as far as possible. Now bend the arms at the elbows and bring the hands turned downward at the wrist drop and hold the thumbs against the shoulders. Beyond the arms again and shoulders will be developed and the circulation of the upper part of the body stimulated.

Skin Food for the Hands

You will please give me the recipe for a cream for the hands. I am very dry and my hands are cracked. I have the recipe for a splendid skin food for your hands.

Smart Frills And Furbelows

By Josephine Jordan

Vanity Fitted Hand Bag

HERE is no time in the year when frills and furbelows are more luring to the feminine persuasion than in the fall. This year they are especially attractive, and lucky is the feminine shopper who can resist their fascinations.

This season's dainty frills for the neck are perhaps the loveliest things that fashions have ever approved of. They are myriad in number, and so individually charming that no fall wardrobe will be without at least two or three of them. They are in all styles, from the simplest little tailored stocks to the most elaborate beaded gimpes.

Some of the latest neckwear combine collar, vest, and jabot, and quite transfigure a simple costume. This season, more than ever before, the little details of a suit are characteristic of its style. The simplicity of the prevailing styles admits of much garniture as to frills. And they are all delightfully feminine. They give a soft fullness to the costume that is invariably becoming. These combinations of trimmings are particularly suitable for fall, since they have a wonderfully freshening up effect on the late spring suit that is doing service for early fall wear.

One of the newest and most attractive novelties of the season is the guimpe. It comes in all styles, from the very practical plain little guimpe that forms the rabe and underpiece of the semi-tailored blouse, to the ultra-dressy models that are suitable foundations for elaborate costumes. Low necks predominate in the guimpes. One very fetching model, which is plain enough for semi-dressy wear, is made of very fine net, which is tucked on either side of the opening in the front. Lovely frills of lace outline the very low neck, and extend into a Medici collar in the back. Its loveliness is the result of the extreme fineness of the lace, which would make any face sweet to look upon.

One of the new uses for the guimpe is as an overblouse. Fashioned of dainty shadow lace, with soft frills, it is worn over a dark silk blouse, to give a touch of distinctness to a plain waist. There is no sleeves. The armholes are in the shape of a wide, flat, ruffled collar, but no longer. It is very frankly a little lace overblouse without any pretensions, aside from decoration. It has an undeniably chic effect, however, and it will be popular with those women who are zealous followers of Daine Fashion in her faintest moods.

Another fancy of fashion are bright little waistcoats. Utterly stripped of masculine lines, they are the most charming little garments imaginable. They are gay or sombre in tone, but always fetching, and always splendid as to buttons. All sorts of rich and beautiful fabrics are used for these waistcoats. Not only silk, brilliant and multicolored, and warm, but also cloth, but also short and long silky-napped plushes, with collars that may be opened when indoors and closed in a cozy, comfortable manner when out of doors. At least an underjacket can be worn by the most fastidious.

One particularly bizarre but handsome effect in a waistcoat was of heavy beaded plush in a raspberry shade. The waistcoat was used with a dull green velvet suit. The outline of the brocade was traced in gold thread and the buttons were handsome balls of gold. The one touch of contrasting color on many of the new fall suits is found in the brilliant little waistcoats. No blast of glory is too violent for the fancy of fashion. They are perhaps the easiest bits of trimming that have been used for many seasons. And yet they are so attractive that few suits will be without them this season.

The little vestettes are also most attractive. They are the vests without a back, which are used on the simplest costumes. One very fetching one was made of white silk with a wide black stripe. A small black satin collar in tuxedo effect outlined the neck opening, and a soft double frill of wide platted chiffon made the entire effect extremely feminine and attractive.

Fichus are the most charming and the most universally becoming neckwear that comes to us from the designers. Many of the newest styles are draped in typical Marie Antoinette fashion, instead of being attached to a collar. Combinations of the fichu and the Medici dress appear in some of the smartest types. On the fichus there is much dainty embroidery. Very often the collar, a long, graceful shape, is embroidered in the daintiest of colors, and the scalloped edge is finished with a frill of soft net. Colored silks are combined with soft frillings to form fichus that are most attractive with a dark costume. An unusual effect was gained by the use of very wide applique lace. The scalloped edge was turned toward the neck. Mitered in the back, the lace fell from the shoulders to the high waist line in a soft graceful line. The outer edge was finished with a frill of soft net. Colored silks were used and the ends were gathered into a lovely lace bow. Very often the finish of the fichu is in a bright color.

It would seem that no fancy neckwear could be without the charming plating, which does so much to soften the straight lines of the tailored suit or garment. It is used everywhere—around collars of all sorts, as one of the most important and interesting fashion developments of the summer. One use of black and white use of the tulle. Most fetching is the white lace tulle over a black satin gown. It entirely transforms the gown. The lace is usually a very handsome shadow or chantilly, and it is, more often than not, of a clinging soft texture. The black tulle tulle over a white satin gown is even more alluring. Tulle is sure to be one of the fads of the season.

Girdles are another of the fall furbelows that will adorn almost every costume. They are of every shape and size and color. White girdles are worn very often with light afternoon dresses. One fetching one is made of white net in a simple folded fashion, with one platted end, which may be placed wherever it looks well on the gown. The black satin girdle, with the sash which is knotted over the hips, seems to be well liked by the designers. It is invariably finished with fringe or tassels or balls. This year meshes seem omnipresent, and only on the strictly tailored suit is the sash omitted. There are a few sashless girdles made of platted ribbon, with a ribbon buckle and a ribbon bow, which is worn directly in the front of the gown, with a slight raling to give the high waisted effect. It is particularly attractive in Germanian red. The true harem note is seen in the single sash end hanging straight at the center front of the dress, and weighted by a handsome adornment or a rich tassel.

Plaid ribbons are extremely popular for use in girdles. Old black effects in very handsome ribbons are a new product of the designer's search for the unusual. There is a novel sash ribbon in rich reds that looks like a glorified "poker" shirt. It decorated a harmonious gown of white crepe de chine, and it was lovely indeed. The new havelock is featured with wide stripes in mingled reds, yellows, and greens on a Delft blue background. No amount of description can do justice to the color harmony of this most brilliant of the new designs. Some of the ribbons are entirely different from anything that has ever been used before.

One of the most popular forms of adjustment of the sash is on the military order. The ribbon is run twice around the waist and knotted tightly on the left hip. A more extreme adjustment of the knot is to place it in the center front or in the center back. The ends fall nearly to the knees when the knot is tied in the front. A fashionable article of most attractive lines is a long piece of black satin, five inches wide, lined with white satin. The ends are turned back and caught with a covered button. It is worn in the Spanish style, knotted once about the waist.

The fall always seems the time for the appreciation of the clever new designs in handbags. Much of the ingenuity of the designers has gone into the fashioning of the fittings, although there are a number of new frames. The cigar case type is perhaps the most conspicuous among the new models. This model, which is perfectly flat when closed, has a roomy interior, and affords a liberal number of compartments, several of which contain the requisite vanity fittings. The extreme novelty of the season is the hand-embroidered more bag. The embroidery is done in small designs, representing scattered floral effects, giving a Dresden appearance. Large silk tassels are conspicuous ornaments on the new hand bag. One model is a very flat bag made of Corona pin grain. It is eight and a half inches deep, and opens at the front in square flat style, disclosing a large mirror in the interior. The additional fittings consist of a leather change purse and a leather card case. Another neat model is the snuff bag. It is made of black satin, and is placed into a covered frame. The interesting feature about the bag is the placing of the low handle at the front of the bag. It is nine inches in length and four inches deep. It is more lined and has an interior compartment lined with white kid and inclosed in a brass frame.

Smart Combination of the Medici and Fichu.

A handsome ten inch bag in brown genuine seal is fitted with most attractive novelties in platted gold—a cozier bottle, a vanity case, and a hairpin case, and the leather card case. On the outside of the bag is a large compartment that can be used for a handkerchief or papers.

Another bag has fittings of silver vanity cases which can be detached from the bag and carried separately if desired.

There are frills and furbelows for every fashionable maid. Everything is chic this year, with the softest and daintiest of feminine alluringness.

"If a young man wishes to see happy, it is not hard for him to have his wish. Choose his wife carefully, then move out into the country, even away from railroads. That is the only way to live simply. You can't do so in the cities. The distractions are too many, conditions will force you to follow the extravagant and the foolish ways of your neighbors.

"Remember: Godliness with contentment is the greatest gain.

"To much meat makes you old before your time.

"Liquors, tea and coffee shorten your days and your happiness.

"Buttermilk prolongs your youth."

By Angus Perkerson

SINCE his marriage in 1863, twenty-one children have been born to John Thomas Hagan. He is seventy-seven and three-quarters years old, and will complete seventy-eight years upon December 28.

"I have found," he says, "that Godliness with contentment is the greatest gain. I have seldom eaten meat, for I hold that fresh as food encourages old age. I never drink coffee or tea, for I believe that buttermilk prolongs youth.

"My rules of life are:

"Don't worry.

"Don't drink.

"Don't smoke.

"Don't eat meat in great quantity."

Of his twenty-one children, eleven are living. They are:

Lee Hagan, president of Hagan-Dodd company, manufacturers; John Hagan, of the same company; Walter Hagan, of Opelika, Ala.; Mrs. Cora Hagan, of Atlanta; Miss Leah Hagan, of Atlanta; Miss Lena Hagan, of Augusta; Miss Mary Hagan, of Atlanta; and Miss Margaret Hagan, of Atlanta.

John Thomas Hagan makes his home with those of his children who live here.

He was married in Charlotte in the midst of the Civil war, to Miss Terris, whose father was from Philadelphia; and in 1868 he made his residence permanently in Atlanta. Eleven years ago his wife died.

CHILDREN HAVE SCATTERED.

At the time of her death, eighteen of their children were living. These children have scattered, and their number has been thinned by death.

Of the eleven who are living, none has greater vigor than John Thomas Hagan, who is 77 3/4 years old, and will be 78 upon December 28.

"I could walk to Stone Mountain and not feel it," he says. "Not so long ago, I walked to and from Kirkwood, daily. I am young in my old age because I have eaten little meat and have drunk no liquors or tea or coffee. I think, too, that buttermilk has helped to prolong my youth.

"Meat causes the arteries to harden; and, as you know, that is the condition that brings on old age. Upon the other hand, a sensible diet without flesh foods keeps the body young and the spirits light and hopeful.

"I have no complaint of how I feel except that I seldom sleep enough. I doubt that I average more than six hours of sleep a night. But when you are old, there is no building-up of the tissues to go on, and you can do with less sleep.

"Another reason why I stay young of money and of foolish amusements is that I never worry. I have learned that worry seldom lightens trouble, and most often is a means of shortening your days and your happiness.

"People need to live simply, to care less for money, to think more of health, and to learn Godliness and contentment.

RULE OF LIFE.

"My rule of life is a passage from the Bible:

"Godliness with contentment is great gain."

"Be content with your lot, whatever it is, though better it is as much as you may, and your life will be happy, no matter under what conditions it is lived. After all, there is little to worry over and much to be happy at.

"The fault is, we think too much of money and of foolish amusements of the old generations. It is much better to live in the sweet, fresh country, where you can occasionally think of God.

"ERRORS OF THE YOUNG.

"Young folks look upon such a life as that, as they would upon existence in a convent or a monastery. But they have been brought up with the wrong notions. They have exaggerated an idea of what living really is as that moving picture had of Christ.

Is the Immigrant Given a Chance?

CHICAGO—Does America give the immigrant a chance? Well, it seems to depend largely on the immigrant. At least, that's what Elvira Nerica says.

Miss Nerica came to this country seven years ago from Russia. Neither she nor any of her family could speak a word of English.

The day Miss Nerica received her diploma from the University of Chicago and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa—the oldest of all college fraternities, which chooses its members for high scholarship.

That means that in seven years this little foreign girl learned the English language, did the eight years' work at high school and university, and did it better than nine-tenths of her fellow students.

And at the same time she earned her own tuition and kept house for her mother and brother.

"Of course, it was hard work," she says. "I had done the grammar school work in Russia, and had studied German and French. When I started to school in Chicago—I was fifteen then—they put me in the third grade. I got greatly discouraged. So after a few days I left the day school and started in the night school. There I took only English. I studied it for five months, and then entered the high school.

"Naturally I hadn't gained a thorough knowledge of English in five months, and my high school work seemed slow, because I had to learn so many words as I went along. But I succeeded in graduating at the end of three years, instead of the usual four.

"In college, too, I was so eager to learn that I did much more work than was required, studying eleven months a year and doing the four years' work in three."

Miss Nerica has accepted a position for next year as German instructor in the Dubuque high school. But that, she says, is only temporary. She has specialized in sociology and looks forward to a career of social service.

"I realize," she says, "that, while it is possible for intelligent and ambitious immigrant boys and girls to do as I have done, there are so many grown immigrants who need help and guidance when they reach America! And I want to help them, especially my fellow-countrymen."

THE LITTLE MISERY

BY ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

ILLUSTRATED BY DON LAVIN, HIS FAMOUS AMERICAN ARTIST. (Copyright, 1913, by Robert W. Chambers.)

THERE was a river-driver beyond the Northwest Carry who was respected neither by moose nor man. Because he was the best river-driver on the West Branch, they let him alone until he struck an Indian with a pick-pole.

The Indian's head was damaged and while he waited for it to heal he selected his revenge. He hunted up the moon-warden and told many lies. Deftly concealed among these lies, however, was a truth that irritated the warden.

The river-driver, whose name was Skeene, answered that the moon-warden glided into camp. But when he dug out a head and hid it behind a slanting Skeene, picked up his rifle, looked obliquely at the moon-warden and his blanket and try-pan, bolted his canoe into his head and walked away to the southward, still sneering.

"I don't know what they said about it in Foxcroft, but Hale, who owned the timber and who thought he owned Skeene, hunted him up and sent him to work on the new cut-off. Doing the affair might blow up in time for Skeene to drive logs again. But Skeene turned lazy and lined the dead water with traps and set-foes, and when Hale remonstrated, he laughed.

Hale threatened him and hinted about moon-wardens and $500 fees, but Skeene thrashed Hale before the whole camp, packed his kit and canoe and paddled serenely across the West Branch.

That really began the trouble, for Hale never forgave him. When Skeene started to guide his son on the upper Portage, Hale heard of it and ran him down. Possibly, if they had let him alone, he might have turned out as tame as a moose-kill—be was only twenty-three—but Hale remembered the Indian and the moon-warden, and one day a man came in with a rifle and an unmarked warrant and a pocket. The man was a moon-warden, and the warrant was for Skeene.

When the news spread that Skeene had shot a warden, he was guided from Portage to Lily-Bay. He landed at Lily-Bay, where a sheriff and posse boarded the "Katahdin" and spent several weeks tramping about the woods. Possibly they expected Skeene to come down to the shore and on the rocks; perhaps they fancied he might paddle across their bows in his sleep. Certainly he did not.

Even after that, if they had given him a chance, he would have surrendered and taken his punishment. A warden saw him building a lean-to on the island that separates the West Branch. The warden went at night, and caught Skeene asleep. Who Skeene did to the warden, he suggested that the warden should provisions and ammunition in his canoe, which lay on the island. The three men complied. Twenty minutes later Skeene, in his canoe, was making for canoe Skeene River.

They notified the sheriff again. People fought shy of Moose River, and the lake beyond, which is called Red Lake. In vain that the warden declared the region safe. Skeene let them alone. The Indian driver, however, stayed away after Skeene had shot a hole in his canoe. Skeene went to Canada for a new one, worked at a hole that came along, and sent money to Kineo store, for his part in the matter. That of course, won him the guides again.

So when home-sickness drove him back to Red Lake he expected to be let alone.

Hale, sliding at the Northwest Carry, heard he had returned and started for Red Lake with the logging half-breed and six men. Two days later they returned, and Hale a bullet in leg above the knee and the half-breed carried a similar gift in his forearm.

This incident bothered the sheriff, usually. He went to Foxcroft, where they said unpleasant things to him; he went back to the Landing and they did fun to him.

The sheriff summoned his posse, boarded the steamer Red-Deer and left Greenville, bound for Moose River. Half a dozen canoes went along. The posse had a bunch of chiefs, although no game was in season.

Off the Grey Gull, an island, the little steambot stopped, the canoes were dropped, the moose embarked. At the mouth of the Moose river two more canoes were waiting; first sat in one, paddling glistening in the pale spring sunshine; in the other sat the Indian boy-driver, nursing the hammer of a rifle.

They went for a mile to the first wing-dam, and there the sheriff who led, and his straggling posse, dismounted and dislodged the setting-pole and set a net of traps and a bullet passed the edge of the wing-dam and a bullet passed the edge of the wing-dam and a bullet passed the edge of the wing-dam.

The amazed official fell overboard, sank, rose, grasped the edge of the canoe and jumped it, turning the pole-paddler into the river. The sheriff hurried and then on a shoal and they crawled up on a rock.

Nobody fired at the wing-dam except Hale. He banged away as fast as he could pump the breach-loader, and Billy Sholto, the Indian, took to the bushes and lay patiently waiting for a mark, putting up eagerness.

"Jim fall to, you darned thief!" shouted Hale, "come out from them stones!"

"I ain't no more thief than you is, Josh Hale!" bawled Skeene. "I shoo the sheriff and his straggling posse and you know I did it—well I did it!"

The Indian, Sebato, fired twice. "If that slyger Sebato don't quit shootin' I'll lose all on 't ye!" Skeene roared at the sound of the shot above the wing-dam, all "G't ye!" to the young, Josh Hale, I tell you.

Hale started to push his canoe into a channel, but he was surrounded and taken his punishment. A warden saw him building a lean-to on the island that separates the West Branch. The warden went at night, and caught Skeene asleep. Who Skeene did to the warden, he suggested that the warden should provisions and ammunition in his canoe, which lay on the island. The three men complied. Twenty minutes later Skeene, in his canoe, was making for canoe Skeene River.

They notified the sheriff again. People fought shy of Moose River, and the lake beyond, which is called Red Lake. In vain that the warden declared the region safe. Skeene let them alone. The Indian driver, however, stayed away after Skeene had shot a hole in his canoe. Skeene went to Canada for a new one, worked at a hole that came along, and sent money to Kineo store, for his part in the matter. That of course, won him the guides again.

Skeene's pale face appeared above the dam, but nobody shot at him.

"You drove me to it," said Skeene. He spoke huskily.

"Come down 'n' that wing-dam," commanded Hale.

"Not for you, Josh Hale," replied Skeene. "You got for any man ye? An' I won't be took, neither, I'm goin' away to live quiet if they let me."

He crouched and watched them as they pushed their canoes into the main channel. The sheriff and his posse were waiting for him. A slender fillet of blood hung in the water, floating like a red string.

They gave Skeene a little peace for two months. Week after week a string of canoes passed the swift water, and the first and second wing-dams, disembarking a file of riflemen.

One day a paddle started the deer at sunrise among the Hilly-pads. One of the boys for a moment standing in the stern of his canoe. The canoe tilted and the deer fell into the water, floating like a red string.

The Little Misery is a strange stretch of water and dead-fall, through which the water flows, and there, in the space of cuts and channels, of "logans" and quick water, of swamp, sedge and spruce, and rain, and a little above and deadwood, they stood no chance.

And so they hunted Skeene at twilight, at dusk of morning, at high noon, at the black night of the full moon. The Northwest Carry, from West Branch to Sebecook, from Portage to Lily-Bay, and a hundred miles of lake and stream, up and down, and down, and down, they gave up the chase.

That evening Skeene stood on a wind-fall at the depth of the Little Misery and watched three canoes discharge their arrows, and a glide into Moose River. The next morning he started a lean-to on the edge of the island, and a quick water, of swamp, sedge and spruce, and rain, and a little above and deadwood, they stood no chance.

At noon the shoes of axe-stroked died away and the but was thatched with green moss. A yearling, lay across a log, on the ridge, and a hawk, he had snatched his hunter.

The days that followed, Skeene learned to talk to himself. When he did this he forgot that he had been there. He was silent and more silent the woods grew as the new moon rose in the evening sky. At his first quarter the silence deepened, at his half the stillness was intense. Then one black night the Full Moon of September flashed in the sky, and a gigantic black shadow waded out into the lake and a roar shook the hills.

The first bull-moose had bellowed, and the rutting season had begun. The deer barked from the edge, the shore, the stream were alive; the moat-birds cried from every cedar; the fox howled and mated in the second growth.

Now there is a season for all things. "Each after its kind," says the quaint book.

Each after its kind, says the quaint book. The sky crimsoned the shore the red beam of the Carry lamp signalled him and his blood flamed the answer in his face. And, as he strode up to the house, he saw the woman on the shore looking out into the night across the spectral lake. It was Lois, servant of South Carry. He had danced with her two years ago at Foxcroft Landing, and sent her six o'peltis a month before he had come South.

Skeene thrashed Hale before the whole camp, picked his kit and paddled away.

She was the girl he had come to see. It is possible she expected him. The restlessness of September had drawn her to the lake and something had led him to her.

And so, together, they glided away on a froil of silver water, in a semi-circle over the forest of his strange canoe, drained by strange streams, stirred by strange winds.

Skeene saved porcupine quills in a semi-circle over the forest of his strange canoe, drained by strange streams, stirred by strange winds. Skeene saved porcupine quills in a semi-circle over the forest of his strange canoe, drained by strange streams, stirred by strange winds.

When the public-spirited citizens of Foxcroft offered $500 reward for the capture of Skeene, Placide L'Hommedieu scratched his greasy chin, licked his lips, and went out to buy cartridges. The crowd L'Hommedieu a week later passed.

"WHAT IS WRONG WITH THE CHURCH?" By Bishop Warren A. Candler

REVEREND DR. DAVID JAMES RUSSELL is pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church in New York City. He is a vigorous Westerner, and a man who commands and deserves the large hearing which he gets. Recently he chose to discuss the question which stands at the head of this paper, and he has done so with a vigor and a force of argument which has won him the attention of the church world.

The New York Times reported in part what he said, and it gives very wholesome reading. As it makes very interesting reading, it is as follows:

"There is something wrong with the Church, for it is a mathematical fact that many Churches have reported a falling off in attendance, and the acquisition of new members by confession is not increasing as it should.

"There is something wrong with the Church, but there is nothing wrong with Christ. There is something wrong with the Church, but there is nothing wrong with Christ. There is something wrong with the Church, but there is nothing wrong with Christ.

"There is something wrong with the Church, but there is nothing wrong with Christ. There is something wrong with the Church, but there is nothing wrong with Christ. There is something wrong with the Church, but there is nothing wrong with Christ.

"There is something wrong with the Church, but there is nothing wrong with Christ. There is something wrong with the Church, but there is nothing wrong with Christ. There is something wrong with the Church, but there is nothing wrong with Christ.

There is sound sense in these utterances. If there is anything wrong with the Church, it is probable that the pastor has some-thing to say about it. It is certain that we have had in some parts a type of preaching which would lead to lower the vitality of those who heard them. Godliness prevails in his congregation as surely shines in his life. Truly, as Dr. Russell says, there is nothing wrong with Christ and nothing wrong with His Church. The truth once for all delivered to the world, and never to be taken back, is the accomplishment of spiritual ends, and men were never more hungry for the truth than they are now.

WASHINGTON MAY OWN ITS TROLLEY LINES

BY GILSON GARDNER. WASHINGTON, — The national capital has received its first push in the direction of municipally-owned street railways. Representative Robert Crosser, of Ohio, has just introduced into the house of representatives a bill which would place the traction companies of Washington under public ownership.

FORSAKEN IS THE TURKEY TROT

TURKEY-TROTTING is spoken of frequently and danced rarely. It is obsolescent, as well as almost extinct.

At East Lake, at the Capitol City club, and at the Piedmont Driving club, new dances have supplanted the waltzes and two-steps of long ago.

But it is not the turkey-trotting that is danced at these clubs; it is the one-step, which is akin to the turkey-trot in one way and far different from it in every other.

Turkey-trotting was a shuffle in which the shoulders were swung from side to side, and the whole movement was given an awkward and unseemly air.

In the one-step, the shoulders are held straight, and the dance consists merely in "one steps" taken forward or backward or in turning.

It is true enough that the turkey-trot also was a simple "one-step," and that partly because of this simplicity, it became popular. But the movement of the shoulders made it different from the mere "one-step" now danced at all the clubs.

TROTTING IS FORSAKEN. Turkey-trotting has been forsaken as utterly as those quaint dances of long ago, known as two-steps and waltzes.

Possibly, the one-step soon will be neglected, or the tendency is toward Spanish figures, which raise the "one-step" to the importance of the tango, and is making the tango itself more and more elaborate and graceful.

Here and elsewhere, dancers are beginning to learn the beautiful Spanish figures, and to make their dancing a nearer approach to art. The critic who looks upon the new dances as crude and unseemly is not familiar with the figures of the dance or the tendency of the dance.

The turkey-trot was objectionable enough for its mere awkwardness; and the "one-step," as it is commonly danced, shows but few graceful figures. Yet, this dance permits of more than 100 variations, all of which either have grace or a healthy vigor.

In assuming the position for the "one-step," the dancers should hold their left arms straight out, and their right arms three inches apart. All the shoulders should be on the balls of the feet.

usually they take four steps forward or backward, and then turn. Upon the turns, they usually "dip"—that is, the man bends backward upon his right foot, and the lady forward upon her right foot.

INDIVIDUAL FIGURES. But the one-step and the tango are dances in which everyone may choose his own figures (and he usually does) and dance them in his individual way.

In waltzing and two-stepping there were precise rules to follow; but the most interesting part of the new dances, is the originality of which they permit.

This little figure is as much a part of Spanish dancing as the castanets and La Paloma. It furnishes diversity and grace.

Another Spanish figure is a backward and forward movement. The man first steps backward upon his left foot; the lady steps forward upon her right foot; next, the man steps forward upon his left foot, she steps backward upon her right foot; both bend or "dip," as you choose to call it, and resume the simple figure of the one-step.

ANOTHER FIGURE. Still another figure, much worn, is when both dancers take four steps forward, each facing the same way, "dip" and turn; then take four steps in the opposite direction, "dip" once more; and continue the simple "one-step."

The Castle walk is a simple figure, introduced by Vernon Castle, the great dancer, and easy for no one but himself. It is done entirely with the ankles, and has the appearance of two dancers walking to the time of music. But it is none so simple as it looks.

The man turns his toes outward, then brings them in, and walks all the while upon the balls of his feet. He goes forward, for the most part, and the lady backward. After they have gone forward for eight steps, the lady usually skips for eight steps, then the walk is resumed.

But, like all other figures of the new dances, it is done differently by each dancer. Really detailed directions for any of the new figures are unnecessary, for the new dances are, above all, danced with individuality. The popularity of these dances is undoubtedly. At the Atlanta Athletic Club's country club at East Lake, and Saturday nights and the club has had some to enter in these two events. At the Piedmont Driving club and at the Capitol City club, the new dances have met with equal popularity.

It is believed that dancing is to increase rather than wane in interest. This belief is based upon the tendency of the new dances to gain new figures and to become more and more an expression of music.

One authority puts it that they are to become more fanciful and fantastic. But the new figures which are being added are not so much fantastic as sensibly graceful and varied.

In alternation with the one-step is the "heavenly waltz." This, however, is not a variation of the "one-step." Upon the other hand, it consists in three distinct steps, and many pretty figures. The man glides forward upon the left foot, as the first step, advances the right foot as the second step, and points the toe of that foot as the third step.

Or, if this dance seems too much of a feat, one can simply keep time to the slow waltz music, his feet flat upon the floor. His figures consisting merely in occasional turns.

As one authority says, the waltzes that is, the new waltzes—together with their variations, are becoming almost as popular as the tango and is intended to produce as great a variety of gliding and walking steps as the music will permit.

As for the turkey-trot, it is as forgotten as periwigs and hooped skirts.

Japan's victory over Russia concentrated Westerns' diplomatic thought upon Tokio with still greater intensity. Japan's position in regard to China was now firmly established; she took the lead, and no question could be settled without reference to Japan.

Because of the new role played by Japan the Powers were unable to have a free hand with China. For they realized that now nothing affecting China could be practically carried out except in co-operation with Japan.

This advantage which Japanese diplomacy possessed over all others in regard to China is not due to any overweening attitude or arrogant assumption on her part, but simply to the impression made upon the west by Japan's prowess in war and by her naturally convenient geographical position as well as her kinship with China in blood and writing.

Great Britain is the greatest sea power on the earth, and the army of Japan is admitted to be invulnerable. This combination of the greatest naval power with a great military power like Japan forces an attention which the world has never before had.

Up to this time Japan was a mere observer; thereafter she became an active participant. In all questions affecting the future of China and the Far East, nay, after her defeat of Russia, she has so far adjusted itself in the principle of equal interests and opportunities. Our foreign office has as a rule either overlooked or disregarded public opinion. In most countries the cooperation of public opinion and diplomatic policy is thought to be most conducive to the best interests of the State, but in Japan diplomats are a class apart, not new by any means. The Powers have been facing it ever since the Manchu dynasty began to decline; for they naturally expected disintegration and probably a share of the spoils.

Back in the days when China first began to attract attention as a sphere for trouble and exploitation Japan was not in a position to take a leading part in Western councils regarding the decaying empire; she was too busy getting her house in order at home to devote any time to outside matters. Not until after the Sino-Japanese conflict did the Japanese foreign office seriously face the Chinese question and begin to study intelligently the interests of the Powers.

port. But the dances to which all now take most kindly are what might be termed "walking steps." The tendency without doubt is toward the more elaborate, graceful figures. But not a great many of these figures are yet to be seen here.

Urie Davis, who is quoted upon the subject as dancing almost as much as Vernon Castle himself, says that 90 per cent of the dancers in this country are not yet acquainted with the new figures of the new dances, but that within the next two seasons these steps will have become familiar.

This will not come about through the efforts of dancing teachers, but through the desire on the part of the dancers for figures which are more graceful and more expressive of the spirit of music.

One recent dance is known as the "valse rosada." Another which will make its appearance this winter is the "tiger." It is entirely different from any dance now in vogue, and is intended to produce as great a variety of gliding and walking steps as the music will permit.

TALK OF WAR WITH JAPAN IS ALL MOONSHINE

THE attempt to raise a further problem by talk of war with America, says Count Okuma, the former prime minister of Japan, in the New York Sun, is all moonshine, a mere supposition based on the vagaries of suspicious imaginations, and the Philippine question which some endeavor to create is too absurd for serious consideration. Consequently the only important difficulty now coming above the diplomatic horizon is the integrity of China, a subject that demands the best and most constant attention of Japan.

In fact, one of the most critical diplomatic problems now facing Japan is the question of the integrity of China. The Korean problem, which hangs fire so long, menacing the peace of the Far East, at last solved itself in annexation. The Manchurian difficulty, which has so long been the main point of dispute between Japan and China, Japan came to be regarded by the West as the center of Occidental diplomatic consideration and the subject of a new problem to be reckoned with in the future of China.

ALICE DAVIS, Missionary, Whom the Police Accuse of Her Husband's Murder

BY W. H. ALBURN.
(Staff Special.)

CHICAGO.—Alice Davis Sing, white wife of murdered Charlie Sing, entered a stockyards morgue in the custody of detectives. It was the crucial moment in the most remarkable Chinese murder case since the killing of Elsie Sigel with which it is strangely connected.

Mrs. Sing started as she saw the body of her slain husband lying before her, with a picture of the Annunciation at his head and a Bible at his feet. Then she sank to her knees, and kissed the cold lips. Christian training and civilization fell away, and she turned all oriental. "Charlie," she whispered, slipping into pidgin English, "you no dead, Charlie—tell me you no dead!"

The "third degree" began. The floor of morning changed to a twentieth century inquisition. The detectives raised her and pointed accusing fingers.

"You killed him, didn't you?"

"You saw him killed?"

"You know who did it?"

"You were there weren't you?"

"Oh, no way. I did not know anything. I do not know he dead. Please go away from me."

For nine hours the pitiless probing of her soul went on, but her acquired oriental calm stood the ordeal. Then they led her to jail and charged her with the murder of her husband.

It was a strange ending for pretty Alice Davis who started as a Christian missionary among the Chinese of Kansas City.

When the Elsie Sigel murder case was engrossing national attention and the diagnet was out for Leon Ling, her slayer, Alice volunteered to search the Kansas City Chinatown as a detective. She penetrated the secret places of that Chinatown—and never returned.

After a while she appeared in Chicago as the wife of Charlie Sing, a prosperous restaurateur, and lived with him in a quaint oriental cottage on Archer avenue.

A few nights ago Josie Modelski, maid at the Sing home, was awakened by a faint tapping on her door and a feeble voice calling "Josie! Josie!"

She opened the door and stood Mrs. Sing, in night attire. The woman looked wild, then fell to the floor. In the darkened hallway the maid saw signs of violence. In the parlor she stumbled over Sing, dying, his throat slit with a dagger.

Police, drawn by her shrieks, ran up and found the body in the floor.

They searched, and found only the unconscious Mrs. Sing—and blood-stained footprints and finger marks all over the house, revealing a terrible struggle. Some of the footprints, they say, showed a man's shoe, the others bore traces of bare feet.

Now the police are scouring the country for "George Der Nora," a Chinese whose real name is Der Yuen. He is said to have been friendly with Mrs. Sing, and there are rumors that Sing was jealous.

In Nora's quarters was found a "black book" that still further completes the case. It bears the weird zodiac symbol of the Hip Sing Tong, and appears to be a directory of crime, covering a dozen cities. Owing to the this "black book" and other features of the case, A. Caminetti, federal commissioner of immigration, has ordered an investigation of national scope to drag forth the secrets of Chinese "underground railways," white slave traffic and opium smuggling.

Prince Arthur's Next Title

LONDON.—Prince Arthur, of Connaught, will not have a long stay in York after his marriage. The Royal Greys are to return to Edinburgh in the spring, where the new cavalry barracks there will be completed. This will be a great disappointment to York, whose inhabitants would greatly like the prince to stay longer in their neighborhood. The house which has been taken for the prince and the duchess of York is only held for six months.

There is some speculation as to what title or further dignity will be conferred on Prince Arthur on his marriage, and the suggestion is that he will be made a peer. He is a Knight of the Garter, and so can receive no higher honor that way.

There is, however, no reason why he should receive a further dignity. In due time he will become the duke of Connaught, and I think he will desire no better title. He might, however, have a seat in the house of lords, where he could join his father on the cross benches.

Fatal Recklessness

PARIS.—A cafe in an industrial quarter in Paris was completely shattered by an explosion of gas, two people being killed outright and about twenty injured. At the time of the explosion the cafe was well filled with customers. A strong smell of gas was noticed and a waiter was seen to light a candle to take a lighted candle with him to find the escape.

IN the upper left hand corner of this page are three of the Sacred Harp singers who met in Atlanta recently for a session of song. They deplore all music that is ragtime, and urge the singing of the old songs, songs that have tender associations and bring to mind the sweetest things of life.

Beneath them, is Mr. Fred E. Farnsworth, general manager for the American Bankers' association. Upon a recent visit here as guest of Atlanta bankers he gave it as his belief that prosperity lies ahead. "While I have not been through the south," said Mr. Farnsworth, "I had opportunity to talk to leading southern bankers, and I have heard from them the most reassuring reports. There is a feeling among them of conservatism, but each one looks for an improvement in business. There are no signs of hard times, and there need be no fear of bad conditions in any part of the United States. Improvement is sure to come and is coming. I myself look for a prosperous year."

IN the upper right hand corner are students of one of Atlanta's excellent schools for girls. They are exploring the fact that another scholastic year has been begun. You can see how downcast they are.

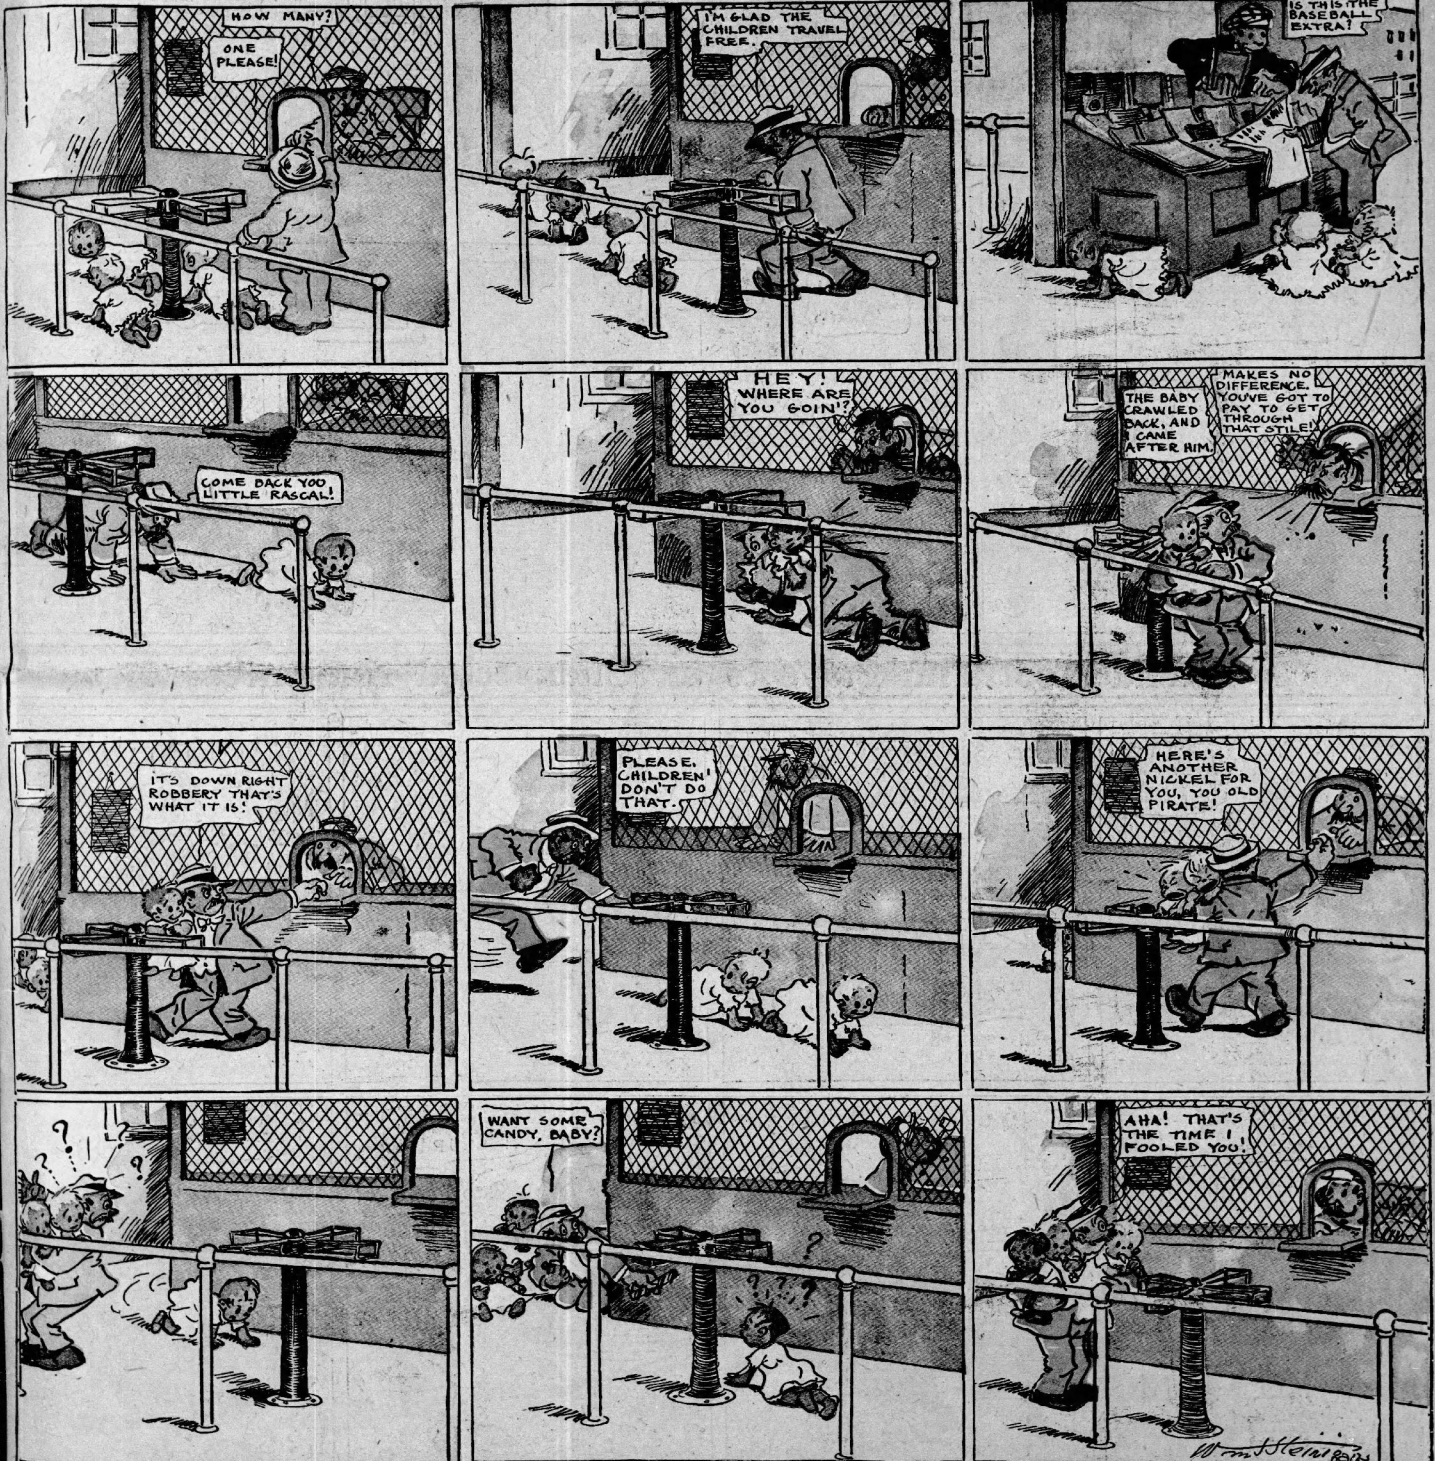

Another scholastic activity is shown in the group picture of young men engaged in one of the most popular studies of the college curriculum. These are members of the Tech squad, which gives such fine—and how could it be otherwise? What students' task ever held such zest, such contest of muscle, of brain, hard knocks and smale under them, as the daily football scrimmages? Truly, the study of football is no unworthy study.

Sollicitor Hugh Dancy is shown as he confers himself, to the occupation of an epicure. He is eating Georgia barbecue, and he is one of the opinion that neither learned books nor dash out-of-door games are a greater pleasure.
